High War Taxes Lose in Senate.

Maximum Levy of 80 Per Cent on Profits Given First Test Vote.

Followers of La Follette Concede They are in the Minority.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Voting began today in the Senate's contest over war profits taxation in the revenue bill and in the initial clash the so-called radicals met decisive defeat. The Senate rejected, 62 to 17, the amendment of Senator Johnson of California, leader of the high-tax group, for a maximum levy of 80 per cent. of this year's war profits, estimated between three and four billion dollars, instead of $1,268,000,000 provided in the bill.

Senator La Follette promptly entered the fray with an amendment proposing a total war-profits tax of [illegible] per cent. He made a vigorous three-hours' speech in its support, but did not conclude, and the Senate recessed until Monday, prepared to work through the holiday upon the Wisconsin Senator's amendments and his others for levies ranging down to 52 per cent.

Both sides tonight claimed victory as a result of the first test vote today, which was preceded by spirited speeches by leaders, including Senators Johnson and La Follette for the high-tax group, and Lodge, Simmons and Penrose of their opponents. The so-called conservatives were confident the La Follette amendments and others proposing higher war profits taxation all will be rejected.

Although determined to continue the fight next week for higher rates, many of the radical group tonight privately conceded defeat. A few thought it possible they could carry an amendment for a flat tax of 40 to 50 per cent., but others admitted the committee provisions probably would stand.

Disappointment at the small vote for Senator Johnson's 80 per cent. amendment was privately expressed by the high-tax leaders and some believed that their maximum strength would not go above 35 or 40, even for the minimum increase provisions pending.

JOHNSON OPENS FIGHT.

Senator Johnson opened the fight with an impassioned plea for increasing tax levies on "swollen fortunes." He advocated taking the largest percentage possible of war profits, leaving normal peace-time profits untouched. If not taxed this year, the California Senator said, millions would go untaxed.

"We do not hesitate to break hearts, to break bodies," he said, "but we hesitate to take profits—made out of our blood and bone."

Senator La Follette said at least $2,000,000,000 of distinctive war profits should be taken by the government.

Both Senators declared that the Finance Committee leaders, in bringing in their compromise amendments to add $500,000,000 to the war-profits section, had been driven and forced by sentiment in the Senate and throughout the country for higher taxation. Chairman Simmons and Senators Lodge and Penrose made spirited explanatory replies to the effect that the committee had not changed its provisions for war-profits taxation, but had acceded to the demand for increases by providing for further taxation of ordinary excess, including peace periods profits.

JOHNSON OPENS.

Opening his speech in support of his amendment, Senator Johnson recalled how, after two months' con-

Rome's Conditions Agreed Upon.

Entente Stands Behind Her for Payment to the Serbs and Belgium.

Report that Berlin will Send Her Terms to America Through Vatican.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 1.—It was authoritatively stated today for the first time, in the highest Italian quarters that "Italy will not consent to any peace conference which does not accept as a condition sine qua non the re-establishment of the Polish nationality in all its integrity; the complete freedom of and fullest indemnification of Belgium; the evacuation of Serbia, with the cession to Serbia of her two stolen provinces, Bosnia and Herzegovina; the creation of an independent Albania; the present and absolute freedom of Montenegro; the evacuation of Rumania together with the cession to her of Transylvania; the expulsion of the Turks from Europe; and the restitution to Italy of the provinces of Italia Irredenta on its northern frontier and along the eastern coast of the Adriatic."

It was asserted that the conditions had been agreed upon by all the Entente powers.

"If, therefore, such peace terms as Germany is reported to have forwarded to America, via the Vatican, and which are said to be in the possession of Mgr. Bonzano for presentation to the American officials exist in fact," said a diplomat tonight, "there can be no doubt that they will meet the same fate as the Pope's proposals, except there would be no ceremony attending the demise."

POPE'S SECOND PLAN.

That Pope Benedict has prepared the outline of a second peace plan which will be presented to the Allies in the near future is the substance of the report that has been received by the Italian Embassy.

The report, it is declared, does not outline the details of the second proposal, but there are said to be indications that the next step from the Vatican may be changed by the attitude of Germany.

While there are no official reports here indicating that the Kaiser is preparing to reply to the Pope's original message, well-informed diplomats are inclined to believe that the Berlin Foreign Office is preparing a statement on Germany's intentions. If this belief is verified it is assumed that Pope Benedict will hold up his second communication until the Kaiser has made his statement.

In the event that the Kaiser indicates that he is willing to announce a detailed plan for peace discussions it is assumed that the Pope will attempt to use the announcement as a lever on the Allies.

The report from Rome indicates in a general way that the Pope is preparing a statement concerning territorial settlements that might be approved by the Allies. The outline of the contents of the second proposal indicates that the Vatican has reason for believing that an arrangement might be consummated for the future of Alsace-Lorraine which would be acceptable to France. The details are unknown.

TERMS YET UNKNOWN.

While it is impossible to forecast the precise nature of the changes of government which the President would require as an evidence of the determination of the German people to abolish military domination, officials have indicated that any assurance that the ministers must be responsible to the Reichstag rather than the Emperor would be accepted as an evidence of popular government.

Rumors of German peace terms still persist here, and tonight the rumor is that Mgr. Bonzano, the Papal Legate, had been entrusted with Germany's peace terms for presentation, on the proper occasion, to the American government. The rumor could not be verified in any quarter, and although it has spread in diplomatic circles, it is known that the Vatican's representative has no diplomatic standing and that he probably would seek a secret audience with President Wilson for the prosecution of any further peace efforts by Pope Benedict.

ALLEGED GERMAN TERMS.

The rumor that is current details some of Germany's alleged peace terms that have been published abroad to be: evacuation by Germany of Belgium, with some reservations concerning the garrisoning of Antwerp with German troops; evacuation of Serbia, without, however, requiring Austria to cede Bosnia-Herzegovina; no surrender of

NORTHWEST FLOUR DROPS FORTY CENTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Sept. 1.—Flour in Northwest markets will drop 40 cents a barrel next Tuesday, as the result of two days of deliberation by representative Pacific Coast millers, ending here tonight. This will bring the price to $11.20 for old-crop patent flour. As soon as the government price of $2.20 a bushel, Chicago base, for wheat takes practical effect, there will be a further and more considerable drop in flour, the millers said.

OKLAHOMANS WANT GORE TO GET OUT.

OBSTRUCTIONIST SENATOR CONDEMNED BY STATE PRESS.

Twenty Telegrams from Various Parts of State Demand Resignation—Attitude on Draft Asserted to be Responsible for Recent Uprising.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 1.—A survey of more than 200 papers of Oklahoma, large dailies and small country weeklies, discloses approximately 75 per cent. of the voters of this State, repudiate the anti-administration and obstructional stand taken by Thomas P. Gore, the blind Senator from Oklahoma, now serving his second term. This comment was brought out during the past week by the sending of more than twenty telegrams from various parts of the State, demanding the resignation of the junior Senator.

"Fight or get out" is the sentiment that has been conveyed. Of 225 Oklahoma papers examined by the Daily Oklahoman, 112 are openly criticising the Senator, 108 either carry no editorials, or avoid discussion of the subject and only five make an effort to apologize for his course. None of them is supporting him.

Many of his staunchest supporters, both in the political and newspaper arena, have joined the ranks of his critics, the survey discloses.

The charge is made in one paper that Senator Gore's attitude on the selective draft, which he opposed, was directly responsible for the uprisings among tenant farmers and the more or less ignorant working classes, early in August.

War Losses.

ELEVEN IN EACH THOUSAND PERISH.

PROPORTION OF CASUALTIES ON WESTERN FRONT.

Highest Percentage of Deaths on French Side was Recorded at Marne and Charleroi, When Loss was More than Five Per Cent. of Mobilized Strength.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 1.—The Committee on Public Information announced today that it has obtained from official sources the most nearly accurate figures possible on the proportion of fatalities in relation to casualties on the western front. These figures, taken when the casualties were greater in proportion to mobilized strength and combined with the highest proportion of deaths, show losses due to deaths from wounds and killed in action to be approximately 11 in every 1000, of mobilized strength.

According to the figures presented by the French high commissioner in his letter to the Secretary of War, the high-water mark of casualties in the French army was reached early in the war at the battles of Charleroi and the Marne. The casualties in that period were 5.41 per cent. of the mobilized strength, or 541 men in every 10,000 with the colors.

Military experts in this country agree that the killed in action and died of wounds have never at any time in this war exceeded 20 per cent. of the total casualties. This gives a figure of 108.2 fatalities from these causes in every 10,000 mobilized strength, or practically 11 men killed in action or died of wounds for every 1000 men with colors.

Banned in Illinois by Governor.

Peace-at-any-price Pests are Kicked Out of Hall by Chicago Police.

No Place to go, Money Scarce, may be Quarantined for Infectious Disease.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 1.—This thing of being a peace-at-any-pricer in a country that has its teeth firmly set in the war game, is not what it is cracked up to be.

Witness the sorry plight of various long-haired men and short-haired women who journeyed from the East in a special train to enlighten the benighted West as to why it is all wrong, all wrong, being sassy or rude to the dear Kaiser.

Came also the pacifists who had been kicked from panel to post in the untorn Northwest—Minneapolis and Wisconsin. The survivors of this outfit were under the generalship of Louis P. Lochner, who gained undying fame as a member of the Ford joy ride to Europe. The eastern members of the People's Council of America for Democracy and Peace, met up here with the pilgrims from the uncouth Northwest and now the entire party is in the plight of one who is all dressed up with no place to go. Here is what happened to them today:

Driven from a hall on the West Side and forbidden to hold any meetings in the State of Illinois. This on the direct and square-jawed order of Gov. Lowden, and thoroughly enforced by a few very wide and thick policemen.

CITY COUNCIL TO ACT.

Chicago City Council called a special meeting for Tuesday to put an effectual clamp on any meetings, soap box or otherwise, in Chicago.

The Illinois State Council of Defense, Chicago Association of Commerce, National Security League and many other influential bodies co-operated with Gov. Lowden and other officials in suppressing anything that will give aid and comfort to the enemy.

The Chicago police conveyed the earnest desire of the patriotic citizens of Chicago and Illinois that the peace-at-any-pricers, who have been booted out of Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota, get out of the State and stay out.

Health authorities of the city and State begin an investigation of reports that a number of the delegates to the pacifist meeting are afflicted with infectious diseases.

Peace-at-any-pricers abandon plan to charter a steamer and hold their meeting out in Lake Michigan. They feared some one would scuttle the ship.

Chicago heartily concurs in this decision, as it has to drink Lake Michigan water.

So, taking the situation by and large, the delegates are having a fierce experience in the uncultured and rowdy West. They are now considering an application to return to the East, charter a steamer and hold their meetings somewhere on the Atlantic ocean, within the three-mile limit, so that it could be said the meeting was held in the United States.

The trifling detail of securing a steamer, permits to sail out of any port, or such passports as are required in war times, were passed over with an impatient wave of the hand.

MAY GO TO BERLIN.

As affairs shape up late tonight, it appears that the only haven open to them is in Berlin or Potsdam. Two or three days ago the Mayor of Milwaukee said they could meet in his city, and be assured of ample police protection. Evidently he saw a great, white light, for Gov. Phillip announced last night that he "had inside information" to the effect that the pacifists would not meet in Milwaukee. They had counted heavily upon Wisconsin as a safe haven, due to the attitude of Senator La Follette, but when they arrived in that State, they found a majority of the citizens are not with La Follette.

The delegates were bitterly disappointed when the police of Chicago treated them as a bunch of slightly demented persons and refused to arrest any of them or permit them to become "martyrs" to the cause. Instead, they handled them as they would have treated the inmates of a sanatorium out for an airing, permitted them to scream and froth and wave their arms, but at the same time made it clear that they could not spill any hot air in Chicago, which has troubles of its own, without any importations. Take it from the delegates, however, the Governors of Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota are doomed to oblivion. The peace-at-any-pricers will see to that at the next election.

Meanwhile, the pacifists have no

SAN FRANCISCO POLICE FINALLY CLUB STRIKERS.

Rising Civic Indignation at Lawlessness Forces Mayor Rolph's Hand.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 1.—For the first time since the street car strike started policemen used their clubs this afternoon to suppress rioting. A crowd of more than 400 employees of the Union Iron Works had gathered about the car barns on Utah street and had broken into the property rooms of the railroad company when the police arrived. The strikers put up a feeble resistance, but after a few of them had felt the weight of a policeman's club, they dispersed.

Tonight the strikers at mass meeting demanded the recall of Mayor Rolph "because he has permitted honest men to be clubbed by policemen on the streets of San Francisco."

ROLPH COLLAPSES.

Cowing under the rising storm of indignation, Mayor Rolph has collapsed. When a committee representing twenty-two leading business and commercial bodies of the city called at the City Hall this morning, they were informed that the Mayor was indisposed and they were received by Theodore Roche, police commissioner, and D. A. White, Chief of Police. The Citizens' Committee demanded that immediate steps be taken to suppress rioting and murder by the striking car men.

M'INTOSH'S ULTIMATUM.

C. K. McIntosh, vice-president of the Bank of California, said:

"We have come here to talk about fundamental principles, and it is unnecessary at this time to go into details and express our views of conditions that exist in this city. That a state of lawlessness exists goes without saying, and the law which is made for the protection of those who are entitled to its protection has not been enforced for twenty-one days.

"We are not so much interested and have no concern in the questions that have caused this strike. We represent the commercial interests of this city, the backbone of the community, for it must be granted that the commercial interests of a city are the backbone. Without a staple commercial organization labor and lines of endeavor will not endure.

"Therefore these men come from the commercial industries of San Francisco, come to you to protest at the conditions that have existed and which we have tolerated for twenty-one days, a state of lawlessness which has not been curbed and in this enlightened age an effort to make might rule. And I say we are not interested and not concerned in the controversy between the railroad and the men.

"What we want to know is, what can the police department do to re-establish law and order? We want to know the limits of the police department, we want to know if the limits are sufficient to cope with the rioting, we want to know if the limits of the department are inadequate to meet the situation, we want to know if the police department is powerless to stop the rioting that has marred our streets and endangered the lives of our citizens who are interested in this fight, and if the police department is powerless, then what is the remedy? That's what we want to know. If there is no remedy, we should know it. We should know all facts so that we may know the state of civilization under which we are living.

MANY LIVES IN JEOPARDY.

"We believe you know that the laws have been broken, that the lives, limbs and safety of the men, women and children of San Francisco are in jeopardy, that the hospitals have been filled with men whose only crime has been to follow the course which the law permits.

"Hundreds have been sent to the hospitals in the last twenty-one days. We want to know, sirs, if this is inevitable. We want to know if your forces are inadequate to prevent these people from being struck by rocks.

"If there is anything that we can do we want to put it behind you. We insist and demand that there be an observance of the law, that the privileges of the individuals and the weak are protected against the attacks of the strong.

"We are sending millions of men and giving millions of dollars to a foreign country to prevent might from ruling right. Why should we send men from here to rectify a state of anarchy and disorder that exists in our own city?

"If people can't ride in the street cars of San Francisco without being smashed up, let us find out why. We come to you and offer you all the forces at our command. In turn, we ask you, has everything been done to protect and put forth control. If not why not?

"If you have done everything within your power, and it has proven insufficient, we will help. We demand that the rights of the people who are innocent sufferers in this trouble, be protected, and the men who come here today come in no spirit of criticism, but demand to know the situation and what is to be done to stop the terror that has reigned for the last twenty-one days."

"If the police are unable to suppress lawlessness," said H. R. Bradford, representing the civic and commercial clubs, "permit us to send armed men into the districts where the lawlessness is occurring—the Mission district, if you please—to aid the police. Firearms are the only things that these vandals will respect."

CITIZENS DEMAND FACTS.

Other speakers made it plain to the Chief of Police and the chairman of the Police Commission that the citizens of San Francisco will not permit the conditions of the last week to be continued.

Police Commissioner Roche said that the fault was with the United Railroads, that the company should see the labor leaders here and compromise the strike. He said that he has been reliably informed that if the company would compromise with Dash of Italians Irresistible.

Evidences of Mad Flight of the Austrians Seen in Every Direction.

Victory Certain is View in Rome as Great Attack is Extended.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ROME (via Paris) Sept. 1.—From the Italian front Signor Fracaroli wires: In all directions are piled heaps of Austrian dead. On the other side of the Cucco-Vodice range at the foot of Monte Santo, in a low valley, our artillery broke up the enemy lines, destroying the rear guards. All the caverns are now closed tombs. On the other side of Mt. Cucco is a similar entrance to the lowlands. Here there is a cemetery where there stands the disfigured body of an Austrian, his arm extended through the iron bars of the gate. He seems like a ghastly porter.

Below Mt. Vodice is an entire village of military barracks. The offices are still and typewriters in heaps of cases show the attempts to transport them in the mad flight. The officers' quarters contain books, lanterns, perfumes, cushions, pillows and orders of service. The last telegrams had not been forwarded, showing the rapidity of the Italian advance at this point. Everywhere we found rifles and bayonets and solid helmets. Our soldiers put them on their heads, giving the curious spectacle of Latin faces under a barbaric headpiece.

AT FIRST CONTACT.

At the first contact with the Austrians after the destruction of the lines, the enemy columns dispersed. There was an attempt at a weak resistance, but this soon fled to the eastern side of the Bainsizza Plateau toward Cigleone. Chiapovano is Italy's and the troops continue the advance, which is naturally slow in a region desolate and without water. The question of supplies amid masses of mountains 3000 feet high is a difficult one. It is necessary to re-establish contact with distant columns and reconstruct the circulating system of feeding the army, whose advance, with the co-ordinated advance of the artillery over the conquered positions, makes the task an immense one.

This does not signify, however, that the army is halting. The battle is proceeding vigorously. Victory is in sight. The advance columns are always in contact with the enemy, always attacking or repulsing attacks further north, while other columns are extending on the other side of Monte Santo, menacing other fortified bastions.

ENTERS HARD PHASE.

The battle has entered a hard phase. It will demand of the troops superior courage. The left flank is occupied in a daring maneuver, destroying the enemy's center while the right flank helps the movement. The action is highly demonstrative, as it obliges part of the enemy to live for days quiescent in dignified patience. The enemy's bulletins reveal his anxiety and he undoubtedly awaits a new and sure defeat.

Numerous telegrams have been sent by the King to Gen. Cadorna, congratulating him on his victory.

The King also telegraphed to the President of China on the occasion of that country's entry into the war, saying: "It is with pleasure I send you the congratulations of Italy on her satisfaction at the wise decision of the great republic to fight for the liberty of the world."

The President answered: "I am happy to receive your sincere wishes and send thanks. The republic has entered the war exclusively to safeguard the principles of humanity and international rights, the same as the Allies. I hope to co-operate sincerely with you and to reach a common end."

PRAISES BERSAGLIERI.

Signor Barzelai, who recently went to the war zone to inspect a brigade of Bersaglieri, was introduced to the soldiers as a citizen of Trieste for thirty years, whose life was a flame of ideality. The commander concluded:

"It is characteristic of the Bersaglieri to arrive always first and thus they have promised to reach Trieste."

Hurrahs followed and the men sang a hymn. Signor Barzelai then made a speech recalling the history of the Bersaglieri, and concluding:

"In her victories at this moment Italy cries to Austria: 'From you we do not want anything, but when we arrive we will retake all that belongs to us.'"

An American mission has inspected the Leoniano Hospital for wounded. There was a great demonstration of sympathy on their arrival.

The Berlin Press Bitterly Denounces President's Note Rejecting Pope's Peace Proposal

The Stuck Pig Squeals.

WILSON CHARGED WITH "ABSOLUTE MENDACITY

Intention to Prolong the War at Any Price Seen in Words of "Coldly Calculating Mathematician."

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN (via London) Sept. 1.—President Wilson's reply to the Pope's peace note was published generally by the newspapers this morning and in the editorial comment Mr. Wilson is bitterly denounced on the score of the note's tone and tendency.

The Lokal Anzeiger says: "President Wilson declines the Pope's mediation with the same mass of swollen phrases with which he has already satiated the German peoples. We are told that the war is not being waged against the Germans, but against their 'masters.'

"The absolute mendacity of Mr. Wilson's phraseology becomes apparent when his dictum as to the rights of nations who are capable of shaping their own destinies is opposed to the wish of the German people to be governed by these very 'masters.' Mr. Wilson, therefore, does not intend to give us our liberty, but to deprive us of liberty to arrive at our own decisions.

"For that matter, this whole mass of words has as its purpose the expression of the intention to prolong the war at any price. In this resolve, Mr. Wilson, who is fighting for the freedom of mankind, orders peace meetings dispersed and pacifists arrested.

"This war has exposed in its likeness much that is low and contemptible; its remaining task was to exhibit a hero like this coldly calculating mathematician, whom a singular fate in a momentous hour has given the power over 100,000,000 people."

COPENHAGEN COMMENT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 31.—The Berlingski Tidende says that President Wilson's note is remarkable because of the open-heartedness with which the President goes right to the kernel of the problem that no peace can be concluded with the present German government because it does not observe its treaties and obligations. The newspaper believes the document was drafted with a view to its effect on the German people, but that it is a foregone conclusion it will be almost generally met with rejection.

The Social Demokraten alone of the Danish papers comments on President Wilson's note. The Socialist organ says:

"President Wilson expects a new testimonial concerning the formula of the peoples of the Central Empires. It probably is the Reichstag's peace resolution to which he refers as a testimonial, but he wishes a new one.

"Ought not, however, the peoples of the Allied powers also submit their formula? That is what the world longs for, and this formula should be brought to the light of day."

LONDON VIEWS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The Saturday Review, referring to President Wilson's note to Pope Benedict as "the most forcible state paper issued during the war," says:

"We cannot remember that ever before the sovereign of a great nation with an army and a fleet in existence has been told that he is a liar and a thief, with whom no treaty can be made. This terrible insult, so amply deserved, comes with great effect from a nation that is not, like Britain, a European rival of Germany and cannot be described as jealous of German trade."

"President Wilson's reply to the Pope is really a message to Germany," said George Bernard Shaw today in an interview with the Associated Press. "Reduced to the vernacular, it means: 'Become a republic and we will let up on you; go on Kaisering and we will smash you.'

"The President knows what he is fighting for."

PARIS APPROVAL.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Aug. 31. (Delayed.)—Although members of the French government have not commented publicly on President Wilson's reply to the Pope, the Associated Press is informed from authoritative quarters that the President has defined with absolute clearness and force the attitude of all the Allies. The President is regarded as having increased the unity of action among the Allies since America's entry into the war by his having raised the issues of the war to the highest level of right and by refusing to consider matters of mere expediency.

All the newspapers continue to discuss the note in the most approving terms.

ROME (Thursday) Aug. 30. (Delayed.)—Count de Salis, the British Minister at the Vatican, who presented President Wilson's reply to Pope Benedict, received the impression that the Pope, although disappointed at the President's refusal to undertake negotiations on the lines laid down in the papal note, was touched by the nobility and dignity of the President's reply and courtesy toward him personally.

The holy father, he added, also felt grieved at the unpitying condemnation of Germany's perfidy.

AGITATION ALARMS KAISER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 31.—A telegram received here from Vienna says that the German National League has demanded that the government take vigorous and unsparing measures to check the agitation for a separate peace by Austria. It is declared that the Germans in Austria will oppose to the last any proposal to cede Trieste or South Tyrol to Italy.

A resolution adopted by the league inveighed against the "irresponsible elements" that are making it difficult for Austria to continue by her allies' side and painting the situation at the front in dark colors.

FOUR GERMAN VESSELS DESTROYED OF JUTLAND.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Four German mine sweepers were destroyed today off the coast of Jutland by British light forces, according to an announcement issued tonight by the Admiralty.

The official statement reads: "Our light forces operating off the coast of Jutland (Denmark) this morning destroyed four enemy mine sweepers."

DENMARK REPORT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 1.—A naval engagement occurred this morning between British and German mosquito craft off Nyminde, Gab, west coast of Jutland. British destroyers attacked four German armed trawlers and drove them ashore.

A Rinkiobing paper says the British bombarded the trawlers after they grounded, completing their destruction.

About 100 German seamen were landed, many of whom were severely wounded. One rumor has it that 100 dead have come ashore, but apparently this is a distorted version of the fact that about 100 men reached shore.

The German craft were presumably engaged in patrolling and mine sweeping, to clear the route for German submarines. German ships and submarines, according to one account, took part in the fight.

A semi-official Danish report says that four German trawlers were driven ashore near Rinkiobing Fiord and that the crews were landed. The remainder of the fleet of German armed trawlers fled to the south.

NEW SHAKE-UP IMPENDS IN FRENCH CABINET.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Sept. 1.—Jules Stegg, Minister of Public Instruction, has taken over temporarily the Ministry of the Interior in place of Louis J. Malvy, who resigned yesterday.

In a letter to Premier Ribot, M. Malvy gives as the reason for his resignation press attacks against him. He declares that the silence imposed by his official duties prevented him from refuting numerous inexact charges and calumnies in the opposition to him and wishes to have his freedom in order to face them as a simple citizen and as a Deputy in the chamber when Parliament reassembles in three weeks.

The charges referred to by the former Minister were made by Senator Clemenceau in a debate in the Senate with reference to the tolerance allowed by the Minister of the Interior to certain elements of the population who have been charged with an anti-patriotic propaganda.

M. Malvy is defended by his friends, who declare that by showing confidence in all classes of Frenchmen he has maintained unity and tranquillity in the country through the three years of war.

Most of the evening newspapers forecast the reorganization of the French Cabinet in consequence of the retirement of M. Malvy.

SCHOONER REPORTED LOST HAS ARRIVED.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 1.—The American schooner Rostellan reported sunk July 10 by a German submarine, arrived here today. The American Consul at Plymouth, misinterpreting a message notifying him that a British patrol boat had rescued the vessel, sent out the incorrect report and the owners of the vessel, hearing nothing from her captain, gave up the crew as lost. A. H. Miller, commander of the Rostellan, saw the destruction by a German submarine of the American barkentine Hildegaard, the day his vessel was reported sunk. He said that a dead calm prevented the Hildegaard from escaping and his own crew took to the boats, believing his ship would meet the same fate. The British patrol boats, attracted by gunfire from the submarine, were too light to tow the Rostellan out of range, but forced the submarine to submerge. They then wirelessed for larger patrol boats, which towed the Rostellan to safety.

sideration, the Finance Committee reported a bill which it defended vigorously as taxing to the very limit of safety war profits and incomes of the country and then, after it came under attack, presented a substitute to add a half-billion. He recited this with his argument to justify still greater taxes on swollen war profits.

"We are not concerned with normal profits, normal business, normal productivity and industry," he said, "but we would take the very largest possible part of war profits.

"Our fundamental difference is that we would reach out the strong arm of the government and take war profits with the same vigor and virility that you reached out and threw the youth of the land into the melting pot of war. Some Senators say, 'Wait, hesitate.' They ask us to defend these great war-profiting concerns who want us to wait, before taking their profits, until the war is over. Then we will be unable to touch them. How specious is this plea of 'injuring business.'"

Senator Johnson declared England was now taking 80 per cent of the war profits and that business was never better. "We," he declared, "are so halting, tender, timid we hesitate to take 31 per cent. We do not hesitate to break hearts and break bodies, but we do hesitate to take without injury to anybody and without real sacrifice the sum of 31 per cent. of the profits.

"If the war is made unpopular," Senator Johnson said to those opposing tax raises, "you will be the ones making it so. Let's show that we can take money power as well as man power. This is not alone a question of conscripting wealth, but a struggle between the old individualistic theory of democracy where every man could take what he could get, and the new philosophy that has come to us out of this war, in which every man, woman and child and all their works must be taken for the defense of the State."

Immediately after defeat of the Johnson amendment, which mustered less than the twenty-five votes expected by leaders of the radical tax group, Senator La Follette began his speech on his amendments for a maximum of 72 per cent. graded down to 48 per cent.

LA FOLLETTE HEARD.

Declaring that industry has made "inordinate and unheard of profits out of the war," Senator La Follette said:

"It would be a reproach to our present civilization if we failed to prevent so far as we have the power one class of our citizens, comparatively small, from becoming enormously rich out of this war, while the other and much larger class was impoverished by the war, although we cannot prevent the injustice and the inequality of the burdens which every war causes to the people of a country engaged in it.

"We cannot in this, or any other revenue bill which we may devise, even approximately equalize the financial burdens of this war, but we can at least refuse to set our approval upon a scheme which would deliberately recognize and legalize the grossest possible injustice in the distribution of those burdens. It is a proposition which seems to me must be shocking to the moral sense of every man, that some of our people shall be in receipt of incomes of thousands, hundreds of thousands or millions of dollars purely as a result of this war, while millions of our people, as a result of it, are suffering privation and want.

"Never in all the history of the world were the great corporations and business concerns of this or any other country is as good position to pay a high war profits tax as they are today.

SCORES THE DRAFT.

"We claim to have profited by the military experience of other nations in this war. We conscripted men, overturned our traditions and, as I believe, violated our Constitution. We invested the Executive with the most searching and arbitrary power ever exercised by potentate or ruler since civilized government was established among men. We have done all this, whether wisely or unwisely, because of the plea that the necessities of war demanded it.

"It is only when we come to the proposition that some of the surplus wealth of the country shall be wrested from those who control it, though they do not need it nor sometimes wisely use it, that a halt is called. Here it is that experience is to be disregarded, that the just demands of the people to be relieved a little from the burdens of this war are to be ignored and a financial policy adopted which can only bring disaster to our forces in the field and discontent to our people at home.

"All this is to be done because wealth is not loyal enough to assume the burden it ought to bear and up to the present time, at least, has been potent enough to prevent the passage of a law to make it bear something like a fair share of the expenses of this war."

THE FISCAL POLICY.

Senator La Follette denounced the whole fiscal policy as unsound and unscientific in the proportions of taxes and bonds, although the nation, "not satisfied with attempting to finance the bankrupt allies of Great Britain, is now undertaking to finance Great Britain herself."

The Finance Committee amendment, he said, proposed to take this year only about one-quarter of war profits.

"Is the Senate ready to stand for that proposition?" he demanded. "Do you think the people of the country will give even perfunctory support to this war if that unjust proposition is written into the law?

"I also believe the penalties in this bill should be greater. They are simply ridiculous. In the name of common decency let us make the penalties for evasion of the tax law as severe as we have made the penalties for the evasion of the draft law. Is it a more serious offense for a father or mother to evade the draft law to save the life of her boy, than it is for the millionaire to evade the tax law in order to save his profits?"

If not taxed this year, Senator La Follette contended, war profits, if peace should suddenly come, would go untouched. He said, "substantially all" could be taken without disturbing normal business conditions. "Surely 7 per cent. net profit, plus 20 per cent. war profits, plus the spirit of patriotism and self-sacrifice which distinguishes our corporation and business concerns, would be sufficient to keep that business going at its utmost capacity," he cried.

"If they are never allowed to make another dollar out of this war they have already made fortunes that should satisfy the wildest dreams of avarice and greed."

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Sept. 1.—President Wilson's note being virtually addressed to the German people, there is more than usual interest in the latest account of the German people's conditions and feelings as related by an army nurse named De Winne, a Belgian, who has just returned after thirty-four months of captivity in Germany. As a nurse he enjoyed special favor and visited Munster, Soltau, Hanover, Gottingen, Dusseldorf, Cologne, Aix la Chapelle and Karlsruhe. With regard to the spirit of the Germans, he said:

"The Germans believe hard as iron that Germany was attacked and is only defending her existence. Not only do the people repeat this, but intellectuals, doctors and officers with whom I talked, are so convinced of this that they are ready to make the greatest sacrifices."

"'Why did not your country let us pass through?' asked one doctor. 'Then you would not have been a prisoner and your country would have escaped the horrors of war.'

"'We wished to keep our given word,' I answered. 'We defended ourselves when attacked.'

"'But your country was conniving with England and France,' he retorted.

"So one wonders when some particle of truth will penetrate minds so obstinate. I have never met a German who was not convinced of German victory, but many note with fright that the blockade and economic situation are ever postponing peace. This has made them conciliatory.

"The English are detested; the French are admired for their courage; the Russians are despised as savages. As for the Americans, the Germans maintain they will be no help to the Allies from a military point of view, but they are more and more terrified at the universal reprobation they feel is rising against Germany. The working classes rail against the military classes, the Prussians and the Crown Prince, but believe that the Emperor desires the end of the war by a peace of conciliation, but is thwarted by the Crown Prince and the military leaders."

When asked if a revolution is possible, he replied:

"I dare not say, but I can say that in no town I visited have I discovered revolutionary symptoms."

METAL TRADES STRIKE IS OFF.

Action is Deferred Pending Washington Meeting.

Seattle Unionists will Send Representatives East.

Invitation is Sent by Federal Shipping Board.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—At a special meeting held tonight the Metal Trades Council made public a notice to all unions affiliated with the council, cancelling the strike order for next Wednesday and deferring action pending the holding of a conference at Washington.

SEATTLE DEVELOPMENT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE, Sept. 1.—The Metal Trades Council, 12,000 of whose members were expected to strike next Wednesday, was in session tonight to decide whether to accept the invitation of the Shipping Board to send President D. W. McKillop and two others to Washington to confer on the local strike situation.

D. P. McKillop, president of the council; James A. Taylor of the Machinists' Union, and G. Sanferson of Shipwrights and Joiners' Union, will go immediately to Washington to confer with the Shipping Board, it was announced.

Decision to send the three men to the capital will mean a postponement of the strike until the conferences there are concluded.

The strike of ship carpenters in Seattle yards for higher wages, called for today, was countermanded at the last moment and the yards worked as usual. The ship carpenters decided to make common cause with the metal Trades workmen, who had called a strike for Wednesday morning.

Monday will be a holiday. Tuesday, the ship carpenters will not come in contact with any freshly-delivered lumber, hence they can work through the day, as they did this morning, without violating the boycott on ten-hour lumber ordered by the Seattle Building Trades Council.

One hundred and fifty union ship carpenters in the three largest steel ship yards here struck.

The strike does not tie up the big yards, but causes some inconvenience. A strike of all the wooden shipbuilders was set for today in yards that failed to sign the new scale. It was understood that nearly all the wooden yards have signed the scale.

The boycott was placed upon ten-hour lumber by the Seattle Building Trades Council and indorsed by organized labor throughout the State.

All Seattle's municipal carpentering, including construction of bridges, has been suspended. Wooden building in the larger cities of the State is said to be practically suspended.

WHITES AND NEGROES CLASH IN KENTUCKY.

LEXINGTON (Ky.) Sept. 1.—The streets of Lexington tonight are being patrolled by Kentucky National Guardsmen and the civil authorities have augmented their night police patrol as the result of a series of outbreaks in the principal streets here today between negroes and soldiers. Tonight the town is quiet, but suppressed excitement and ill-feeling is apparent and threats of further trouble are heard.

The street fighting today was the culmination of a series of disorders between soldiers camped at the edge of the city and negroes who have been flocking to Lexington during the week from a fair near by. One negro was taken to the hospital in a serious condition while numerous other blacks received lesser injuries. The soldiers escaped with minor bruises.

Enough's Enough.

MRS. YOUNG NOW A NON-PACIFIST.

Activities Ceased when the Nation Entered War.

Disloyal Obstruction is Denounced by Educator.

Taking German from Schools Wrong, She Thinks.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 1.—Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, pacifist, came back to Chicago today a non-pacifist. She is behind the government in every war move. She is out of sympathy with the attempted peace council, which Chicago and four States have repudiated. Formerly, she worked with many who are taking part in it.

Denying emphatically that she had come to Chicago to attend the peace meeting she said that when the country entered the war she dropped all pacifistic utterances and activities.

"I did my utmost," said Mrs. Young at the Parkway Hotel, where she will live, "to make Congress see things in a different light and to keep the country out of the war. I am a pacifist. But when the government entered the war my activities ceased. If we don't get behind the government, particularly in a time like this, there can be no government.

MAKING A MISTAKE.

"I believe pacifists are making a mistake in continuing their activities during the war and in holding such meetings as this one planned for Chicago. Some pacifists have become bitter at the newspaper criticism they have received. I don't feel that way, however.

"And how about the Mayor? Was ever a man so severely criticized by the newspapers as he has been? And does he deserve it all?

"Roger Sullivan, I noticed, says the war will end in December. I hope it does. But I don't think President Wilson believes it will end then. If it does our soldiers will have a nice trip to Europe and will come back speaking the common French phrases.

"I have been interested in the attempt to take German out of the elementary schools. It does not seem right to fight a language. I should like to have the children learn French, although they say it is easier to talk German than to talk French."

RETURNS FROM WEST.

Mrs. Young will spend several months at least in Chicago. She intends to complete the work on her book, "The State and the School," which was to have been published this fall.

She was interested in the school situation and expressed a fear that if the tumult in the system continue it will spread to the teachers and end disastrously.

Mrs. Young has spent considerable of the summer in the West, visiting in Portland, Seattle, Spokane and Butte. At Portland during the National Education Association meeting she was the guest of Bishop Walter T. Sumner, former dean of the Cathedral of St. Peter and Paul in Chicago and chairman of the School Management Committee of the board for a long time.

LABOR TAKES SLAM AT CHICAGO MAYOR.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 1.—Reports that "Big Bill" Thompson, Chicago's sometime Mayor that is, whenever he is in town, was to speak at labor's patriotic demonstration at Forest Park Monday are greatly exaggerated.

R. T. McQuillen, district chairman of the Railway Carmen of America, today denied the accusation that labor was to have the Mayor as its principal speaker and added:

"Kaiser Bill can't talk to us. Labor has nothing in common with him. No invitation was extended to him to talk and, furthermore, the platform will be denied him should he want to talk. Labor is loyal and patriotic and not at all in sympathy with Kaiser Bill."

NEW MISSION FROM BRITAIN ARRIVES.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 1.—A party of prominent Britishers arrived here today on a passenger steamship to join Lord Northcliffe, British commissioner in the United States, and assist him in purchasing war supplies. They will go to Washington also for a conference with government officials.

In discussing the war, a member of the party who asked that the identity of its members be withheld, said he does not believe the conflict will end until about this time next year.

"The Germans will never be overcome by hunger alone," he declared. "Neither will they be overcome by assaults on their front, while they are convinced of the weakness of their opponents. It must be a combination of hunger and continual assaulting that will win.

"The embargo of the United States against them is one of the strongest weapons yet put into our hands and if it had gone into effect a year ago, the war would have been over by now. We have got to keep them hungry and make them still hungrier and keep on delivering the blows against them while they are in this condition."

place to go. A city wanting "little pacifists" in its home can wire Chicago.

NOBODY ARRESTED.

At any rate, the Chicago conference was as much a flivver as the one Louis P. Lochner, the head pacifier, tried to stage on Henry Ford's money at Stockholm. Not a soul was arrested, despite ardent pleadings from both male and female, every time they met a policeman.

"The only way I'll pinch you is if you hit me on the nose," one big, burly son of Erin, who wears brass buttons and has a boy at the front, told a squeaky-voiced little female dressed in half-male attire, after the West Side auditorium meeting had been ordered to disperse by First Deputy Westbrook.

"What d'you want to be pinched for, anyhow? We need our jails here for safe-blowers and them other regular criminals. G'wan wid you."

The firm stand taken by the Governor came as a result of patriotic outbursts from every section of the city and from scores of civic organizations. About the only one who didn't protest was Mayor Thompson, who spent the day on the veranda of his summer home at Lake Forest. "Bill" said he could see "nothing wrong with giving folks the right of free speech."

In the action taken by the Governor, as well as that by the City Council, was seen evidence that in the future the Mayor isn't going to have much to say about such affairs in Chicago, as well as down-State. The Governor exercised his police powers today, but not formally. The City Council plans to go further and seek to prohibit every gathering where friends of the Kaiser and enemies of the country which shelters them harangue.

STAND OF ILLINOIS.

The Governor made it plain that Illinois will not tolerate persons who assemble for the purpose of discussing peace terms with Germany, even when such a gathering is really intended to obstruct the government in the prosecution of the war.

It was shortly after noon when the Governor issued his statement.

After taking this firm stand, the Governor and Adjt.-Gen. Dickson conferred with police officials of Chicago. They were informed that the meeting was in progress at the West Side Auditorium. Chief Schuettler and his aids were instructed to disperse the pacifists. In less than an hour a telegram was received at the executive office stating the meeting had been broken up by Westbrook and a squad of policemen.

The scene was dramatic when the police dispersed the meeting. The People's Peace Council delegates who came to Chicago in a special train last Friday night were in the midst of effecting a permanent organization of their convention in the West Side Auditorium, First Deputy Westbrook, accompanied by a squad of detectives, walked to the platform.

Seymour Stedman, who presided as temporary chairman, ignored the presence of the policemen and continued talking until Westbrook raised his right hand.

ORDER TO DISPERSE.

Turning to the assembly, the first deputy said: "By order of the general superintendent of police and by direction of the Governor of Illinois you are ordered to disperse."

Stedman stopped talking. The assemblage held its breath. A few in the back of the hall stood up. No one moved.

"You can go out orderly and peacefully and we will all be friends," continued Westbrook. "But if you do not you'll be arrested."

"But officer," interposed half a dozen occupants of the stage.

"'But,' nothing, just move along quietly and get out. Take your time, but keep going," replied the first deputy.

Uniformed policemen in charge of Sergeant George Lyman had started some of the delegates out of the hall, which is on the third floor of the building. Most of the assemblage was out of the place when someone suggested that "somebody ought to be arrested."

"Just for the effect of it," said a delegate. There were many who wanted to be "martyrs to the cause."

A little woman with a squeaky voice stopped on the stairway.

"I want to be arrested," she said.

"Now, lady, what would you want to be arrested for?" said a good-natured policeman with a broad Celtic brogue and a genial smile.

The delegate had many reasons, all of which the policeman listened to with marked attention, proceeding down the stairway just a step ahead of her.

No Federal secret service men were assigned to the meeting. No police were sent until the message from Gov. Lowden was received by Chief Schuettler.

STATE HEALTH SERVICE.

There were, however, representatives of the State Health Service detailed, it was said by Dr. St. Clare Drake, chief of the department, to investigate reports that a number of the delegates from the East were afflicted with trachoma and anthrax and were carriers of infantile paralysis and foot and mouth disease.

The West Side Auditorium has often been the meeting place of the most radical organizations in Chicago. Emma Goldman and Ben Reitman, anarchist leaders now serving Federal sentences, have spoken from its rostrum.

It also was the scene of the funeral of Joe Hill, known as the I.W.W. poet, who was executed by a firing squad in Utah after his conviction of the murder of a grocer and his son in a hold-up.

Late this evening leaders of the People's Council for Democracy and Peace had rounded up a number of the delegates at the Fort Dearborn Hotel.

The Executive Committee went into secret session in one of the hotel parlors.

The pacifists were more cautious than they have been in the past. They rented rooms on both sides of the hall and adjoining the room where the conference was in progress.

The delegates gathered in little groups to express indignation and chagrin at the break-up of their meeting. "I am anxious to know," said Adolph Germer, Socialist, recently held to the Federal grand jury to answer a charge of disloyal utterance, "whether the Constitution of the United States is still in effect or if, as the Kaiser's utterances are supposed to be, it is only a scrap of paper."

PANKEN IS WRATHY.

"The only way to show up the government of Illinois," said Jacob Panken of New York, "is to hire a boat and go to Russia and hold our meeting there."

"It is about time that the cranks and other mental lightweights learn that Chicago is not a safe haven for their vaporings," said Chief of Police Schuettler.

"Hereafter this breed of pro-Germans will have to seek peace somewhere else than in Chicago."

GOVERNOR'S STATEMENT.

The Governor gave out the following statement:

"The Governor is charged with the responsibility of preserving peace in the State. If, in his judgment, disorder and riot are likely to result from this so-called peace meeting, it is his duty and he has the power to prevent the meeting. His understanding is that, while the meeting purports to be in the interest of peace, it is really intended to obstruct the government in the prosecution of the war, and is calculated to produce disorder and rioting in Illinois. He will not, therefore, permit this meeting to be held in Illinois."

Mayor Thompson did not see the situation as did the Governor.

"I can do nothing to prevent them from meeting in Chicago," he said. "Pacifists are law-abiding citizens."

Had the meeting proceeded with ordinary speed an executive committee to give the organization permanency might have been elected before the police arrived, for the delegates were in session for three hours before the sudden climax. But the affair moved slowly. It seemed as if every one present had motions to offer. Finally, however, a nominating committee was chosen to present eleven names for membership on the executive committee, but it was unable to meet because of the police. It was reported it met privately elsewhere later.

The delegates were not aware of the explanation by Dr. David Starr Jordan that his connection with the council was temporary and largely honorary until they read it in the newspapers.

JORDAN'S STATEMENT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.) Sept. 1.—A telegram, disclaiming active participation in the peace propaganda of the People's Council of America for Democracy and Peace was received today from Dr. David Starr Jordan, president emeritus of Leland Stanford University of California, by his sister, Mrs. Mary J. Edwards of this city.

The telegram, in part, follows:

"In view of extraordinary and unwelcome prominence given my name over repeated protests in connection with officers of the People's Council, for which I have had no actual responsibility, I make this statement. In the organization of the council in June, then a small group, then apparently like-minded, I consented to act as treasurer pro tem, without executive responsibility until September 1, when permanent officers should be chosen.

"I make no criticism of methods or purposes of the People's Council but have had no directive part in planning conferences nor in great expansion of scope through affiliation with other groups. Moreover, I have repeatedly urged that obstruction gets nowhere and that the only way out is forward, as rapidly as possible, toward a negotiated peace with reasonable guarantees as to permanence.

"I may add that the way is indicated by the new Russia and by the Pope. The President has widened the door by disclaiming certain avowed purposes of the Allies."

FROM THE ALLIANCE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The American Alliance for Labor and Democracy today telegraphed another appeal to Gov. Burnquist of Minnesota urging him to permit the People's Council of America for Democracy and Peace to hold their convention in Minneapolis. The telegram stated the Alliance felt that the activities of the council were "opposed to the best interests of America," but maintained "that the right of free speech and peaceful assemblage rise superior to that."

Details of the Alliance convention, which will be opened in Minneapolis next Wednesday were announced here today by the committee. The "red, white and blue special" carrying the New York delegation, will leave here Monday. The Pittsburgh party will join the train at Cleveland and a carload of delegates will be added at Chicago. The western delegation, which left Los Angeles yesterday, is expected to reach Minneapolis Tuesday.

The convention will be opened by Frank P. Walsh of Kansas City as temporary chairman, and the delegates will listen to speeches on the purpose of the convention which, it was announced, is to express loyalty to the government and to plan for labor's part in the war.

Among the speakers will be Gompers, Charles Edward Russell, John Spargo and other labor leaders and Socialists.

BRITISH MINISTER LAUDS WILSON NOTE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, today indorsed President Wilson's reply to the peace proposals of Pope Benedict and said he was not certain any further response would be necessary. (This is the first official expression of opinion in regard to the President's note from any of the Allies.)

"The President's note is a very magnificent occurrence," said the minister in his weekly interview with the Associated Press. "It thrilled us all over here, and the opinion which I heard expressed by representatives of allied countries were equally warm and appreciative. I am certain that none of the Allies would be able to improve upon it, and I am not certain that any further reply will be necessary.

"There does not appear to me to be anything inconsistent as between the President's note and the economic policy of the Allies as declared at the Paris conference. The resolutions of the Allies as declared are defensive measures and in no way aggressive."

PHILADELPHIA SAYS GOOD-BY TO TROOPS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—Philadelphia paid a farewell tribute to its departing soldiers. It was estimated that more than one million persons viewed the parade.

Raw recruits still without uniforms and arms made up a large quota of the 35,000 soldiers who marched for more than five hours in one of the greatest solemn patriotic spectacles ever witnessed in this city.

Special services in all thirty churches closed the day's celebration.

HOW BELGIANS ARE ENSLAVED.

Brutal Treatment by Germans Told by a Refugee.

Life is Made Unbearable in Conquered Districts.

Those Sent into Kaiserdom may Never Return.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 1.—The following statement, made public today by the State Department, has been made by a Belgian workman who has made his way across the frontier from Belgium. He lived near the Dutch frontier and the seacoast. Names are not given, as he has left relatives behind.

"I had to leave the small seaside place, where I had lived since my childhood, because life became unbearable. It was slavery and, though I cannot tell you the means of my escape, you may imagine that a man becomes desperate under such circumstances and prefers taking any risks than serve his country's enemies.

"The Germans announced, at the beginning of January last, that every man or woman from 15 to 60 would be compelled to work. They did not take everybody, but once you had begun to work for them you were never left free again. They began with the unmarried men, then they took the married ones. They had not yet taken the women in my village when I left, but they had already done so in other places close by. In order to avoid people escaping to another part of the country, they obliged us all to go to the Kommandanture, where our identity cards and passports were confiscated. As you cannot walk a mile in the army zone without showing your papers, we were practically prisoners.

"Every week an officer with two soldiers went from house to house, requesting more laborers. They had taken 300 already when I left; I have no doubt that the whole village is forced to work by now.

"The work was done either on the spot, where we had to repair and clean buildings, cut wood, etc., along the Dutch frontier, where we had to build trenches and concrete works, or behind the German lines in the region of Westende and Lombaertzijde, where we were mainly employed in building roads and railway lines. This was by far the worst place, since we were frequently exposed to shell fire and to gas attacks. Having no masks, we were obliged to take shelter when a bell rang to warn us. When I left there had not been any casualties among the men of my village, but I know for certain that at least five farm laborers from a neighboring village, who had been taken to work behind the lines with their horses, were killed or died from their wounds. We slept in badly-built wooden huts. Many of us had to be sent back with rheumatism; others developed bronchitis and pneumonia.

"We were paid one mark per day, but as the food was very scarce, we had practically to spend our wages to appease our hunger, so that when we came back home for one day every three weeks, we had practically nothing left to bring back with us. Those who worked closer to their homes were paid 28 pfennig per hour, but received no food; they were allowed to go back every night.

"It was no use trying to protest, it only meant more trouble and misery; prison and blows. One of my friends who struggled to escape was nearly killed by a bayonet thrust.

"Besides, the Germans are only too glad if you resist. They have made a rule to send to Germany any man or woman who gets more than three-months' imprisonment. And none of those who have been deported have come back after their time. Six months ago, one of my neighbors, a widow, who had to protect her daughter against a German officer, received four months for having said on this occasion that all Germans were pigs. She was sent to Germany, and we have heard since that she is obliged to work in a kommando and has no hope of returning before the end of the war. This is only one case among hundreds. The German tribunals have provided many Belgian workers for the fatherland.

QUICKSILVER FIND EXCITES HONOLULU.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

HONOLULU (T. H.) Aug. 17.—Quicksilver brought up from the depths of Honolulu Harbor by a "clam shell" dredger caused a two-day sensation recently and for a time reports were in circulation that a quicksilver mine had been located.

Finally some one remembered that previous to the declaration of war against Germany by the United States several German and naval vessels had been anchored near where the quicksilver had been brought up by the dredger. Investigation revealed that the quicksilver had been thrown overboard by the Germans when the crews of the ships put the machinery of the vessels out of commission.

The German system of registering pressure and vacuums in the engine-room is by use of quicksilver and not by springs, and when the German sailors destroyed the machinery of their vessels a large quantity of the metal was thrown overboard. Quantities of it ran in the bilges of the boats and in repairing the gunboat Geir at Pearl Harbor more than 1000 pounds of quicksilver was removed from the bilge of the warship.

The German sailors smashed the gauges of their vessels with sledges and threw the debris overboard, together with the quicksilver that was left in them.

AMERICA FORBIDS DUTCH GRAIN CARGOES TO SAIL.

United States to Ration the European Neutrals in Strictest Manner.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Indications that the United States intends to ration the Northern European neutral countries in the strictest fashion were seen today in the admission that the exports administration board had disapproved of an arrangement suggested by the Dutch Minister here and the Belgian Relief Commission for division between Holland and Belgium of the nearly 100 Dutch grain cargoes held in American ports.

The first news that permission for the ships to sail had been denied came today in a dispatch from Rotterdam. The general understanding has been that the arrangement would be approved and that some of the vessels would sail immediately.

The exports board, it was learned, will let no food cargoes go to European neutrals for at least two months, or until the American government has ascertained its own food requirements for the year and the size of crops to be harvested. All the neutrals, it is held, can feed themselves without difficulty until this information is available. The United States wishes to know also the size of the 1917 crops in the neutral countries.

THE FIRST OBLIGATION.

It was made clear that the United States has no intention of letting neutrals go hungry, but emphasis was laid on the fact that the government feels its first obligation is to the American people and to the Allies.

A counter-proposal that has been made to the Dutch, which the other neutrals are invited to accept, is that all neutral vessels now in American ports loaded with foodstuffs discharge their cargoes and proceed to Australia and Java for wheat and sugar. These cargoes would be brought back to the United States and divided between the United States and the neutrals.

American government officials feel that in asking the United States to supply them with foodstuffs the neutrals should be willing to increase the general food supply. This they would do in transporting food cargoes from Australia and Java, where large supplies cannot be moved because of the general lack of shipping. The neutral ships would have returned within two months and by that time the United States would be in a better position also to say how much it can spare from its own food store.

Most of the Dutch ships in American ports are loaded with corn, which has spoiled and is fit now only for cattle feed. This was taken into consideration by the exports board, which held that the need for cattle feed is much greater now in the United States than in Holland.

DUTCH OPPOSE IT.

It is not known how the neutrals will look on the suggestion that all their ships, numbering about 150, discharge food cargoes, but it is known that Chevalier Van Rappard, the Dutch Minister, does not view it with favor. Mr. Van Rappard takes the position that his government already is making great concessions in offering to share its food cargoes with the Belgians.

The food administration has approved the arrangement entered into between the Dutch Minister and the relief commission.

Announcement today in Ottawa that a representative of the food administration had concluded an agreement whereby the Canadian and the American governments will work in closest co-operation in the administration of food control drew the statement here that with Canadian assistance supervision of food distribution and control of prices in the United States will be made much easier. Canada now is expected to fix a wheat price identical with the American scale.

Telegrams reaching the food administration from various interests through the country generally approve the wheat prices fixed. Protests arrived from both Chicago and St. Louis today, however, where each city contends that the other was favored in the schedule of differentials announced by the wheat corporation.

DUTCH HEAR DECISION.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 1.—News has been received here that permission for the exportation of wheat and flour already loaded upon ships in American ports for Holland has been refused. Announcement to this effect is made in an official communication to the communal authorities, explaining the latest reduction in the bread ration and earnestly urging economy.

NO PROTECTION FOR PACIFIST PLACARDS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—A petition filed by Attorney Daniel O'Connell on behalf of the "American Patriots" for an injunction restraining Chief of Police D. A. White from interfering with the display of placards attacking the government was thrown out of court today by Superior Judge James M. Seawell.

O'Connell is under Federal indictment for an alleged attempt to obstruct the operation of the selective draft law.

MAILMEN MAY JOIN LABOR FEDERATION.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

OAKLAND (Cal.) Aug. 25.—Affiliation of the National Letter Carriers' Association with the American Federation of Labor will be an issue before the national convention of the letter carriers at Dallas, Tex., September 3 to 8, and the Oakland delegates to session are pledged to make a strong fight for the plan.

According to local members of the association, there will be a vigorous fight made for this affiliation. The carriers believe that such a move is to their interests and deny that it will in any way estrange their organization from the government's good graces. They point to the fact that the membership of the national letter carriers in the American Federation of Labor will tend to strengthen the latter organiaztion and add to its potency.

PACIFIST HAS ROUGH TIME IN WISCONSIN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BERTON (Wis.) Sept. 1.—A people's council meeting held here for the purpose of forming a local branch, broke up in a row after Robert Schilling of Milwaukee had criticised the national administration and President Wilson. Most of the audience demanded that he desist but he continued until most of those present engaged in a free-for-all fight. Nothing was accomplished toward the organization of a branch here.

The meeting was attended by residents of the village and farmers. Schilling narrowly escaped personal injury. His friends succeeded in getting him out of the hall unhurt.

GERMAN OFFICIAL GETS HEAVY FINE.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

AMSTERDAM (Netherlands) Aug. 10.—The record fine in Germany for fraudulent operations in foodstuffs has been imposed at Schweinfurt, Bavaria, on Commercial Councillor Georg and his clerk, Sturzenberger. They were fined $208,707 after being found guilty of illicit deals in malt, by which they were shown to have made a profit of $125,000.

Confession.

PREACHER SAYS HE SLEW EIGHT.

Minister Admits Committing the Ax Murders.

Hears Evangelist and Then Slaughters Children.

Gypsy Smith Gives Kelley an Idea, Also a Topic.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

COUNCIL BLUFFS (Iowa) Sept. 1.—"Slay utterly." "Suffer little children to come unto me." "There is more to be done. Slay utterly."

These are the statements of Lyn George J. Kelley, the itinerant minister now in jail in Logan, Iowa, in a letter in which he admits that he killed eight persons with an ax on the night of June 9, 1912. The confession is in the hands of Atty.-Gen. Havener of the State of Iowa. Kelley has sworn to the truth of the statement.

Attorneys for Kelley have repudiated the confession, charging that it was obtained by third degree methods. The crime and consequent developments have agitated Southwestern Iowa for five years and have figured strongly in State politics.

THE CRIME.

The crime to which Kelley confesses is the murder of Joseph Moore, his wife, four small children of the Moores and two little girls, guests at the Moore home. They were literally chopped to pieces with an ax while they slept. In his sworn statement Kelley says, in part:

"The voice of God directed me to commit the murders. I attended the Villisca Presbyterian Church services that Sunday night, with Rev. Ewing and his family. On our return we sat up and talked until 11:30 p.m. We then retired. Rev. Ewing and his family slept in a tent outdoors and I remained alone in the house.

"I was working on a sermon, the text of which was 'Slay Utterly.' I had heard Gypsy Smith, the evangelist, preach on that topic. I went to bed, was unable to sleep. I got up, dressed and went out onto the balcony. I heard a windmill creaking. At last I went back to bed but could not sleep, so I again arose, dressed and went out for a walk. That was about 2:45 a.m.

"I returned to the deserted Presbyterian Church and while alone in the sanctuary heard a voice which said, 'Go farther.'

DESCRIBES SLAUGHTER.

"I went out into the street and saw a shadow which beckoned me. It led to the Moore home. There I found an ax on a rubbish pile. I picked it up. Again I heard the voice. It said, 'Slay utterly.' The shadow led me to the door of the Moore home and into the house.

"I entered a room where four little children were sleeping. The voice said 'Slay utterly; suffer the little children to come unto me.'

"I answered the voice and said, 'Yes, Lord; they are coming.' Then I took the ax and killed them. Children had bothered me all my life.

"Again the voice said, 'There is more work yet, more sacrifices of blood must be made.'

"I pressed on into the room in which Mr. and Mrs. Moore were sleeping and killed them. I worked as fast as I could. I think I killed the mother first. I felt tired. I went downstairs, where I thought I could find a place to lie down. Then I saw two more little girls sleeping (the Stillinger children.)

"God's voice again said, 'There is more work to be done. Slay utterly.' So I killed them. I think I covered the bodies over with a sheet, but I cannot remember positively.

LEAVES AT DAYBREAK.

"I then returned to the Ewing home at daybreak and caught a train out of town for Macedonia at 5:19 a.m."

Rev. Kelley declared that when he was mounting the staircase in the Moore home, carrying the bloody ax, he felt that he was climbing Jacob's ladder.

Kelley was to go on trial at Red Oak, Iowa, next Wednesday, for the murder of one of the victims. Detective C. N. Wilkerson, a Burns operative, had attempted to demonstrate the guilt of F. F. Jones, wealthy banker of Villisca, a member of the State Board of Education and a former State Senator, and had been holding a series of mass meetings in Iowa and one in Omaha, in an effort to arouse public sentiment in behalf of Kelley. The confession was given voluntarily by Kelley, who dictated the statement of his own free will, Atty.-Gen. Havener declares.

Kelley's attorneys assert he was bulldozed into signing the confession and the trial will probably open as scheduled.

Kelley preached at Alto Pass, Ill., just before his arrest.

CONFESSION VOLUNTARY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) Sept. 1.—The confession signed and sworn to by the Rev. Lyn George J. Kelley, but later repudiated, was entirely voluntary upon his part and was obtained by the most pacific means, Atty.-Gen. H. M. Havner said tonight in an authorized statement.

Mr. Havner told for the first time the exact circumstance surrounding the confession. He said:

"I went to Harrison county last Thursday particularly to make a speaking engagement at Magnolia. I took with me a statement of additional evidence gathered in the Kelley case, and which, by law, we are required to serve upon the defendant in advance of the trial.

"This statement of evidence was read to Mr. Kelley by Sheriff Meyers of Harrison county shortly after 10 o'clock in the evening. I was not present and had not planned to see Kelley before catching my train to Council Bluffs.

INTERRUPTS STATEMENT.

"Before the Sheriff completed reading the statement Kelley stopped him, declaring that he was guilty of the murder and was ready to make a statement.

"He told the Sheriff that he wanted to see me and Meyers told him that there was no use talking to me unless he was ready to make a clean breast of the whole affair.

"Kelley then said that he wished to confess and Meyers sent word to me not to take my train.

"Kelley was then brought to the Courthouse and in the presence of a number of witnesses made a detailed statement of the crime. J. J. Hess, an attorney from Council Bluffs; Meyers, J. J. Risden and two other persons, both residents of Logan, whose names I do not know, were present, as well as two court reporters whom we called in.

"So far as there being any intimidation is concerned Kelley was anxious to make the statement and talked at length on the crime. He was informed by myself and others present that anything he said would be used against him and that he need expect no reward in the way of clemency or otherwise.

"He was told this at least twenty times during the night. He began to make his statement at about 12:30 and finished it about 3:30.

DICTATES CONFESSION.

"Three or four hours after he had returned to the jail he again called for the Sheriff, this being shortly after 7 o'clock, Friday morning. I had left the city and was in Council Bluffs. Kelley told the Sheriff that he desired to dictate an account of the crime. This he did, in the presence of the Sheriff, County Attorney and clerk of the court, making his statement while it was written directly upon a typewriter.

"This statement he read over, signed, and swore to, entirely of his own free will and without the slightest pressure being used."

ANCIENT YOUTHS IN CAPERS AT PICNIC.

HADE AND HEARTY VETERANS SCOFF AT OLD AGE.

Sixth Annual Reunion of the Old Folks at Sycamore Grove Attended by Scores of Men and Women Nearing Century Mark. All Forget Passing of Time.

Nearly 1500 persons, all over 70 years old, were at Sycamore Grove yesterday for the sixth annual reunion of the old folks. The picnic began at 9 o'clock in the morning and lasted until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Dr. George L. Spining of Pasadena, was the principal speaker.

Ten persons over 90 years old were there and included, A. A. Annas, 96½ years old; Dr. J. M. Peebles, 95 years old; Deborah Sackett Dodson, 93; Stephen H. Taft, father of Judge Taft, nearly 98 years old; J. H. F. Jarchow, 92; Silas Judd, Cordelia Egleston Howard, Mrs. Mary K. Bartlett and E. N. Cleveland; the last two from Pasadena 91½ years old and Norman A. Millard, 90 years of age.

R. E. Baldridge celebrated his 84th birthday at the old folks picnic yesterday by bringing a party of forty including children, grandchildren and great grandchildren. They had a fine time and partook of a family dinner spread on two long tables.

Maj. A. Weed, a widower, 71 years old, made a few remarks in which was a warning to widows. The major says he has been married three times and is now eligible for the fourth ceremony. He expects to be present at the widows' picnic, to be held today.

At the picnic luncheon which was spread under the great old sycamores, 100 gallons of coffee was served. The picnic is said to have been the jolliest of any given at Sycamore Grove for more than a year. Many of the folks who were young half a century ago made short talks but the best part of the affair was when little groups gathered to talk of the days of their youth.

The impromptu programme ended when the 1500 hoary-haired men and women joined in singing "America."

Unemployed Between Ages of Sixteen and Twenty-one Advised to Assist in Support of Men in the Field—Points Out Obligation to Country.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Young men of the country between the ages of 166 and 21, not now employed, are called upon by President Wilson to serve the nation by joining the United States Boys' Working Reserve. In a letter made public today by Secretary Wilson, the President says it is the patriotic duty of these young men to help support the nation in the present crisis. The President's letter says:

"Permit me to express my great appreciation of the work undertaken by the United States Working Reserve of the employment service of the Department of Labor. To give the young men between the ages of 16 and 21 the privilege of spending their spare time in productive enterprise without interruption of their studies at school, while their older brothers are battling in the trenches and on the seas, must greatly increase the means of providing for the forces at the front. It is a high privilege, no less than a patriotic duty, to help support the nation by devoted and intelligent work in this great crisis.

"Let me express the hope that the young men of the country not now permanently employed, may eagerly enter the Boys' Working Reserve to fit themselves by training and study for good citizenship and productive service. In this way they can show themselves worthy of patriotic fathers who have fought for democracy in the past, sustain their patriotic brothers who are fighting for it today, and command the affectionate pride of the brave mothers who are silently bearing the burdens at home."

FOREST FIRE NEARS HEAVY TIMBER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 1.—The forest fire which has been burning in the City Creek Canyon for three days was reported late tonight to be almost beyond the control of the 150 men who are fighting it under the direction of forestry officials.

The fire was reported to be within 150 yards of City Creek bridge, and it was stated the structure was expected to go before morning. The flames were less than a quarter of a mile from Nash flat. Foresters said if the fire reached that flat it would get into heavy timber and become extremely serious.

Reserve Bank Report Scores Reds for Disloyalty.

General Food Production in West Shows Increase.

California Bean Crop this Year is Immense.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—The bulletin of the Twelfth Federal Reserve Bank made public today says:

"The Industrial Workers of the World menace is important in certain sections. Instead of everyone, proprietor, clerk and laborer alike, feeling it a patriotic duty to work a little harder and a little longer in order that we may spare men for waging the war to bring peace and safety to the world, efforts were made to diminish both hours and output of work. The result is, of course, to hamper the effectiveness of this country's efforts, which in effect is the same as aiding to increase the enemy's effectiveness."

It appears clear, says the report, that the total of food products of the Twelfth District will substantially exceed that of last year.

In announcing an abundance of foodstuffs generally the report says two unfavorable elements were conspicuous. Heat and drought in the Northwest have considerably curtailed the yield of grain, wheat and oat crops being reduced, in spite of increased acreage, to not over 75 per cent. of last year's production. The orange and lemon crops in California suffered so greatly from the extraordinary heat about the middle of June that the government report of August 1 gives the condition of oranges as 45 and lemons 55, compared with a 10-year average of 87 for each. The effects upon the citrus fruit of this unusual heat are not all harmful, however, as it has destroyed or reduced some of the citrus pests.

California's yield of both oats and wheat, though only 6,000,000 or 7,000,000 bushels each, has been in excess of that of last year. Barley is an important California crop and shows a large increase, the earlier estimate of a crop of 1,000,000 tons having been more than confirmed. This compares with about 550,000 tons last year. The output of beans, of which it is said that California produces one-third of all grown in the United States, will reach 6,480,000 bushels, a 50 per cent. increase over last year.

The corn production in this district is relatively unimportant. Oregon, Washington and Idaho show a prospect of more than 7,000,000 bushels, which is 100 per cent. increase over last year.

Rice acreage in California is rapidly increasing and this year's product is expected to be greater than ever. The yield of potatoes has been generally large.

Reports from Utah and Nevada have indicated unusual production of all crops.

It is estimated that the yield of grapes will exceed that of last year by 10 to 20 per cent., and that the product of deciduous fruit will reach a record total in California although in the Northwest there will probably be no increase over last year.

One possibility of a new supply of meat has been brought to the attention of residents of the Pacific Coast in placing whale meat upon the menus of leading clubs and hotels. Its flavor is not unlike that of beefsteak.

Lumber production in the Northwest is now much below normal because of labor conditions.

MEETING CONDEMNS PEOPLE'S COUNCIL.

RIVERSIDE CITIZENS DEMAND END TO ACTIVITIES.

Call Upon Governor to Forbid the Fantastic Organization Holding Conventions in California, Which Prides Itself Upon its Loyalty—Strong Resolutions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 1.—At a big mass meeting called by the County Council of Defense, and held in front of the Courthouse tonight, resolutions were adopted condemning the local branch of the "People's Council for Democracy and Peace."

Resolutions were adopted expressing regret and humiliation that in this county, where the sentiment of patriotism is overwhelming, a few misguided people have associated themselves in the so-called "People's Council." The resolutions "condemned the organization" as one "working for the enemies of the country while conducting a fantastic propaganda for peace. Its operations cannot fail to delight the Kaiser and encourage him to continue the war."

"As we have dedicated our boys to the service of democracy and humanity in this great war," the resolutions continue, "and they are going willingly and bravely to the front, it is an act bordering on sedition to oppose in this hour of national peril the efforts which are being made to render their service effective."

The action of the authorities of other States in forbidding representatives of the council holding conventions was commended and Gov. Stephens was urged to take similar action in behalf of the loyal State of California.

While the public meeting was in progress, a quiet session of the "council" was being held in a public hall, under surveillance of government secret service agents and local police authorities. Knowing they were under observance, the session was as devoid of thrills as a Sunday-school picnic. Local authorities, however, have announced that they will make prompt arrests if treasonable utterances are made at any meetings.

CANADA JOINS IN FOOD AGREEMENT.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

OTTAWA (Ont.) Sept. 1.—A working agreement on the food problem between the United States and Canada has been reached after a conference of two days between F. C. Walcott, representing Herbert C. Hoover, United States food administrator, and representatives of the Canadian food administration, it was announced from the food controller's office here today.

The official statement, in part, says:

"Plans are maturing for joint action to secure essential commodities for export while protecting the general public against exploitation and permitting fair returns to producers.

"There is absolutely no foundation for the recent reports that the British government will not require any more Canadian bacon and hogs. A reduction of at least 25 per cent. in home consumption in the dominion is essential if sufficient quantities are to be released for export to Great Britain and other European Allies. What the British government has done is to prohibit the import of bacon, butter, hams and lard except under license. The British Ministry is establishing a single buying agency in the United States for these Canadian and American products and will make all purchases through this agency beginning September 3."

WHERE IS BILLY BECK?

Anxious Mother Tells Police She Forgot Son on Way Home.

Has anyone in town seen Billy Beck?

Billy, so the police were informed last night, was last seen at the corner of Pico and Grand streets, where in company with his mother he was awaiting a street car to take them to their home, No. 5154 Cimarron street.

The car came along and Mrs. Beck boarded it. When she arrived home she discovered that she must have forgotten Billy, for he was not to be seen anywhere, the detectives say.

As the youngster in question is only 6 years old, some anxiety was felt for his wellfare, and the police appealed to. Up to a late hour last night Billy was not discovered, at Pico and Grand or anywhere else.

MAKING GIANT STRIDES, PERSHING TELLS PEOPL

Urges American People to be Pati Until Army Takes the Field.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Sept. 1.—Maj.-Gen. Pershing, who has remained in Paris clearing up the work at his old headquarters and who is not going to field headquarters until Sunday or Monday, declared today, in connection with the plans for the coming winter, that the American people must learn the meaning and value of patience and not expect that the expeditionary forces landed in France can be rushed immediately to the front line trenches. To put an inadequate, insufficiently-supplied force into actual combat, he said, would merely be making a mistake which the Germans unquestionably have hoped and expected the United States would make. It is the determination rather that when America does take her place in the line, shoulder to shoulder with the other Allies next year, she will be fully prepared to go through the summer campaign and make the Germans feel the full weight of her military power.

PERSHING'S STATEMENT.

"Those of us who have fully studied the situation and who know what must be done," said Gen. Pershing to the Associated Press, "are anxious that the people at home shall strive to realize the immensity of the task in which we are engaged and shall, through patience and confidence, help us to accomplish that task in the shorte sible time. FIFTY THOUSAND PEOPLE CHEER AS SOLDIERS GO MARCHING BY.

Carpet of Flowers Laid by Grateful Citizenry for the Sturdy Feet of Three Thousand Drafted and Service Men in Spectacular Parade.

LOS ANGELES and her neighboring cities bade farewell yesterday to the men who will represent her at the battle front. She wrought into words and deeds the spirit expressed upon the brassard pinned 'round the sleeve of every local member of the great liberty army — "Los Angeles Honors Her National Defenders."

That which the city as a whole felt only in the abstract was vividly impressed upon her in concrete form yesterday. Its thousands of people, who lined the sidewalks for scores of city blocks, were given ocular demonstration of the magnificent answer to the national call to service in the defense of democracy in the world. The young men who have had the honor to be selected for this service proudly marched through the main thoroughfares of the metropolis of the Pacific Coast. The American colors floated over them, and martial music quickened their steps. In the line were the colors of all other nations that are making the heroic struggle against Prussianism—a sight that invoked hearty cheers all along the way. Back of the soldiers-to-be came the soldiers-that-were—the veterans of the Spanish-American War and the frosty-headed and bent veterans of the Civil War—sharing in the rounds of applause, and impressing upon the stalwart young men just drafted the honors that are in store for them.

THREE THOUSAND MARCH.

About 2000 drafted men and members of other branches of the service were in line, and fully 50,000 citizens of Los Angeles assembled to do them honor. All along the line of march, from Eighth and Olive to Broadway, thence to First, to Spring and down to Sixth street, both sides of the streets were lined with cheering people. The Los Angeles contingent for the great liberty army literally trod a pathway of flowers. Along the way girls and women, with baskets of choicest blossoms, threw them with prodigal hands. The tokens of love and admiration were deftly caught by the marching men, pinned on their coats or carefully presedved as mementoes of a great occasion in their lives.

And the spirit of the marchers, as it showed itself in their bearing! There was not a sad face in the entire line of drafted men. Many of them expressed an exaltation, and there were smiles and bright faces, and glances when some personal friend called a greeting, and a bearing that already betokened the soldier.

The line of march started with the spirited strains of the "Washington Post" March. Seventeen bands were placed in the parade. At sufficient intervals to be pleasing to the ear, one band after another took up patriotic airs or popular selections, and there was constant music, from the start of the parade until the last man had entrained for Exposition Park.

The parade's formation included mounted police, organizations of the regular army, organizations of the United States Navy, organizations of United States Marine Corps, organizations of the National Guard in Federal service, the selected men, veterans of the Spanish-American War, veterans of the Indian campaigns and the Civil War.

At the City Hall the parade was reviewed by Mayor Woodman, who occupied a position on the tower balcony leading from his offices. With him were "Billy" Sunday, "Ma" Sunday, Miss Sunday, Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougher and a few others. Frequently some one in the line of march would recognize the famous evangelist and yell, "Hello, Billy!" and Satan's sworn enemy would give each a hearty response. Along the line of march at points of vantage were stationed many societies and organizations in a body, to add their bit to the heartfelt greeting extended by Los Angeles.

OFFICERS' RESERVE.

First in line, after the police escort and leading band, came members of the Officers' Reserve Corps. Then, with the bands interspersed, came the eighteen divisions of the selected men. The only item of uniformity in their array was the brassard, with its purple lettering, which was worn by each man on his coat sleeve. There were light suits and dark ones, straw hats and felt hats, and caps from somber coloring to the brightest tints. Yet, as these men swung along, keeping step to the spirited music, one could visualize them as they will appear within a few months, arrayed in the uniform of the soldier, ready and eager to be off "somewhere in France."

COAST ARTILLERY.

Following the eighteen divisions of the selected men came 350 men from the Coast Artillery of the Third District, stationed at the Los Angeles Harbor, and 300 men from the naval reserve training station at the outer harbor. There were also bodies of Federalized National Guardsmen from the near-by camp, and the Seventh Regiment Band.

FROM FORMER WARS.

Then followed the sturdy veterans of the Spanish-American War, and after them, headed by Gov. Barry, the grizzled veterans from the National Soldiers' Home, some halt and limping, but all proud to participate in this demonstration in honor of the men who are to become soldiers. Next came a great turnout from the various local posts of the Grand Army of the Republic. The veterans of former wars shared equally with the selected men the constant rounds of applause and cheering all along the line.

As rapidly as each division reached the end of the route, Los Angeles street at the Pacific Electric station, the men were entrained and carried to Exposition Park. The handling of this great body of men was carried on most expeditiously, and there was not a balk in the arrangement.

As soon as the parade cleared Broadway, car service was resumed there, and before the marchers had completed their route down Spring street, the great crowds in the upper section of the city were being scattered to various points. Large numbers went directly to Exposition Park, arriving there before the first contingent of the men who had been in the parade.

Charles O. Hatch, 86 years old, of Denver, a veteran of the Civil War, fainted from exhaustion at Third and Spring streets, while the column of veterans was passing that intersection. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital by the Bresee Brothers ambulance and revived by Police Surgeon Dieterle. Mr. Hatch made the trip from his brother's home in Lenox, Cal., where he is staying, to march with former comrades.

BIG PARADE IS FREE FROM ANY DISORDER.

Acting Chief A. W. Murray was personally complimented by many of the officials connected with the parade yesterday for the manner in which he policed the streets and handled the crowds. The street detail of officers was made at his direction by Acting Captain Dave Adams.

More than 500 policemen were along the line of march, and the entire morning and night watches of all police divisions were held on reserve at Central Station in case of trouble. Chief Murray personally directed the passage of traffic and the movement of the marching men at Sixth and Los Angeles streets.

Acting Captain H. R. W. Kriege, in command of University division, was officially thanked by members of the Reception Committee for the manner in which he placed patrolmen at Exposition Park. Chief Murray also complimented Capt. Kriege for his work.

From Los Angeles.

FIRST UNIT OF LIBERTY ARMY LEAVES THURSDAY.

THE first contingent of the new Liberty Army, 170 men in all, being 5 per cent. of the city's quota, will leave Los Angeles Thursday evening at 6 o'clock on a special train over the Southern Pacific coast line, arriving at American Lake late Saturday afternoon. This special train will make stops at Santa Barbara and Ventura to pick up the men from those two cities.

The men from each draft district will be in charge of a leader or captain, who will be responsible to his board for the safe delivery of the men under his command. The leader will be supplied with vouchers for the purchase of transportation and meal tickets for the food which the men will require while making the trip. Each man will be allowed 60 cents per meal while en route and will be given transportation and a berth in a sleeper. The rules are that three men occupy a section, or forty men to a car.

District No. 17 will be in charge of David B. Richardson, who was appointed by the board to handle the details such as arranging for meals and transportation for the men while on the way to camp. All details had been attended to and the men were planning on leaving next Tuesday, but the orders received yesterday postponed the date to Thursday.

The orders issued to the men require that they travel light, taking only such personal belongings as are barely necessary for their comfort on the train. When they arrive at camp they will be given a full equipment for the training period. The men who compose the first contingent will be at once assigned to such duties as they are especially fitted for. The orders asked that cooks, mechanics and men who have had previous military experience be sent in the first 5 per cent., as they will be expected to prepare the camp for the coming of the second contingent of 40 per cent. This will mean 1260 men from Los Angeles alone.

ANNUAL BEAN DAY.

Chamber of Commerce of Northern San Diego County Will Celebrate Tomorrow in Honor of its Million-Dollar Crop.

In honor of the district's million-dollar bean crop, it has been decided by the Labor Day celebration committee of eleven, to call the joint celebration of the Chamber of Commerce of Northern San Diego county and the Oceanside Camp, Modern Woodmen of America, at Oceanside, the "First Annual Bean Day," the plan being to celebrate Labor Day each year with a jubilee under this name. H. J. Franklin, for thirty-five years general claim agent of the Santa Fe Railway, is chairman of the committee. A feature will be a free dinner for all comers, to be served from tables placed under a huge canvas ramada on the beach. Among the bands of music will be the reorganized Houk Band. There will be athletic and aquatic sports, the athletic features including a tug of war between the Indians of Pala and the bean growers of the coast at Oceanside, as well as a baseball game. A basket-ball game between Escondido and Oceanside and Fallbrook is also on the bill. Addresses will be made by officers of the Woodmen and the Chamber of Commerce, and during the early hours of the afternoon Mr. Houk, who is president of the Chamber of Commerce of Northern San Diego county, will turn over to the officers of the chamber his check for the amount of money due under his offer made at the field day in Del Mar on August 4, of giving two dollars for one that the members secured for the chamber within thirty days from that date.

The membership campaign is being waged with vigor. To date 400 new members, each paying the annual dues of $1.00, have been secured, besides four life memberships calling for $50 each. Cash in the coffers of the chamber on account of the membership drive amounts to $1800.

CHURCH CONFERENCE OPENS AT MOSCOW.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

MOSCOW, Thursday, Aug. 30.—The encumenical congress of the orthodox church, which is "empowered to reform the church within the limitations prescribed by the Holy Writ and by the dogmas, canons and traditions of the church," held its first business session today.

The congress is expected to sit continuously two months, completing its labors before the convocation of the constituent assembly, to which body the proposals of the congress for the future inter-relations of church and state will be submitted for confirmation.

It is proposed that the church, while remaining closely linked with the state, shall be entirely autonomous.

Present expectations are that the reform movement will reach its height by the revival of all Russian orthodox patriarchate, which has been in abeyance since the days of Peter the Great.

At Exposition Park.

ELABORATE PROGRAMME CONCLUDES GALA DAY.

In City's Name Mayor Bids Godspeed to Departing Soldiers, while Vast Crowd Applauds.

FOLLOWING the parade of the liberty army yesterday an immense throng of enthusiastic and patriotic citizens assembled at Exposition Park to honor the soldiers and soldiers-to-be. When the advancing columns swung 'round the corner of the armory and marched up the wide drive to the museum building, where they were to be reviewed by Mayor Woodman, a mighty cheer broke from the waiting thousands. Miss Marjory Wilson, clad in an officer's uniform and mounted on a black horse, galloped up to the reviewing stand and, bringing her mount to a halt, saluted the Mayor and said: "Mr. Mayor, I have the honor to announce the arrival of 3000 of the nation's defenders." This brought forth another thunder of applause and as Mayor Woodman stepped forth to greet the men the band played "The Star Spangled Banner," while the great assemblage stood with bared heads till the last strains had died away.

The men of the eighteen city draft districts then ranged in column formation in front of the reviewing stand, while the Coast Artillery marched by. Then came the Naval Reserves, spick and span in their natty white uniforms. Then the gray, grim veterans of the Civil War, their time-worn faces ablaze with enthusiasm and their slowing steps made faster by the thrill of patriotism. The last contingent to arrive for review was the Spanish War veterans.

The line of march through the park was strewn with flowers. Bevies of young girls preceded the marchers and from all sides they were showered with a profusion of blossoms. When the last division of the parade had passed, Mayor Woodman took his place in a waiting automobile and delivered his address, after which he pinned the bronze emblem, which the National Defenders Committee had struck off for the occasion, on the breast of each of the leaders of the eighteen city districts.

MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

In his address to the volunteer units and the men of the new liberty army, Mayor Woodman said:

"For the first time in the history of the United States her young men are being called to enlist in a war which means service upon European battlefields.

"Los Angeles has ever stood ready to do her part in any national crisis. The men that she is sending to the battle front are you, in whom she has explicit confidence. [Applause.]

"Into your hands is committed that flag, the Stars and Stripes, representing the hopes of all people who desire the liberty of the individual. [Applause.]

"Remember that that flag represents the highest type of citizenship, the most advanced principles of human self-government known on earth. That flag has never been raised in support of oppression. It has never known defeat, and never been lowered to any foe. [Prolonged cheering.]

"Toward that flag the whole civilized world is looking for relief. Guard it as you would your sacred honor, and bring it back to us unsullied, and without a stain.

"The citizens of Los Angeles are interested in you who are going to the front, and today, for the purpose of expressing to you their appreciation of the services that you render to your country, have desired to convey that appreciation to you in some tangible manner. [Cheers.]

"Therefore, the city presents to you a memento—this bronze button, on which is stamped the seal of the city of Los Angeles, and the inscription: 'Los Angeles honors her National Defenders.'

"Wear it with you in this service. Bring it back with you from the battle front of Europe. And all the time know that your city, State and Nation appreciates your services, bids you Godspeed as you go out upon your duties, and stands ready to welcome you upon your return." [Prolonged cheering.]

GENERAL PROGRAMME.

After the ceremonies at the reviewing stand the men broke ranks and dispersed over the park to enjoy the hospitality and entertainment prepared for them. The armory court was thrown open and dancing was indulged in all afternoon, closing with a grand ball in the evening. There was every kind of athletic sport and the moving-picture companies added to the day's entertainment by putting on a series of comedy stunts all over the park.

Stands were erected on which boxing, wrestling and fencing contests were held and a banner cabaret entertainment was given throughout the evening.

Promptly at 5:30 o'clock the great barbecue was made ready for the hungry men who had marched the downtown streets. This was one royal feast, too, and the men who partook of the great slabs of barbecued beef, huge plates of beans, great hunks of watermelon and the choicest Spanish tamales, expressed their appreciation vociferously between bites.

There were men in the parade yesterday who have filed claims for exemption, but from conversations overheard here and there it is evident that many of these will withdraw their claims and ask to be certified for service. Yesterday's celebration will have the effect of arousing a better feeling in all the men called. They have touched elbows with their fellows, they have caught the spirit of the thing and they will march away with a new eagerness and patriotism that bodes ill for the enemies of their country's flag.

Wife to Blame if Husband Drinks, Says Druggist Brown, of Cleveland, Who Tells Wife What To Do

A New Treatment Given Without the Consent or Knowledge of the Drinker.

Cleveland, O.—No wife has a right to blame her husband because he drinks, says Druggist Brown, of Cleveland. It is her fault if she lets him drink and bring unhappiness and poverty to her home and she has no right to complain. A woman can stop a drinking husband in a few weeks for half what he would spend on liquor, so why waste sympathy on a wife who refuses to do it. Druggist Brown also says the right time to stop the drink habit is at its beginning unless you want drink to deaden the fine sensibilities of the husband you love. Begin with the first whiff of liquor on his breath, but do not despair if he has gone from bad to worse until he is rum-soaked through and through. Druggist Brown knows the curse of strong drink because he himself has been a victim. He was rescued from the brink of a drunkard's grave by a loving sister, who after ten years' time, revealed the secret to him. She saved him from drink—rescued him from his own depraved self, by giving him a secret remedy, the formula of an old German chemist. To discharge his debt to her and to help other victims out of the murk and mire he has made the formula public. Any druggist can put it in the hands of any suffering wife, mother, sister or daughter. Just ask the druggist for prepared Tescum powder and drop a powder twice a day in tea, coffee, milk or any other drink. Soon liquor does not taste the same, the craving for it disappears and lo, one more drinker is saved and knows not when or why he lost the taste for drink.

One woman who used this prescription on her husband says: "It is going on the fourth week since he has touched a drop of anything in the form of liquor or used tobacco of any kind. He seems already like a different man. Tescum has gained a wonderful enthusiast in me. I regard it as a Godsend. Just think, I have never seen my husband sober for more than 48 hours in years and now it is going on one month since he had his last drink."

Another one gratefully writes: "I have used tescum powders on my husband and find it one of the greatest cures in this world. He hasn't taken a drink for almost five weeks and says he never will. My home does not seem like the same place and life seems worth living. I hope thousands gain what I have. This has been a good new year for me without drink in my home."

NOTE—Tescum, referred to above, should be used only when it is desirable to destroy all taste for alcoholic drinks of every kind. The wife who approves of drinking in moderation and believes her husband safe should give it only when she sees, as most do in time, that the danger line is near. You take no risk with Tescum, as it is sold in this city under a steelbound money-refund guarantee by Sun Drug Co. and other first-class druggists. They guarantee it to do the work or refund the money.

BOMB SHELTERS ARE LATEST LONDON FAD.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Now that London is in the firing line, the London business man who takes the 9 o'clock train every morning finds himself making a new kind of mental map of the city. He steers less by the old squares and the city churches; his new landmarks are solid, ugly buildings, fit to defy the bombs of air raiders. He thinks in terms of reinforced concrete rather than of stained glass and weathered stone.

Nearly 2000 buildings in the downtown section of London have now been officially inspected and approved as "shelters" in case of air raids. Each of these buildings has a sign attached conspicuously to its front wall: "This building may be used as a shelter in case of air raid."

GERMANS FROTH BERATE WILSON.

Intimation Kaiser is a Liar Touches Sore Spot.

Statements in the Peace Note Arouse Newspapers.

Even Journals in Holland Indicate Surprise.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 1.—According to a telegram to a local agency, the Cologne Gazette, in commenting on President Wilson's reply, said:

"Every word of President Wilson's note is grotesque nonsense. The climax of all the nonsense is that the German people are groaning under a cruel government. Has not the entire German people, rich and poor, Socialist and Conservative, continually repeated that it stands firm for the Emperor and the empire? The solution of the puzzle is that Mr. Wilson wants to persevere with the war. America's business world needs the war at this conjuncture. America's future needs the big army that is just in the making.

"Mr. Wilson hopes for disunity in Germany and therefore offers the German people peace at the cost of the German government's fall. This trick is too transparent. The German people may be relied upon to range themselves firmly around the Emperor against this hypocrite."

FROM "VOLKS ZEITUNG."

President Wilson was anxious on this occasion to be noncommittal, says the Volks Zeitung, "for if he had said 'Yes' to the papal note that would have meant that he was taking leave of ambitious plans of his own, while if he had said 'No' he would have unveiled openly his activity as a prolonger of the war and would have angered the friends of peace in the United States who constitute a majority of his electors. He finds a good way out of this quandary by railing at the ruler of Germany and by rejecting every peace treaty which does not contain the German people's guarantee."

The Boersen Zeitung thinks the German people will not permit themselves to be driven into a dangerous internal conflict by their enemies, adding: "This is the object of the Entente, which sees in the weakening of our internal front the only prospect of victory. This hope will be wholly disappointed."

VIEW ON AUTOCRACY.

President Wilson's reference to the German autocracy as distinct from the German people is commented upon unfavorably by the German press. The Tageblatt of Berlin says:

"President Wilson speaks of democratization of Germany, which we also desire, but it is an internal question and one we consider forbidden territory for foreigners, as a condition of peace."

The Lokal Anzeiger says: "The whole fallacy of President Wilson's argument is clear from the sentence in regard to the freedom of nations which are themselves to decide their own fate. President Wilson will not give us freedom to decide for ourselves, but would take it from us."

The Morgenpost says: "The German people will not fail to return the answer which already has been made once by the president of the Reichstag with the unanimous accord of the members of Parliament, which is elected on the basis of the most liberal franchise in the world. This time, however, the answer will be clearer, much clearer."

The Vossische Zeitung says: "Probably President Wilson does not know anything about the declarations of Gen. Soukhomlinoff [former Russian Minister of War, now on trial for treason] and of Gen. Januschkevitch [former Chief of the imperial General Staff of Russia] concerning the real proceedings which led to the outbreak of the war. Otherwise he would have changed his tactics."

COMMENT IN HOLLAND.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

THE HAGUE, Aug. 31.—Two leading organs of Holland's diplomatic capital agree that President Wilson's answer to the Pope's peace proposals does not bring nearer a cessation of hostilities. The Nieuwe Courant describes the answer as a fresh war declaration clothed in pacific garb and an invitation to the German people to prove their desire for peace by rising in revolt.

"It is not clear what form of new evidence President Wilson desires," the newspaper complains, in citing the latter part of the note, "for, judging from the text, even the most favorable peace terms would find no acceptance if they did not emanate from a government appointed by a parliament."

The Nieuwe Courant, however, sees a bright spot in the President's assurance that the aims of the United States are unchanged and especially rejoices in his rejection of an economic war.

THE VADERLAND.

The Vaderland heads its comment with the title "Wilson's answer is not made for Europe" and says it can only truly and fully satisfy the Russian Maximalists, for "the central peoples are left no choice but to kick out their governments."

This, the newspaper declares, reveals a surprising lack of understanding on the President's part and that he does not realize sufficiently the strength of the intergrowth of the peoples and the dynasties. He views the European states as he does the States of the American Union and only seems to have the most superficial notions of the intricacies of the European problems, the Vaderland asserts, and its conclusion is:

"This strange document breathes an atmosphere not of Europe, and if we must wait until it permeates here, Europe will have to suffer much longer and a terrible war burden."

ROTTERDAM VIEW.

The Roman Catholic Maasbode of Rotterdam thinks that President Wilson's answer to the papal note, examined from a practical angle, warrants the conclusion that the door to peace is neither barred nor bolted.

"For, contrary to logical reasoning from his premises," it says, "President Wilson does not want the war carried to a bitter end nor would he refuse to deal with the present German government, but only if it truly represented the will of the nation as expressed by genuine parliamentarization."

The Maasbode sees a gradual development of conditions in Germany on the lines President Wilson desires. Why, then, it asks, "could not the President have declared himself in principle with the Pope?"

BERLIN STILL GROPES.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN, Aug. 31 (via London, Sept. 1.)—Berlin still is without definite knowledge of the contents of President Wilson's reply to the Pope. Up to noon today the only information available was contained in press comments filtering in from near-by neutral capitals. The Lokal Anzeiger is the only Berlin newspaper venturing to comment. It says:

"Even if the text of President Wilson's reply to the Pope is not yet available, the press comment at hand indicates that the President of the United States is again differentiating between the people of Germany and the German government, and that Mr. Wilson again is harping upon the alleged struggle between democracy and autocracy. This is wholly in keeping with his nature since he discarded the mask of a peace friend. President Wilson apparently is striving to outdo Premier Lloyd George as a war baiter. The former professor of history knows full well that peace never will come if our foes decide to wait until their assumptions have been realized."

ROMANOFF FAMILY NOW IN APARTMENT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PETROGRAD, Sept. 1.—Nicholas Romanoff, the former Emperor of Russia, and his family are now living in a fourteen-room apartment on the second floor of a large old-fashioned house at Tobolsk, Siberia, according to reports just reaching Petrograd. Nicholas and the former Empress each have a room, two rooms have been put aside for the four daughters and one for Alexis, the former heir apparent. The other rooms, except the dining-room, kitchen, reading-room and so forth, are occupied by the servants. The house is without a garden, and the only way of getting fresh air is from a small balcony.

The new home of the Romanoffs was not ready when the family arrived and they were compelled to spend two days aboard the small steamer on which they traveled the last fifty miles down the Tobol River. The former Empress and her daughter Olga rode to the house, while the other members of the family walked.

The day of their arrival was a holiday and few persons saw the newcomers except for a small crowd which had assembled to watch a priest conduct the usual ceremony of blessing the house for its new tenants. The guards of the former royal family are mainly cavaliers of the Order of St. George and fusiliers, and the family is virtually under the same mode of life as at Tsarskoe-Selo.

Nicholas has asked permission to engage tutors for the children. The mother herself will attend to the religious instruction of the younger ones. It cost the government 10,000 rubles to move the family to Tobolsk.

DECLARES WAR WILL KILL MILITARISM.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, July 30.—The dread that militarism will be promoted by the war is becoming more remote, in the opinion of the Bishop of Oxford expressed recently at a conference of clergymen of all denominations to discuss the formation of the league of nations. On the contrary, he said, the war is destroying militarism and all the deeper indications point to a great strengthening of democratic feeling.

Drawing a distinction between the German people and their government, he said, he desired that every German should understand that his people were to have a fair chance among the nations of the earth.

Tragedy.

MOTHER DEAD; SON NEAR IT.

He Vainly Tries to Save Her from Deadly Gas.

Fumigation of House Takes a Terrible Toll.

Heroic Effort at Rescue Nearly Fatal to Boy.

The deadly fumes of hydrocyanic acid, used for fumigating purposes, claimed one victim and endangered the life of another one, when Mrs. Mary Wilkins and her 15-year-old son, Archie, who rushed to her assistance, were overcome in one of the rooms of their home at No. 882 East Fifteenth stree,t last night.

The son's heroic sacrifice was in vain. Ten minutes after his mother left him and opened one of the sealed and gas-filled rooms on the second floor, the lad heard Mrs. Wilkins moaning faintly. He dashed up-stairs and into the room. In the dark he groped until he stumbled across the limp body on the floor. Growing weaker every second, he dragged his mother to the window, but found himself unable to open it. With one supreme effort he called for help, and then sank to the floor alongside the body.

Neighbors who heard the faint alarm, succeeded in carrying the two from the building. They were rushed to the Receiving Hospital, where Police Surgeons Stadfield and Beggs, assisted by the entire staff, sought to check the ravages of the poison on the heart and the lungs of the two victims. Every known measure was applied, but Mrs. Wilkins died twenty minutes after being placed on the operating table. The boy's condition is said to be critical.

There are nine rooms in the Wilkins home, and six of them were being fumigated. According to the story told Detectives Vernand and Toomey by Mr. John Wilkins, the husband of the dead woman, he and the rest of the family were away. Archie returned from work and was eating his supper when Mrs. Wilkins went upstairs.

Just what happened, and whether the accident was due to lack of ventilation when one of the sealed rooms was opened, or to the fact that the woman did not allow sufficient time for the fumes to escape before entering the room, the police were unable to learn. Mr. Wilkins told Detective Toomey he was under the impression that the fumigation company's agent told his wife to go into the rooms and open them after 6 o'clock.

A further investigation probably will be made by the police today. Mrs. Wilkins's body was removed to the Sutch Undertaking Company's mortuary.

AUSTRALIA HAS BIG COTTON BOOM.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BRISBANE (Australia) July 25.—Chiefly because of the war, cotton growing is being taken up with increased vigor by farmers in this state (Queensland), as shown by the large amount of raw material which the Department of Agriculture is receiving for ginning purposes. To foster the industry the department has been buying all the raw cotton grown in the state, ginning it and selling it on behalf of the growers. Last year the amount ginned up to June 30 was 20,485 pounds, including 5800 pounds from New Guinea. Up to June 21 this year the department has received 34,805 pounds from Queensland growers alone, and farmers are still sending in their pickings. Growers are guaranteed 3½ cents a pound, and any balance made after the department has paid the expenses of ginning. Last year growers received a fraction under 5 cents a pound. This year's cotton is from seed obtained from the United States.

SMALLPOX EPIDEMIC IN GERMANY ENDS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

ROTTERDAM (The Netherlands) July 29.—The smallpox epidemic in Germany seems to have been pretty well controlled. Brought into the country last summer from Volhynia, it rapidly spread, and assumed a disquieting character at the end of last and the beginning of this year. The latest figures, however, show that, while in March there were between 100 and 160 controlled cases weekly, the number declined in April to about 100, and has since then continued to decrease. Forty cases were reported in the week ending June 3, according to the Public Health Board, fifty-four in the week ending June 9, forty-one in the week ending June 16, and eighteen in the week ending June 23.

Police Club Strikers.

the strikers the lawlessness would cease. This brought sarcastic rejoinders from the leaders of the citizens' committee.

Chief of Police White then agreed to give orders to the police to use force in order to suppress rioting.

WEAKEN BEFORE STORM.

Events of the day tend to show that the city administration is receding from its position that the platform men and the property of the United Railroads are outside the law so long as they operate cars with non-union crews. When the municipal special carrying employees of the Union Iron Works started for the downtown district at noon, policemen entered the cars and searched the passengers for concealed weapons. After threatening violence the union men left the cars. "To hell with the municipal line if you are not going to permit us to break up the railroad company's service," they shouted.

More than 800 of the union men walked over the Twentieth-street hill and started to stone cars on Mission street. A squad of fifty policemen was waiting for them and they were forced to disperse. Again the policemen used their clubs.

ATTACK 26 CARS.

Twenty-six cars of the United Railroads were attacked during the day by strikers. In addition to injury to property that totals many thousands of dollars seven platform men were beaten so badly that they were sent to the hospitals. One motorman of the United Railroads, Frank Mulich, received a fractured skull and is reported dying tonight. He has not recovered consciousness since the attack. Passengers on the car assert that they can identify his assailants.

A. G. Mullen, a passenger on the Powell-street car, gave the following report of the attack upon Mulich by the strikers:

"When the car had reached Greenwich and Powell streets four men climbed upon the car and paid their fares. As the conductor started to ring them up one of the men struck him with a blackjack, knocking him to the floor of the car. Then they rushed through the car and attacked the motorman. As he closed with one of them another struck him in the back of the head with a blackjack, knocking him off the car.

"As he fell to the street the four men jumped from the car and started to run. Three passengers on the car started after them. I was one of the number.

PROTECTED BY FIREMEN.

"Seeing that we were closing in on them they ran into the engine house of the fire department. We tried to follow them, but the firemen stopped us, asserting cooly that no men had entered there. Yet, we were not fifty feet behind them when they darted into the house. One of our number telephoned the police. When the officers came they searched the fire house and reported that they found no one. The men had passed on through and escaped by a rear door."

This is only one of many instances in which both the police and fire departments have shielded the strikers fleeing after committing deeds of violence.

Gangs of strikers in the Mission district were horrified this afternoon to find that the platform men were carrying deadly weapons. This morning each platform man was permitted to take a pick handle on his car. Prior to this time the police has arrested every platform man found carrying any kind of instrument for self-protection. The Chief of Police has rescinded that order and the platform men are now permitted to carry wooden weapons.

INJURIES KILL WOMAN.

A report was received from Ingleside tonight that one of the six women struck by flying missles on a Mission-street car yesterday, had died of concussion of the brain. This has not yet been confirmed. One of the women was removed from the car yesterday in an unconscious condition and carried to Ingleside in a private ambulance. Her name was not obtained by the police.

An attempt has been made by the Rolph press and the walking delegates to convey the impression that the deeds of violence of the last week have been committed by gangs of nondescript hoodlums and that union men were not to blame. The facts are that the waterfront element is not taking any part in wrecking the cars and beating up the platform men. These acts are committed in cold blood by organized gangs of members of labor unions.

HONOR AMONG WHARF RATS.

There is a certain code of honor among the wharf rats and the barflies which does not permit them to beat up defenseless men simply for the pleasure of seeing blood flow. They will take part in a raid that promises plunder or that promises to secure revenge in their private quarrels, but they still retain a certain feeling of personal honor that will not permit them to make themselves part of a gang who commit murder for pure deviltry.

Secret police reports are to the effect that most of the striking carmen have been acting as sergeants in the army of organized lawlessness. Each commands five or six men who were not employed on the cars. These sergeants know the old car men and point them out to the others. Refraining as much as possible from making the attack, they avoid being recognized by the victims. By hunting in gangs of four or five, the union men always have others for eye-witnesses to testify that they were not aggressors in case of arrest. These affidavits are not questioned by the union-labor police judges. The result is that there have been but two jail sentences given to strikers or strike sympathizers, while more than 200 persons have been injured in attacks on cars or carmen.

STOP CARS TO AVERT RIOT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—Operation of United Railroads cars was halted here at 8 o'clock tonight at the request of D. A. White, Chief of Police. The request was made, it was said, with the object of averting threatened riots in connection with the strike here of 1750 platform men of the company, to enforce demands for increased wages, shorter hours and the right to organize.

Fifty policemen, earlier in the evening, appeared at the Union Iron Works and began to search several thousand metal trade workers who, homeward bound, were boarding the city-operated steam trains.

It was reported the workers had prepared to mob United Railroads cars from the trains at intersections. Folowing discovery of bolts and pieces of steel on two workers and their arrest on charges of carrying concealed weapons in a time of rioting the workers refused to board the train and walked home.

"We are acting now entirely upon the suggestion of the Chief of Police," said President Lilienthal of the United Railroads tonight. "The police asked us to stop operating the cars at 8 o'clock and we have. Tomorrow and Labor Day we shall act upon the advice of the police."

Fourteen hundred platform men now operating the United Railroads car signed a petition presented today to Mayor Rolph, demanding safety. The petition says a similar appeal is addressed to the Governor and the western commander of the army, and if police protection is not granted the men "will exercise constitutional rights of arming themselves for defensive purposes."

RUSSIA REMOVES PRESS CENSORSHIP.

PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT CUT OUT RESTRICTIONS.

Newspapers Must be Licensed and All Responsibility for Publication is Fixed but Old Punitive Measures are Abolished—Government Regulates Printed Matter.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PETROGRAD, July 28.—Two radical laws issued by the provisional government establish freedom of the press by abolishing entirely the censorship, including, it is implied, the military censorship, and forbidding all punitive measures except such as can be taken by judicial process.

The first law abolishes the notorious "chief administration department for press affairs" and the system of registration, inspection, censorship and penalties associated therewith. Instead is created a new press governmental organ known as the Chamber of Books, a title invented by Peter the Great, but long in abeyance. At the Chamber of Books will be registered all printed and lithographed productions, including reproductions of works of art. The chamber will be granted a subsidy with which to buy press productions both for the use of state institutions and for presentation to public libraries. Further, in connection with the chamber there will be established a bureau which will prepare and publish for public use summaries of the whole periodical press, native and foreign.

The second law proclaims unqualified liberty to print and reproduce, no license or permission being required; but it admits state regulation of the press in so far as it provides for the compulsory registration of printed matter by the system prevailing in many European states. Every individual or corporation which founds a newspaper must register the title, place of publication price, and name of the responsible editor, who must be a person residing within the empire. The printer is obliged to deposit with the state two copies of each issue, one for filing in the Chamber of Books, the other for the use of the government. Newspapers will be obliged to print without charge official repudiations or corrections of their reports. All printing offices must be registered.

For breach of the law penalties in no case exceeding $150 may be imposed. The normal minimum penalty imposed, always without trial, by the old government, was $1500, the aim being to ruin independent press organs. Fines may not be imposed otherwise than by courts of law, and no newspaper may be suspended or suppressed.

POLICEMAN STAKES LIFE AGAINST LUCK.

BOLDLY GRASPS DESPERATE MAN TRYING TO SHOOT.

Crazed Austrian Runs Amuck and Fires Revolver at Many Bystanders—Officer Marks Bravely Siezes and Disarms Would-be Murderer—Not Hurt.

One of the greatest exhibition of bravery by a member of the police department was shown by Patrolman R. P. Marks, of the lieutenant's office, when he rushed right up to the muzzle of a snapping revolver in the hands of a man who ran amuck near Second and Hill streets late last night, and disarmed him before he could resume firing into the crowd that gathered on the opposite side of the street.

The prisoner, who gave the name of George Luvich, an Austrian, began by rushing upon Mrs. Ethel vluşnik, in the Bella Napoli restaurant, Second and Hill street, and insisting that she go with him. As the young woman parleyed with Luvich, Eugene Corey, a moving-picture actor living at the Hotel Northern, came to her assistance and put the man out of the place.

Luvich then drew a gun, and Corey beat a hasty retreat through the rear door, over the fence, and straight to the police station, where he gasped out the news to Patrolman Marks.

Marks, together with several other officers and newspaper reporters, jumped into an automobile and raced toward the scene of the impending shooting. As the car neared Second and Hill streets, Luvich fired at a man standing across the street, and then ran south on Hill street.

He dashed into a doorway, turned around, and faced Marks as the officer rushed toward him. Gun in hand, Luvich stood still for a moment, and then pulled the trigger twice. Although the officer had his gun out, he did not fire, but kept after his man, grappling with him and disarming him. To the unexplained freak of fate that kept the revolver cylinder from revolving, Marks probably owes his life, as the gun missed fire. Luvich was charged with assault with intent to kill and was locked up.

There is little talk of s arate peace in Moscow. It is unpo ular. The Nolshevik, or extreme S cialist, who is always under suspici as being in the pay of Germany r ceives scant courtesy in Moscow.

There is a get-together sp among all classes in Moscow. WOMEN TAKING ACTIVE PART.

Many Employments in Army Now Open to Them.

Drive Motor Transports and are Busy as Clerks.

Old Masculine Traditions are Being Cast Aside.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

HEADQUARTERS OF WOMEN'S AUXILIARY CORPS, BEHIND BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE, Aug. 11.—Before thmis war the only military sphere for which women were thought eligible was nursing the sick and wounded. Even that privilege was vehemently contested, and it is barely sixty years since Florence Nightingale won for her sex liberty to perform that service for their country.

It is not unnatural that women should, for the first time, in this war have demanded a more active part than it was previously thought possible for them to play in military operations. For this war differs from any previously waged in its call on the whole population instead of on a comparatively small section of fighting men. It is a war in which not only every man capable of fighting is needed to face the foe, but the energies of every remaining individual of the population is needed to grow food, to make munitions, to keep up the shipping, or to maintain civil industries.

Women, as well as men, are compelled to take a larger part than heretofore, and they have not been content to confine their efforts to civil occupations. There are many employments in connection with the army itself which they felt as capable of performing as men, whereby they could release men for places in the trenches and firing line.

The army itself has gradually cast aside its masculine traditions, and after first allowing, has gradually come to welcome the help offered by the women in jobs hitherto thought of as altogether outside their province. In the War Office in Whitehall, only 156 women were employed in July, 1914; by the end of 1916 this number had risen to 5500, or, including the cable and postal censors, to nearly 7700.

From a very early period in the war, the services of women were enlisted as clerks in recruiting offices, after many hundreds of them by voluntary service had shown their aptitude for this kind of work. Before the war the work of Regimental Record offices was entirely performed by soldier clerks; the employment of women for this work has long since been universally adopted.

Women drivers in the army's motor transport have now become commonplace. This was an even greater innovation than that of employing women as army cooks, for not only were women automobile drivers unheard of in the army before the war, but they were extremely rare in civil life.

The experiment of women chauffeurs for army work was at first tried on a small scale; then in February, 1917, the experiment was sanctioned by an army council order, which laid down the hours of work, rates of pay and general conditions of service for "superintendents, head drivers, mechanic drivers, and garage washers."

Altogether over 400 young women have been thus far enlisted under this category.

President Vliegen of the Socialist Party and Alderman of Amsterdam Declares Most Difficult Question of War will be Disposal of Alsace-Lorraine.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

AMSTERDAM (Netherlands) July 31.—"Our negotiations with the Russian delegates have converted my pessimism into optimism," declared W. H. Vliegen, president of the Dutch Socialist party and Alderman of the city of Amsterdam, in relating some of his Stockholm impressions to the Dutch Socialist organ, Het Volk. Mr. Vliegen is a member of the Netherlands delegation that took the initiative in calling of the Stockholm conference of Socialists.

"The Russian delegates are fine fellows," he continued. "I have never seen such Russians. They are sincere internationalists and they have a good idea of the position. Ehrlich, especially, is a quiet, strong political leader. Moreover, they have behind them a strong military force, which, if Germany renders it necessary, will vigorously back up their demands. It is not advisable for Germany to make the Russian revolution a still greater enemy.

"The most difficult question of all in the peace negotiations," declared President Vliegen, "is and remains that of Alsace-Lorraine, and the German majority Socialists refuse even to recognize its existence. The German minority is better in this respect, but it does not exhibit qualities justifying the hope that it will take the lead in the transformation that Germany wants.

"All parties are agreed," he said, "that we must strive after a peace without annexations and without war indemnities. But that does not mean that no compensation whatever must be given. Every month the Germans make a war levy of 60,000,000 francs in Belgium. That money ought in any case to be returned. The late Imperial Chancellor himself declared, on August 4, 1914, that Germany was committing an injustice against Belgium and would make good all the wrong thereby inflicted. She will not be able to evade this.

"Moreover, she has carried off large stocks of materials and goods, factory plans and the like, not only out of Belgium, but also out of Northern France. This has been done in flagrant contravention of the Hague convention of 1907. It is only fair that compensation shall be given for this."

Concerning his meeting with the Czech delegates President Vliegen said:

"The Czechs wants to be absolutely separate from Austria and to form an independent state, the Czech Socialists just as well as all the others. Their grievances against Austrian comrades are of the same nature as the general grievances of the Czechs against the German Austrians. They accuse them of having followed the same line of conduct in their policy as the government, namely, to have, with the help of the Poles, oppressed other nationalities. It is significant that, on the occasion of the conference held at Berlin in the beginning of 1916 between German and Austrian Socialists on economic relations between the two allied states, the Czechs were not invited."

REPORT BIG LOSSES ON RUMANIAN FRONT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 31.—The correspondent of Reuter's, Ltd., at Odessa, sends the following advices under yesterday's date concerning the Rumanian situation:

"The latest communication from the Rumanian battle front reports fierce resistance, often favorable for Russo-Rumanian forces, against violent enemy attacks from the region of Oitus, Oona and the valleys of the Sereth and the Putna. The losses have been heavy on both sides.

"It is affirmed from authoritative sources that Field Marshal Von Mackensen urgently demanded strong reinforcements for his army. Rumanian army circles are still hopeful of retaining Moldavia, counting on the co-operation of large Russian divisions, but the Rumanian government is taking all the measures dictated by prudence. A great number of Rumanian Deputies have arrived at Odessa."

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Almost all former German vessels now in the American navy have been given new names. Secretary Daniels issued an order today changing the names of twelve ships, as a result of his attention having been called last week to the embarrassment the sailors were subjected to by being compelled to wear upon their hatbands names such as "Kaiser Wilhelm II." The newly-named ships are:

Vaterland to Leviathan.
Kronprinzessin Cecilie to Mt. Vernon.
Kaiser Wilhelm II to Agamemnon.
Amerika to America.
Hamburg to Powhatan.
Grosser Kurfuerst to Aeolus.
Koenig Wilhelm II to Madawaska.
Neckar to Antigone.
Rhein to Susquehanna.
Princess Irene to Pocahontas.
Frederick der Grosse to Huron.
Barbarossa to Mercury.

The vessels George Washington, President Grant and President Lincoln will not be renamed.

The names of the tugs Pocahontas, Huron and Powhatan are changed to Allegheny, Chemung and Cayuga, respectively.

ITALIAN MINISTER RESIGNS IN PIQUE.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

ROME, Aug. 10.—The entrance of the United States into the war as an ally of Italy was the indirect cause of the resignation of Minister of Marine Triangi and the nomination in his stead of Admiral Del Bono.

During the recent secret session of Parliament, Minister Triangi was called upon, as is customary, to answer questions regarding the condition of his department. One of these was:

"What help will the United States give us presently?"

He answered with seamanlike frankness that it would be a long time before the United States could be of any great service, since she was yet only preparing for war. His response was attacked by the opposition to the ministry and Triangi was so chagrined that he never attempted any more speeches during the session.

BRITISH AVIATORS BOMB RAILWAY LINE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Sept. 1.—A bombing raid was carried out by the naval air squadron Friday night on the Ghistelles airdrome, according to a British Admiralty statement tonight.

"Several direct hits," says the statement, "were made on sheds in the southwest corner of the airdrome, in which vicinity a fire was started. Bombs also were seen to explode on the adjoining Ostend-Thourout railroad line. Many tons of explosives were dropped. All our machines returned safe."

STRANGE CRAFT WILL RAISE SUBMARINES.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

HAARLEM (Netherlands) Aug. 10.—A novel mother ship for submarines has just successfully undergone its first official trial in the harbor at Amsterdam. It has been built in Holland for the Spanish navy. The vessel looks like two long, narrow boats joined together, and its chief feature is a crane capable of raising objects from under the sea to a weight of 650 metric tons and from a depth of 150 feet. This strange craft is over 255 feet long and 60 feet wide. Each of the two parallel hulls is about eighteen feet wide, and between them is a space twenty-four feet in width over which is arranged the electrically-driven lifting apparatus for the hoisting of sunken submarines.

Apart from the crane, the ship is equipped with big workshops for the making of repairs, as well as arranged to serve as a depot ship for the Spanish submarine fleet. A cylinder filled with water, weighing about 720 tons, acted the part of a submarine in the trial just held.

Real Palace.

FRENCH OCCUPY KAISER'S HOME.

Summer Residence at Corfu Remarkable Creation.

Suggestion of Imperialism Dominates Place.

Ideas of Art not Pleasing to Esthetic Eye.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

CORFU (Island of Corfu) Aug. 3.—Emperor William's famous sumer palace of Achilleion, on a height overlooking the Bay of Corfu, had the French flag flying over it when we drove up for a visit today. At the gateway the arms of the Hohenzollerns blazed from the massive iron gates thrown back on either side. But these proud arms were for the moment obscured by the solid ranks of French soldiers, native troops from French Senegal in the heart of Africa, black as coal, in the French grey uniform with red fez. They saluted the French officers as we passed through the gate, and their trumpeter sent a French bugle-call echoing through the German Emperor's gardens.

All about were evidences that French had replaced German direction at this imperial establishment, and that instead of being a summer plaything for majesty, it was now being put to some real use. The island itself is temporarily under a French military governor, French battleships and cruisers crowd the harbor and dominate the heights, and French soldiers and sailors make up a considerable part of this medley of races emptied into Corfu by the stress of war. Here at the palace grounds we passed French Red Cross nurses tending wounded French soldiers in the olive groves, and one of the high officers of the French medical service came from the palace to greet the party as it arrived.

This palace of the Emperor is one of the curiosities of the East and is typical in many ways of the eccentric genius which conceived it. There are palaces the world over, but nothing like this exists anywhere. Only Emperor William could have developed such an idea. The whole scheme is imperial and heroic. The palace is planted on the very spot where Ulysses came for his sojourns, and from the imperial chamber one looks out on the classic island of Ulysses where the great hero spent his leisure hours. Like Ulysses, Emperor William came here for his leisure, and every May until the war began the imperial yacht circled Europe from the North Sea to the Eastern Mediterranean in order that he might enjoy these classic and heroic surroundings during the loveliest period of the year. Looking down the steep cliff one sees the imperial landing place where the yacht was moored during these visits. Here the Emperor first set foot, reaching the palace by a flight of steps hewn in the rock, lined with marble statues of Greek deities. Or if he did not wish the climb, an auto took him through the miles of drive in the olive grove making gradual ascent to the lofty palace.

SMACKS OF IMPERIALISM.

The palace dominates a vast stretch of land and water—Albania just across the strait, then Greek Epirus to the south, the mountains and valleys of Corfu near at hand, Italy lying low in the dim distance to the west, and the clear blue waters of the Adriatic reaching in all directions through the tangle of islands. It is suggestive of imperialism, and one thinks of what Emperor William had in mind when he looked out on this circle of many lands and their strategic waters.

There is one definite clew to his thoughts, in the heroic statue of Achilles, which he built at the highest point, dominating all this land and water. The statue is of bronze, showing the hero armed from head to foot, sword in hand and shield on his breast, straining forward for the fight and looking intently out on this empire of foreign lands and waters spread at his feet. Perhaps William had in mind something more than a toy palace dedicated to Ulysses and Achilles, and that the old Trojan heroes revived dreams of universal conquest.

The palace is of white marble, squarely and solidly built after the Greek classical design, with the suggestion that a German hand had modernized the old classical lines. Along the middle front, facing the sea, runs a deep, wide marble gallery or porch, and similar wide galleries are at the eastern end and where the entrance is located. The building is three stories high, with a frontage of about 500 feet, and has about 100 rooms, including ballrooms, state dining-rooms, a royal chapel, and the suites of imperial chambers. The marble columns of the galleries, the window cornices and friezes along the front, are all essentially Greek, and the whole place has the massiveness and majesty of a Greek temple.

Entering the main hall, it was not clear whether one was in a palace, or temple, or a museum. Immediately to the right was the royal chapel, with the large fresco of Munkacsy's "Christ Before Pilate" back of the altar. By an ingenious electrical contrivance a flood of light could be turned on to the central figures of the fresco, giving them a sort of luminous and living effect, almost as in a cinema, though it seemed a queer contrivance for a chapel. One could hear a murmur of "boche" run among the visitors, indicating their view that a vandal hand had put together this mass of fresco and effect.

Elaborate frescoes and mirrors covered the ceilings and side walls of the state dining-room. The subjects were always drawn from Greek antiquity, but the figures of dancing nymphs and fawns looked rather heavy, as though they were the big-limbed people of the north, instead of the fine and delicate creatures of legendary Greece.

WEIRD IDEAS OF ART.

The grand stairway was of marble, with black iron balustrade wrought into curious shapes showing the German imperial eagles. This grand stairway runs up three stories, through garish yellow walls covered with strange frescoes and painted mirrors. These painted birds and vines on mirrors were pointed out by some of the vistors as an anachronism of art.

The huge painting of the "Triumph of Achilles" occupies the post of honor at the top of the grand staircase. It is one of those striking pictures, full of life and movement, like Gari Melchers' "War" in the Congressional Library at Washington, and showing the same straining horses and men pushing forward to the combat. Achilles is shown in full panoply of war, driving his chariot and dragging along the prostrate body of his foe, chained to the chariot wheel, with the rabble howling at the spectacle. Art connoisseurs do not always approve this picture, but the ordinary observer is attracted by its dash and has the feeling that he is here in the presence of one of those great tragedies of the Homeric age.

The palace garden is, however, the really remarkable feature of this establishment. In originality, beauty and extent it is probably one of the finest gardens in the world. The unique feature is the strict adherence to the standards of legendary Greece, making one feel as though transported into some fairy-like precinct of the dim past. At every hand are marble and bronze statues of the old deities, heroes and muses. The palace entrance to the gardens is formed by a wide Ionic colonnade where the imperial family used to pass their evenings. Near by is the garden of the muses, with heroic figures of the muses before each marble column. One looks through long vistas with these muses stretching away at either side of the walks. In the center is a dancing bacchante, and in the neighboring fountain the water gushes from the mouth of a huge dragon carrying off a young girl.

WONDERFUL GARDENS.

These gardens are continued one after another in terraces running down to the sea. Each has its distinctive feature. Some are lined with beautifully wrought marble balustrades. Others are a wild tangle of giant palms, with trunks three feet in diameter, or of flower beds laid out like the pavement of a temple. In one of these gardens is the chief art treasure, the "Dying Achilles," showing the hero in the death struggle with the arrow in his heel. One turns from the artistic merit of this statue, which is conceded by all critics, to the colossal bronze of Achilles notable chiefly for size and condemned by most critics. This colossus rises some thirty feet above the base and is a sort of modern rival to the Colossus of Rhodes or the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor. It is striking, however, and even sensational, planted here in this tropical garden, at a commanding point overlooking a vast area, and in a pose expressive of imperial conquest.

Passing out of the palace entrance one of the visiting officers noted the tall ornamental lampposts lighting the way to the entrance. They were apparently of bronze, but as the officer struck his cane on one of these richly-carved posts it did not give back the ring of genuine bronze. And on closer examination the officer's artistic taste was greatly shocked to find that these elaborate lights at the very entrance of the Emperor's palace were of some base metal colored to imitate bronze.

As the party withdrew, it was observed that the military automobile which had brought us up to the steep ascent, bore on its doors the imperial crest of Emperor William. This was but one of the many accessories of his summer palace which had now passed out of his hands. While it was only an automobile, yet it seemed to be typical of the extent to which this imperial disaster had become personal to the Emperor—not only lost colonies and palaces, like this summer plaything symbolizing Achilles, but even the automobile with the Hohenzollern arms—now passed beyond his reach.

DISCOVER CAUSE OF DREAD DISEASE.

INFANTIDE PARALYSIS GERM HAS BEEN ISOLATED.

Physicians at Jewish Hospital in Philadelphia Announce Discovery, and Cure for Malady is Expected to be Found Shortly. Monkeys Used in Experiments.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—Announcement was made today by physicians of the Jewish Hospital that the germ of infantile paralysis has been discovered and isolated. The cure of the dread disease, it is believed, is a matter of but a short time now that the cause is known and the germ can easily be studied.

Working day and night for a year in the attempt to isolate the germ of the disease that last year killed 6000 children in the United States, three Philadelphia physicians have made public the results of their investigation.

The three physicians are Dr. Myer Holis Cohen, a specialist in children's diseases; Prof. John A. Kolmer of the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania and the Polyclinic College, and Dr. George A. Heist.

This is the second time that the infantile paralysis germ has been found and isolated, the Rockefeller Institute in New York being the first to do so in 1913. The institute acknowledged today that the work of discovery of the germ in the local medical institutions marked a considerable advance over its own research. The story of the discovery, which is hailed as epochal by medical experts in the country, is to appear this week in several national medical journals.

The local research workers have found the germ in patients who died of infantile paralysis and in monkeys who died after being inoculated with the disease. In addition to this they explain how the germ can be easily isolated by other investigators.

GERMAN CLASSES US WITH THE RUMANIANS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 1.—Confidence in the effect of unrestricted submarine warfare is expressed by Admiral Reinhardt Scheer, commander of the German battle fleet, in an interview in the Leipzig Tageblatt, the admiral declaring that he expected "everything" from it.

"This confidence," says the admiral, "is shared by all our submarine commanders, and no difference of opinion exists about it in the navy. It would be a mistake to name a definite date, but I am fully convinced that if the rate of the sinkings continues as at present the day must come when England will recognize that the war does not pay."

Questioned about losses of submarines and as to antisubmarine methods, Admiral Scheer said:

"With almost ideal obstinacy the English miss the mark and so far we have only been met with guns, nets and mines and not with any new antisubmarine appliances. I can confirm the statement recently made regarding our losses, which in the average are two to three monthly and are more than equaled by new construction."

Regarding America's support of Great Britain, Admiral Scheer had this to say: "I do not under-estimate it, neither do I attach too much importance to it. The Americans may make themselves unpleasant by means of increased supplies of airplanes, technical material itself, but they can hardly harm us seriously from a military point of view and they will never become dangerous. They will no more be able to turn the scale in favor of the Entente than Italy or Rumania."

Admiral Scheer expressed his conviction that the submarines will have decided the issue of the war before America is ready to send a large army to Europe.

FAREWELL TO REAL BEER IN MUNICH.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

AMSTERDAM (Netherlands) Aug. 10.—"The last stein of real beer," has been given a pathetic send-off in Munich, the city of the famous Rathskellers. According to the Munich Neueste Nachrichten, it was on a Sunday evening when the last barrel had to be broached at the palatial beer taverns. Mine host announced to his customers that this was going to be the last real pint at the old price, as the next day only small beer was to be served which would be dearer in price.

"It was a sad moment, and heavy were our hearts," says the Nachrichten, "when the last stein was lifted on high and drunk in silence."

Brewery prospects are not bright, as it is announced that for next fall a much smaller supply of barley will be available.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, Sept. 1.—The big automobile accessories shop of Charles H. Stone, in the heart of the business section of Redlands, was gutted by fire this afternoon causing a loss of about $10,000. Stocks of the Redlands Book Store, owned by J. F. Arthur, and of the Harris Dry Goods Store, owned by Philip Harris, were damaged by the smoke. They are on each side of the Stone store. The fire, it is believed, started from benzine which leaked from a barrel of vulcanizing cement.

Mr. Stone had a stock valued at $10,000 and most of it was burned or damaged by water. The damage to the building reached $2000, fully covered by insurance. There was $1000 insurance on the stock.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 1.—This is a great year for the bee men of the Salt River Valley, despite the fact that the season was shortened by a late spring. There has been profit in extracted honey, even when it was quoted at 5 cents a pound, f.o.b. Phoenix. Today the price is not less than 12 cents, with 14 cents for some lots. The crop is estimated at seventy carloads, most of it shipped East for confectioners' use or as a substitute for sugar in the making of sweet cakes. Highest prices usually are received for the lighter honey, much of which is gathered from the acacia-like bloom of the mesquite tree. The balance of the crop is not as nearly white, coming from the alfalfa bloom.

The high price is based mainly upon the cost of sugar, to this extent affected by the war. On the other hand, the outbreak of the war saw a decline in honey prices, due to the closing of the German market to honey from South America, which thereupon was thrown upon the New York market.

The hills of Arizona now abound in wild bees, mainly from colonies that have escaped from Salt River Valley hives. The yellow Italians are to be found in hollow trees, mainly in junipers, while the black bees prefer caves, such as frequently are found behind ancient cliff dwellings.

AN ODD CONDITION.

An odd condition has been presented the Arizona Commission on State Institutions in the case of Mrs. C. S. Lidenmeyer, adjudged insane. She was about to be committed to the Arizona asylum when the commission learned that she and her husband had been in Phoenix only a few days and that the woman last spring had been an inmate of the insane ward of the Los Angeles county hospital. So communication forthwith was started with the Los Angeles authorities, upon whom the charge of the woman was considered a proper one.

In the meantime, the husband has addressed an extraordinary letter to Gov. Campbell, declaring himself a pacifist, in opposition to the aims of this country in the war, and demanding deportation to Switzerland, his native land, or England, the former home of the wife. He does this in preference to the return of the wife to California. Annexed is a threat: "Should my wife get worse, as she has done for the past two days, I may also consider to end the sufferings of the poor creature myself."

SERBS PATRIOTIC.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) Aug. 30.—Serbians and Croatians of the Warren mining district, in a mass meeting called for the purpose, have made formal declaration of their patriotic devotion to the joint cause of their own and their adopted lands in the great war, at the same time deploring the causes that led to the late labor troubles here. Expression is made of satisfaction with local labor conditions and the leaders of the I.W.W. movement are declared enemies of true labor and of the country. The deportation of the Wobblies is declared to have been a "war measure," designed to prevent further serious and dangerous disturbances. There is regret that some of the Serbians of the camp were misled and hope is expressed that they will be given opportunity to show a better spirit.

The Bisbee City Council has passed an anti-picketing ordinance of drastic sort, prohibiting intimidation, or threatening of any person at work or seeking work or interference with any person who may wish to trade at any place of business. On the Arizona statutes is a law, passed at the demand of labor unions, permitting "peaceful picketing."

The latest information from Columbus, N. M., is that Fred H. Moore, the I.W.W. attorney, has declined to accept escort of Lieut. Fred J. Wright, intelligence officer, U.S.A., or the official guarantee of Sheriff Wheeler and that he will not come to Bisbee at all.

Led by Mrs. A. T. Hoy, the women of Bisbee have formed a branch of the Loyalty League and will join with the men in a grand celebration of Labor Day, on which date will be honored, especially, the young men who have been drawn for the new army.

STEAMSHIP MAN DIES.

H. W. Roberts Passes Away While on Trip to New York City—Wife at Bedside When Death Came—Was Well Known In Coast Cities.

H. W. Roberts, local agent of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company, died suddenly in New York yesterday. The telegram, received here by his associates in the steamship company, stated that he passed away in St. Luke's Hospital. Mrs. Roberts was with him.

Mr. Roberts was born in England forty-five years ago and when about 20 years of age went to Canada. Later he went to Chicago, where for a time he represented the Burlington and Quincy Railroad as traveling representative. Afterwards he became agent for the Canadian Pacific Railroad at Seattle, remaining there until he became a partner with the Cook & Co. shipping agents. When the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company was established on the Pacific Coast he became the agent at Seattle and in 1915 came to Los Angeles, where he had been agent ever since.

Besides his widow Mr. Roberts leaves a 9-year-old son. The funeral arrangements are not yet made.

WAR AND FREEDOM OF SPEECH.

BY JOSEPH LEWINSOHN.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] "It is the purpose of the 'People's Council' co-operating with similar organizations in Germany, Russia, France and England to make peace over the head of our government." "We want our soldiers to throw away their arms just as the Russian soldiers have done. Then we will have peace." These sentiments were expressed at a meeting held in this city a few days ago, following which the speakers proceeded to denounce the President of the United States as worse than a Czar and to charge that he plunged the country into war against the wishes of 90 per cent. of the people and at the behest of the munition makers. It was further charged that our avowed purpose of carrying democracy to lands over the seas was a fraud, because we have no democracy at home.

There is danger that, when the casualty lists begin to come in, crazy talk in public places will result in breaches of the peace if not worse, and, in the ensuing turmoil, legitimate criticism to our liberties—may be suppressed along with sedition.

It becomes proper, therefore, to inquire whether the little Americans and the German language press are protected in their unpatriotic propaganda by the guaranty of free speech in the Constitution, for which they themselves have no respect.

What is the meaning of free speech?

The purpose of the constitutional guaranty has been tersely stated by the highest court in the land in two late cases. Said the Supreme Court of the United States:

"The law is perfectly well settled that the first ten commandments to the Constitution commonly known as the 'Bill of Rights' were not intended to lay down any novel principles of the government, but simply to embody certain guarantees and immunities which we have inherited from our English ancestors, which had, from time immerial, been subject to certain well-recognized exceptions, arising from the necessities o fthe case. In corporating these principles into the fundamental law there was no intention of disregarding the exceptions which continued to be recognized as if they had been formally expressed."

Again the same court said:

"The main purpose of such constitutional provisions is to prevent all such previous restraints by the publications as had been practiced by other governments, and they do not prevent subsequent punishment of such, as may be deemed contrary to the public welfare."

A few illustrations gathered from the judicial decisions will suggest to the reader when liberty of speech ends and license begins.

There have been but few attempts by State Legislatures to infringe upon freedom of speech. A Virginia statute prohibiting judges and public school officials from speaking in political campaigns has been held unconstitutional. Likewise statutes passed in Missouri and Wisconsin practically prohibiting civic bodies from reporting on the qualifications of candidates have been declared void. As the right of free speech includes the right to remain silent, a Kansas statute requiring employers to give a certificate correctly stating the reason for the discharge of employees has been held unconstitutional by the Kansas Supreme Court, but the soundness of that decision may be doubted and there is authority the other way.

On the other hand, as said by the United States Supreme Court, "freedom of speech and of the press does not permit the publication of libelous, blasphemous or indecent articles, or other publications injurious to public morals or private reputations." And it has been held that laws of the following import restricting abuse of speech are constitutional: a statute restricting press reports of executions to a bare statement of the facts; statutes prohibiting editing or publishing articles encouraging crime, or publications made up almost altogether of police reports, reports of crime and lust; an ordinance prohibiting the distribution of handbills on public thoroughfares; an ordinance forbidding delivery of addresses in a public park.

The Supreme Court of Kentucky has recently decided that a minister who had made a vulgar comment in the pulpit regarding sexual matters was guilty of a breach of the peace and not protected by the Constitution. And within the past few years the highest courts in New Jersey and New York have held that advocacy of sabotage or murder of rulers is not included within liberty of speech. Said the New Jersey court:

"The fundamental answer to the point raised is that free speech does not mean unbridled license of speech, and that language tending to the violation of the rights of personal security and private property and toward breaches of the peace is an abuse of the right of free speech . . . incitement to the commission of a crime is a misdemeanor at common law, whether the crime advocated be actually committed or not."

Said the New York court:

"The Constitution places no restraint on the power of the Legislature to punish the publication of matter which is injurious to society according to the standard of the common law. It does not deprive the State of the primary right of self-preservation. . . . All courts and commentators contrast the liberty of the press with its licentiousness, and condemn as not sanctioned by the Constitution of any State appeals designed to destroy the reputation of the citizen, the peace of society, or the existence of the government."

Without particular reference to the matters noticed in the opening paragraph of this communication, are public officers clothed with sufficient power to deal with dangerous agitators?

It is generally thought that there is no power to prevent the holding of seditious meetings. But that is far from clear, because certain exceptions to the rule against previous restraints have grown up in recent years. These exceptions are in boycott cases, where the feature of intimidation is present; in certain patent cases, where the ruin of a rival business is threatened, and in cases where a stranger to a contract threatens to induce one of the parties thereto to breach the contract. Another exception may possibly be made in the case of seditious meetings. True lovers of constitutional liberty will not force the issue in war time.

Regardless of this, however, offenders may be arrested and punished after meetings. Speakers may be guilty of a breach of the peace, even though there is no actual disturbance, within the prohibitions of our State Penal Code. Other cases might be brought within section six of the Federal Penal Code defining seditious conspiracy, which is an offense punishable with six years' imprisonment; and under this section no overt act is necessary. There are other sections of the Federal Penal Code which might be applicable under some circumstances unnecessary to mention here.

It is not my purpose to advocate overzealous action on the part of prosecuting officers. They should proceed with caution and avoid giving a handful of malcontents and pacifists the chance to parade as martyrs. But I hope it is not too much to ask that the few good citizens opposed to the war may also exercise a little restraint.

Locations for a Tuberculosis Sanatorium Inspected at Many Places, but Objections from Residents are Encountered; in Others Topography is not Favorable.

The Board of Supervisors has not been able to agree on a site for the sanatorium for tuberculosis patients, although an appropriation of $75,000 has been passed. In order to arrive at a decision, the board will meet and discuss the phases of the matter with various medical authorities on the 12th inst.

Sites have been inspected in the foothills of the San Fernando Valley, Antelope Valley and San Gabriel Valley. The board is prepared to pay from $10,000 to $15,000 for the land upon which the sanatorium will be built. Objections were made in some instances by property owners to locating tuberculosis patients near them. The idea is to get level ground, in a dry atmosphere and give the patients plenty of opportunity to breathe pure air and dilute themselves with sunshine.

The State will give a subsidy of $2 a patient when the sanatorium is erected and in operation. The conference on the 12th inst. will be with R. N. Martin, superintendent of charities; City Health Commissioner Powers, County Health Officer Seymour, Dr. C. C. Browning, president of the County Medical Society; Dr. W. J. Barlow, president of the Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, and others interested in the work of redemption of tuberculosis patients.

ARIZONA WIFE CALLS HUSBAND TOO ROUGH

WANTS SEPARATION, ALIMONY AND PROPERTY DIVISION.

Quarrels Over Child Raised Rows Until She Asked Sheriff to Protect Her — Husband Wanted Third Party to Adopt Son, but She Would not Agree.

Mrs. Margaret Lee Williams, pretty young wife of Emerson Milton Williams, wealthy bank president, railroad and mine official of Clifton, Ariz., filed a petition for separate maintenance in the Superior Court yesterday, alleging that her husband treated her cruelly on numerous occasions, and that on one occasion he struck her and caused her to call in officials of the Sheriff's office for protection.

Mrs. Williams asks that she be paid $1000 attorney's fees, $200 per month alimony and a division of community property valued at more than $75,000. Mr. Williams has refused to support his wife unless she will consent to the adoption of their 5-year-old child, Frank Roger Williams, by Mrs. S. H. Hunter, the complaint alleges.

According to the complaint, Mr. and Mrs. Williams were married in Texas in 1901 and separated March 8, last. It was early in July, according to the complaint, that the husband first began insisting that a third party adopt the child, under penalty of cutting the wife off without support.

Mr. Williams is president of the First National Bank of Clifton, Ariz., is an officer in the Arizona Copper Company, and an official of the Arizona and New Mexico Railroad Company. His salary with the latter company alone is declared to be $600 per month.

GOVERNMENT DECLARES OUR CLIMATE THE BEST.

We Also Top the Country in Maximum Soil Production for Year.

FROM the standpoint of equable climate, Los Angeles unquestionably leads every place in the United States, according to government researches, the results which, in the form of official data, appear in the forthcoming issue of the Chamber of Commerce Bulletin, now in the press. These also show that for maximum soil production during the entire twelve months, Los Angeles is away in advance.

Comparisons have been made of twenty-six of the largest cities in all parts of the country as follows:

Atlanta, Ga.; Boston, Mass.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; Denver, Colo.; Detroit, Mich.; Galveston, Tex.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Kansas City, Mo.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Louisville, Ky.; Memphis, Tenn.; Minneapolis, Minn.; New Orleans, La.; New York, N. Y.; Norfolk, Va.; Oklahoma, Okla.; Omaha, Neb.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; St. Louis, Mo.; Salt Lake City, Utah; San Francisco, Cal.; Seattle, Wash.; Washington, D. C.

Of the entire list, Los Angeles and Galveston are the only ones credited with no snowfall, even Jacksonville, Fla., showing traces in December, January and February. Buffalo, N. Y., leads with 71.3 inches annually; Denver is second with 50.4 inches annually.

AS TO THE WIND.

In the matter of average wind velocity, Los Angeles is supreme, and in every month except March and April has a four-mile-an-hour breeze, with an increase of one mile during the months mentioned. The cities nearest approaching Los Angeles in this respect are Seattle, Wash., and Knoxville, Tenn., with an average of six miles. San Francisco is credited with ten miles and Chicago holds its reputation as the "Windy City" with a seventeen-mile-an-hour breeze.

Dismal days are few. In rainy days Los Angeles leads its nearest competitor, which is San Francisco, by thirty-two days, having only thirty-nine days in the year with .01 of an inch or more rain, while San Francisco has seventy-one days. The next to highest is Seattle, with 156 and Buffalo leads all cities listed with 170 rainy days.

In average annual precipitation Denver has a slight lead over Los Angeles. The official figures are 15.64 inches for Los Angeles and 14.02 for Denver, although Denver has eighty days with rain. Salt Lake City ranks third with 16.3, and New Orleans leads all cities with 57.42, while Jacksonville, Fla., which claims to rival Los Angeles as a sunshine center, is second in rain, with 53.25 inches a year, compared with the 15.64 of Los Angeles.

The sunshine figures quoted are with relation to the possible amount, so that perfect sunshine would require clear skies every day of the year from sunrise to sunset. It is in this table that Los Angeles easily leads all cities with 73 per cent.; Denver is second, with 69 per cent.; San Francisco third, with 63 per cent.; while Jacksonville, Fla., trails along with Omaha, Neb., and Galveston, Tex., and St. Louis, Mo. Seattle has the lowest percentage—41.

REGARDING HUMIDITY.

In the humidity table, Jacksonville and Galveston lead all cities with a relative humidity of 80 and over. Los Angeles records show 70, which is two degrees less than Atlanta, Boston, Memphis, Minneapolis and Pittsburgh.

When it comes to growing things, the government hands Los Angeles the only perfect score of all the twenty-six cities. In its frost data there is no killing frost date given and the average length of the growing season is 365 days. Other cities are sandwiched in between, ranging from 149 days in Denver to 320 in Galveston, the nearest competitor to Los Angeles not being without killing frost. Jacksonville, Fla., is credited with 280 days of growing season.

In the list of lowest temperature on record, the Pacific Coast leads. The lowest ever recorded in Los Angeles was 28 degrees above zero, while Jacksonville, Fla., and Galveston, Tex., both southern cities, experienced 8 degrees, and Atlanta, Ga., is credited with 8 degrees below. Omaha, Neb., leads all the list with 32 below, with Denver as a second, with 29 below.

In mean maximum temperature the annual average is given as 74, ranging from 84 in August down to 64 in January; Jacksonville, Fla., is credited with 78, ranging from 91 to 64.

BROADWAY STORES ARE NOT WORRIED.

MANAGERS HAVE THE UTMOST FAITH IN THAT STREET.

Declare They Entertain no Fear Regarding Competition from Seventh Street—Not an Easy Matter, They Say, to Divert Old Customers.

Jacoby Bros. have issued a "Declaration of Independence," and more than 200 other storekeepers are at work on plans to help keep their share of the crowd on Broadway. Several leading merchandisers already have figured the answer and this is it; they declare: Dependable merchandise for less money.

"There is a whole lot in a name," said Leo Jacoby yesterday, "and Broadway will be Broadway regardless of business development on Seventh street. When people become accustomed to doing their shopping on a certain street, it is no easy matter to turn them away from that district. It is next to impossible to lose them if you offer them reliable goods at low prices."

Arthur Letts of the Broadway Department Store looks at it from about the same angle. "I know men who walk down a certain side of the street and buy their cigars from a certain cigar stand from force of habit," says he, "and shopping is about the same kind of a human nature proposition. Old customers will throng a store if it stays where they are accustomed to shop."

The J. M. Hale Company is planning a campaign to retain trade. "We expect to feature reliable merchandise at lower prices than those which prevail elsewhere," says T. F. Quillan, manager. "If we moved we would have such heavy overhead expense that we would be compelled to make our patrons pay it. We would also have to buy new equipment throughout."

Mr. Jacoby says it is obvious why Jacoby Bros. intend to stay where they are. "Broadway will continue to be the main traveled road to the bargain center," said he.

All the stores in question have leases which are long enough to justify the merchants in pinning their faith to Broadway.

AID FOOD CAMPAIGN.

Elks All Over Country will Hold Patriotic Meetings to Help Commissioner Hoover; Pick Local Committee to Hold Conferences.

Throughout the United States during the first week in September the Order of Elks will hold patriotic meetings under the direction of local lodges for the purpose of assisting Food Commissioner Hoover in his campaign of food conservation.

Los Angeles Lodge No. 99 will hold a public patriotic meeting at their clubhouse on Wednesday evening, September 5, at which meeting the members of the order and their ladies will be enlisted in the great work of the war. Prominent speakers will address the meeting, and the Elks' Band and drill corps will take a prominent part in the programme.

Lodge No. 99 has appointed a committee, consisting of D. Joseph Coyne, L. J. Christopher and Sam Seelig, to co-operate with the State and county councils of defense, in their food conservation campaigns.

TURN GOLD TO WOOL.

That is what the Los Angeles Needle Work Guild Proposes to do in Its Hunt for Old Metal to Sell to Aid the Soldiers.

Members of the Needle Work Guild have started a "melting pot campaign" and want all the silver and gold trinkets they can get their hands on, these to be melted and turned into a fund for free wool to be knitted into garments for the soldiers.

Contributions of odds and ends of old jewelry and silverware or wool thread will be received by the Emergency Committee any day from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at headquarters in the Wright & Callender Building. The telephone number is A4380.

A call has been sent out throughout the United States for 150,000 woolen sets comprising sweater, muffler, wristlets and socks for the American soldiers in the trenches and Los Angeles has been allotted 15,000 sets as her share.

Up until the present time members of the guild have furnished the wool as well as donating the work except for socks, but there are so many knitters who do beautiful work who cannot afford to buy the wool that a free supply has become a necessity.

NEW BAG SHOP.

To be Opened by Members of W.C.T.U. in Temperance Temple.

There is to be a patriotic meeting and celebration by the members of the State Women's Christian Temperance Union of Southern California to observe the formal opening of their new comfort bag shop in the auditorium of Temperance Temple, No. 301 North Broadway, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

There will be music by Mrs. Hattie C. Young, invocation by Rev. Thelia Champion, reading by Mrs. Eva C. Wheeler, remarks by Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, greetings by Mrs. Kara S. Root, introductions of captains of patriotic service squads, addresses by Mrs. Herbert A. Cable and others, a demonstration of the comfort bag and an inspection of the shop.

The quarterly meeting of the State Executive Committee, composed of State officers, county presidents and State departmental superintendents, will be held next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Plans for patriotic service, registration of women, problems of the W.C.T.U. and departmental work will be discussed.

BIDS CALLED FOR ROAD IN CORONA.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 1.—The Board of Supervisors has advertised for bids for the improvement of the section of the Santa Ana Canyon route which lies just below Corona, and within the city limits of that city. Arrangements have been made by Supervisor Hamner to provide half the cost of concrete surfacing on this 3200-foot section, the city of Corona sharing half the cost.

This is a link in the main highway for Riverside and San Bernardino county motorists to the beach, and will, when completed, give concrete boulevard all the way except for a six-mile stretch in Orange county, which the Supervisors of that county are now planning to improve this fall.

Strategy.

CENTER ATTACK UPON SALOONS.

Local "Dry" Forces United in Plan of Campaign.

Purpose Outlined by Head of State-wide League.

Gandier Counting on "Billy" Sunday for Victory.

BY HORACE W. KARR.

The local Prohibition forces have at last decided upon a definite policy to be pursued in combating the liquor traffic. They are to unite their efforts to secure partial prohibition, with the hope that later on they can make it absolute.

Supt. D. M. Gandier of the State Anti-Saloon League said yesterday that while annihilation of the booze business is the goal of the organization he represents, it will be satisfied, for the present, with the adoption of an ordinance eliminating the open saloon and making the law governing other parts of the liquor traffic more stringent.

That the dyed-in-the-wool Prohibitionist will bitterly oppose such a compromise is admitted by Mr. Gandier, but he opines that the regulatory measure adopted at a meeting of the "drys" Thursday will be approved by the people, despite the attitude of the more or less headstrong members of the Prohibition party.

"We are out this time to win," Mr. Gandier said. "In the past we frequently placed propositions before the people not expecting to win, but rather to carry on our campaign of education. We believe our work along this line has been effectual and the people are at last ready to co-operate with us in our plan to eliminate saloons—the worst of all the evils connected with the liquor industry."

COUNT ON SUNDAY.

Mr. Gandier asserted the influence against booze to be spread by "Billy" Sunday during his two-month campaign will be sufficient to make victory certain at the proposed special election. We said it is reasonable to assume that the evangelist will instill within the church-going people a more determined desire to eradicate the saloon evil and it is to be expected that he will bring a large army of "outsiders" into the anti-saloon camp.

Whether or not the "drys" are victorious at the special election, the Anti-Saloon League is preparing a campaign of unprecedented activity to abolish the liquor industry throughout California. Just how to go about it will not be determined until January, when the Anti-Saloon League and other prohibition organizations will hold a State convention.

It is more than probable that the "drys" will oppose the submission of a State-wide prohibitory law to the people at the regular election in the fall of 1918. Their opposition will not be because they do not favor the immediate destruction of the booze business, but rather because they are by no means certain that the people will stand for such legislation at this time.

FOR "DRY" SOLONS.

To make certain the end for which they have been striving for lo, these many years, they are considering the advisability of devoting their efforts exclusively to electing a "bone dry" Legislature.

"There is no doubt in my mind as to the vote the lower house in Congress will take upon the question of submitting to the States the proposition of national prohibition," Mr. Gandier said. "The Senate having approved it, the House can be expected to concur. Then will come the big fight throughout the United States. California is among the few States that have not a majority of 'dry' legislators. Our duty, therefore, is clear.

"We must elect a bone-dry Legislature and I am in favor of making the fight during the next eighteen months for candidates for the Legislature who can be depended upon to support the issue of national prohibition. With all our forces united and the people aroused to the proper point of enthusiasm, I believe we can get a majority of the State solons. Past experience has taught us that it is questionable whether the people would vote the State 'dry,' but there is an excellent chance to land a majority of the legislators. This will solve the problem so far as California is concerned."

ROMINGER BILL.

The possibility of the so-called Rominger bill being presented to the electors next year is a ticklish question in the ranks of the Anti-Saloon Leaguers. They are not particularly opposed to the measure and at the same time are not crazy about it. Mr. Gandier supported it in the Legislature last winter and might do so again next year. "You see, there is nothing in that bill to which I am opposed," he said, "and I am in favor of everything it provides, but it is not a bone-dry measure and many of our people will not tolerate the compromise it suggests."

Mr. Gandier says the wine growers of California are behind the bill and he denies that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Anti-Saloon League or "myself" is planning to submit an amended Rominger bill to the people next year.

TERRA BELLA WORK IS GIVEN PRAISE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 1.—After a complete inspection of the work which has practically been completed by the Terra Bella Irrigation District to water 12,000 acres of fruit lands south of here, State Engineer W. F. McClure declared the system is one of the best of its kind on the Pacific Coast.

Mr. McClure found the water supply ample, the engineering work done in a manner which precluded criticism and the distribution canals in all respects ample to the work they are constructed to do. While much of the work, he said, was not in accordance with methods generally followed, it was all, in his judgment, of the highest type.

More land is being added to the irrigable area daily and within another ten days the estimated production will be attained from all the deep walls now in service.

POLITICS.

The American Game.

THE WATCHMAN.

TREND OF CURRENT POLITICAL THOUGHT AND ACTION.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

"Doc" Haynes at last must realize that his "pull" in municipal affairs has gone a-glimmering. Despite his insistent protest as a member of the Southern California Civil Service Reform League and as a representative of that body of professional disturbers—the Municipal League—the Civil Service Commission shot the skids under F. M. Dee, Jr., and now the commissioners are looking for another secretary. The "doc" called upon Mayor Woodman and demanded that Dee be given another chance. In his characteristic way, the Mayor, with his jaw firmly set, advised the agitator that he had better attend to his own knitting.

"I have perfect confidence in the Civil Service Commission and will not interfere in any manner with its business," the chief executive told the "doc." "There is going to be no more politics in city departments. Politics has been the ruination of the civil service department for the past ten years and it must stop."

"Why, Mayor, you insult me," the "doc" retorted. "You say politics has governed and ruined the civil service when you know I was a member of the commission for years." "You bet I do," the Mayor replied; "but of course I know that you never dabbled in politics."

The upshot of the interview was that Mayor Woodman made it clear that "Doc" Haynes and his bunch (which of course includes S. Simons, Bessie Jerks, et al.) have lost their grip. Mayor Woodman is running the administration and if the fellows who used to browbeat Mayors and get what they wanted have thought their tactics would prevail with the present head of the government they have another think coming.

The removal of Dee was about the most popular official act at the City Hall since the summary dismissal of Homer Hamlin. Both of these men got too big for their jobs, and to remedy the situation it was only necessary for a Mayor to show a little backbone. Mayor Woodman showed it.

A possible aftermath to the Dee episode is the removal of Commissioner Craig, right - hand bower of "Doc" Haynes. Craig raised an awful howl the other day when Mrs. E. R. Brainerd and Messrs. Bradley and Bowden indicated their intention of firing the secretary. In fact, he still is howling, and if he keeps it up Mayor Woodman will soon have another vacancy to fill.

Here is a little inside news on the result of the Receiving Hospital inquiry, which has just been concluded by the Public Safety Committee of the Council. Chief Surgeon Gilmer will not be ousted. The prosecution brought out a lot of interesting testimony, but Dr. Gilmer is a wise old owl and he was there at every turn when it was necessary to produce an alibi. That he removed two patients from the Receiving Hospital to the California Hospital and rendered bills for the attentions he gave them he did not deny. It was not necessary, for such conduct is not only ethical, suh, but is permitted by the city ordinance regulating affairs of the emergency institution. Who could expect a competent surgeon to give up private practice for a job that pays only $250 per month? In handing down its decision the Public Safety Committee may not agree upon all of the essential points of the case, but no doubt they will recommend some changes in the hospital—but never in the head of the department.

Police Judge White stirred up a hornets nest when he forwarded to various officials of the city government a protest against stool-pigeons and recommended plans for catching immoral women without the use of marked dinero. The flat assertion by Chief Butler that stool-pigeon methods are NOT EMPLOYED by his men was sustained at an open hearing conducted by the Council and then all parties concerned agreed that the purity squad should not be eliminated. This left the question where it started and the old ship of state continued its cruise on an even keel. In this connection it might be said that the Council demonstrated unusual wisdom in sidestepping the issue. It had gone off half-cocked the day it received Judge White's letter and a majority of the members declared: "We will not appropriate any more money to maintain the purity squad." The fact is that the Council has nothing to do with the appropriation. It is provided for in the budget and is under the sole and absolute direction of the Mayor. It is not necessary for the Finance Committee to approve the expenditures. Mayor Woodman said he is going to use the fund as he sees fit and I guess the Council believed him.

It looks now as if the backbone of the "paving trust" has been cracked. George Oswald has been referred to as an independent contractor; but, strange to say, he was able to present the lowest bid for the West First-street job—an improvement to cost the sum of $250,000. Not in recent years has an "independent" been in position to compete with members of the alleged combine. That Oswald has effected a working agreement with the other fellows, or can buy bitulithic surfacing as cheaply as they can, seems obvious.

Commissioner Kemp and Attorney Mathews of the Public Service Commission surprised no one when they appeared before the Council the other day and confessed that it would be impossible to fulfill the promise made to the voters in 1914 that they would not be taxed to meet the interest and sinking fund in connection with the $6,500,000 power bond issue. Their action was to be expected and that is just the reason that the people cannot be bulldozed into supporting any more big bond issues. You know what Barnum said about the people and also what the martyred Lincoln said. Los Angeles electors are onto themselves and likewise the Public Service Commisison. The 7 cents added to the tax rate because of false promises made to the voters was the death knell to bonds, and it should be. More enlightenment will be given the Public Service Board when the court permits W. C. Mushet to get at their books.

If a public official goes out of office broke he is looked upon as an honest man. Fred C. Wheeler served two terms in the Council and when he threw up the sponge was so hard up that he had to go to hard work. He now is employed on aqueduct work under Engineer Mulholland.

THE WATCHMAN.

WILL SHOW HOW WE FIGHT FOREST FIRE.

J. D. Maxfield, chief clerk in the office of Supervisor Charlton of the Angeles National Forest, will leave today for Sacramento, where he will be in charge of an exhibit of the fire-fighting apparatus and bureau employed by the local Supervisor in subduing fires in the big woods, at the California State Fair September 8 to 15.

The Angeles National Forest made a similar exhibit at the National Orange Show, held at San Bernardino, and it attracted much favorable attention. It has since been enlarged and will be one of the features of the coming fair.

NEW PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Wealthy Cattleman Becomes Head of Spanish Text-book Company.

The Latin-American Publishing Company, publishers of Uribe's Master Key to the Castilian Language and other Spanish books, has been absorbed by a new concern. Domingo Ezquer, the head of the new company, is a wealthy cattleman from New Mexico, now living in Los Angeles. Prof. Ricardo Uribe, who has taught Spanish to over 20,000 pupils in Southern California, is associated with the new venture. Prof. Uribe was at one time director of sanitation and street works in Mexico City under the administration of Porfirio Diaz and is credited with the founding of the magnificent system of streets, sewers, etc., in that municipality.

In Los Angeles.

MORRIS PLAN BANK IS OPENED FOR BUSINESS.

LOS ANGELES was added to the long chain of Morris Plan Banks of the country yesterday, when the local institution bearing that name opened for business at No. 732 South Spring street. With a paid-up capital of $500,000 and a directorate comprising some of the most distinguished names in the business and industrial life of the city, the Morris Plan Bank of Los Angeles is in a position to make loans totaling over $1,000,000 to the needy the first year of its existence.

The idea of the Morris Plan Bank is to extend the field of commercial credit to include the wage earner and the salaried employee. In other words, to lend money to the person of small means at a reasonable rate of interest, thus offsetting the necessity of the loan shark. It is in no sense a charity proposition, but is run on strictly business principles and the history of the entrance of a Morris Plan Bank into a large city has always been the disappearance of the loan shark, with his 2 to 5 per cent. a month loans on salaries. It is also not a pawnshop and no accommodations will be afforded those unworthy of a loan.

The operations of this bank are founded upon the best of banking methods, and its main purpose is to go after the business of the poor man who wants to borrow $50 or more. As the Morris Plan Bank involves conservation of the savings and credits of a large class that has heretofore lacked the standing of the ordinary borrowers at national or State banks, it represents a development of the highest economic importance.

A salary or a wage earner has at times urgent need for money to tide over an emergency. Such occurrences as the following are legitimate reasons for a loan: accident, new baby, sickness in family, death in family, clothing for children or parents, to pay up loan shark, to pay for education, to begin business, to begin housekeeping, to buy sewing machine to help needy relatives, to pay taxes or assessments, to pay life insurance premiums, to clean up old debts, to make first payment on a home, to make repairs on home, to pay for a vacation trip, etc.

The usual procedure is for an applicant seeking a loan to give a note, indorsed by two other persons, who thus attest their confidence that he will pay the loan when due. After a careful investigation by the banks, if everything is satisfactory, the accomodation is granted. The borrower receives the amount desired less the interest for the full period the note has to run and a charge of $2 for investigation on every loan. The usual rate of interest is 6 per cent. The borrower pays back the principal in weekly installments until the whole amount has been returned to the bank when the note is cancelled.

Besides making loans the Morris Plan Bank affords the small saver an opportunity to save money, and these savings accounts may be started at the rate of only $1 a week. The savings scheme of the bank is carried out by means of what are designated as investment certificates. Many poor people in eastern cities where Morris Plan Banks have been started commenced business relations with the institution as a borrower to end up as a saver, and there is no reason why the experience of the Los Angeles organization should not be along the same line.

Although the United tSates has only witnessed the establishment of this form of helpful banking for the poor classes within the last seven years, when the first Morris Plan Bank was organized, the large European countries have had the system for many generations. In 1914 the Bank of France made loans similar to those of a Morris Plan Bank aggregating close to $4,000,000,000, and in one year the banks of Italy made discounts of the same character averaging better than $300,000,000.

The first Morris Plan Bank was established at Norfolk, Virginia, in 1910. Today there are a total of eighty-seven banks operating in the United States with an aggregate capital of more than $12,000,000. Up to the present time total loans have been made to borrowers, who would otherwise have fallen into the hands of loan sharks, of $40,000,000, and practically all these loans have been in amounts from $25 to $500. The success of the Los Angeles institution is assured when this record is taken into consideration.

TURN COTTON SEED TO GOLD.

Three Million Dollars will be Received by Farmers of Imperial.

[DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

EL CENTRO, Sept. 1.—Nearly $3,000,000 will be received from the cottonseed crop of 1917-18 by valley farmers, it was estimated today, when the first lot of cottonseed was sold to the local cottonseed oil mill for 3 cents per pound. It is believed by cotton men that the price of cottonseed will go much higher because of the world demand for fat substitutes, and many growers are holding their seed.

Cotton picking is going forward in the south end of the valley with nearly 100 pickers at work. The valley labor agent is in Oklahoma where there is a crop failure in the cotton belt. Scores of pickers in Oklahoma are anxious to come here and work.

CHANGE OPPOSED.

While Orange County People Want One-Telephone System They will Oppose Proposal to Do Away with the Free Connections.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, Sept. 1.—Though there has long been a public outcry in favor of a one-telephone system, there is much dissatisfaction at the proposed abolition of free connections between towns.

The State Railroad Commission held a hearing here during the week of the petition of the Pacific Telephone Company to take over the Home Union. During the presentation, the fact developed that free tolls will be done away with. It is proposed to use practically the same rate per subscriber as is now used by either telephone.

During the years when competition between the two companies was warm, free connections were extended first to one telephone and then the other. At the present time a subscriber of the Pacific telephone in Santa Ana can talk free of charge to any subscriber on the Garden Grove, Orange or Tustin exchanges. A Home subscriber here talks free to Smeltzer, Garden Grove, or Tustin. A Pacific subscriber in Anaheim talks free to Fullerton or Placentia. Other free connections are made.

A fine programme was arranged by the Entertainment Committee, of which J. W. Boothe was general chairman.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LA VERNE, Sept. 1.—The postmarks on letters show that the Post-office Department still calls this place Lordsburg. Secretary L. A. Blickenstaff of the Chamber of Commerce makes the following announcement:

Big Margin of Profit Comes to San Joaquin Valley Ranchers.

[DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 1.—Brisk trading in wheat began again immediately following the announced price of $2.20 per bushel fixed by the Federal commissioners. Wheat has been selling here for $3.20 to $3.25 per 100, but the Federal price means $3.40 per 100, at which price there is a great margin of profit for San Joaquin Valley ranchers.

Only about 20 per cent. of the crop, or roughly 80,000 bags, remains in this district uncontracted. This will probably all be cleaned up within the next thirty days.

STRONG POLICY IS NECESSARY.

Missouri Governor Speaks on Mexican Situation.

Merchant Denounces Cringing to Labor Unions.

First Contingent Chosen by Exemption Board.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONG BEACH, Sept. 1.—"America's policy toward other nations has been extremely liberal. Especially has the spirit of generosity entered into this country's relations with Mexico. I believe, however, speaking as an individual and not an official, that if the country below the border gives us any more trouble, especially during this hour of sacrifice and strife, the next time we go into Mexico we should stay there."

This pronounced opinion on the Mexican situation was today given at a meeting of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association by Gov. Frederick D. Gardner, of Missouri, and elicited prolonged and apparently unanimous applause from the large gathering of representative business men of the city.

Touching upon the present high prices, Gov. Gardner declared that the fact that there are now so many consumers and so few producers is responsible for this condition. With bacon selling for 40 and 45 cents per pound, wheat at more than $2 a bushel and corn the same price, he said, the world is practically starving today. He said the back-to-the-farm movement was the only solution to the problem.

"This country's agricultural resources must be developed on a wholesale scale if the United States expects to realize lower prices and prosperity after the war," declared Gov. Gardner.

"Banks must be established in the rural districts where the farmer can secure large sums of money for long-time periods at a low rate of interest and conditions in country communities changed in general in order to keep the boys and girls on the farms."

NAME IS CHANGED.

After considerable debate the members of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association today decided to change their name, and will hereafter be known as the Business Men's Association of Long Beach. The change was made following complaints on the part of two or three members who declared they were losing the trade of the labor unions who confused the local association with that of the Los Angeles Merchants' and Manufacturers' organization, which was declared to be antagonistic to unions.

A. J. Swingle, proprietor of Swingle's Bakery, spoke strongly against the change of name. "The issue of industrial servitude," declared Mr. Swingle, "must arise here as it has in other American cities, and it cannot be evaded by a change of name. Under whatever title we shall eventually have to make the fight for Long Beach that was made for Los Angeles by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association of that city.

"The Los Angeles Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association has done a great deal to save Los Angeles from industrial bondage, and if Long Beach was confronted with the same labor-union problems as that city this association would be forced to take a similar stand."

QUOTA NAMED.

The Long Beach exemption board for this district, County No. 1, this afternoon selected the following nine men to leave Wednesday as this city's first contribution to the training cantonment at American Lake, Wash: James Francis Collins, Phillip M. Lutton, Clayton Holloway, Edwin Campbell, Frank Weller, Oliver Woodward, Henry W. Dunn and Welch W. Hanberry.

The initial contingent will include two men with engineering experience, one newspaper man, one student, one telegraph operator, one architect, one lawyer, one fireman and a former officer in the National Guard.

CROP PROLIFIC ON SMALL LOT.

Jack's Wonderful Beanstalk has Little, if Anything, on Harriet's.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONG BEACH, Sept. 1.—Jack's wonderful beanstalk of nursery fame had very little, if anything, on the crop of navies planted by Miss Harriet Johns, a Carroll Park grammar school girl, whose war garden efforts have resulted in the harvesting of exactly 1769 beans from four stalks, raised from as many seed beans, a winning of 44,-125 per cent. Miss Johns planted the beans on a lot owned by Mrs. Charles Bate of No. 685 Temple avenue. Then she deserted the patch. Mrs. Bates, however, raised and harvested the exceptionally prolific crop. One stalk, raised from a single bean, held 709.

SECOND DISTRICT ACTS ON APPEALS.

Board at Bakersfield Makes its Decisions in Cases from Santa Barbara, Imperial, Kern and Other Counties—Sessions will be Resumed on Tuesday.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 1.—Certification of 125 selectives in Santa Barbara county was the only action taken by the Second California District Board here today. Executive sessions will reopen Tuesday, at which time additional appeals will be considered. The board has certified 1725 men for service during the week.

Yesterday the board granted a large number of industrial claims and refused an equal number on agricultural grounds. Notices to those asking exemption for occupational reasons and appealing local boards' decisions were mailed out to Kern, Madera, Merced and Imperial county appellants.

In granting industrial discharges, specified time is allowed by the board for men so discharged to train men not eligible to draft in their special work.

With quick access to lists of certified soldiers, Kern county's two local divisions have secured their 5 per cent. quota of thirteen men each, who will leave here soon. William Cuneo, captain of the Southern Pacific Oil Fields League baseball team, will be in charge of one contingent and Prof. Clarence Cullimore of Kern county High School will be in charge of the other. Citizens are preparing a farewell for the twenty-six men going to Camp Lewis from here.

HALF-MILLION DOLLAR POWER PLANT PLANNED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

AZUSA, Sept. 1.—Another power project is being planned for the San Gabriel Canyon by the United Light and Power Company of Los Angeles. G. W. Gilbreth, an engineer for the company, was in the city yesterday conferring with engineers who are making a preliminary survey for the dam site.

The plan, according to Mr. Gilbreth, is to construct a dam at a point near Prairie Fork, impounding enough water for a continuous flow of 2000 inches. From there the water will be carried by tunnel ten miles to the proposed power-house at the mouth of Graveyard Canyon.

The plant will cost $500,000 and will provide 6000 kilowatts. Later the company expects to put in another dam and treble the size of the plant.

The company proposes to build a pole line to Capistrano from where it will deliver power to the city of San Diego. One thousand kilowatts, however, is to be reserved for use in and around the San Gabriel Canyon.

Construction work is waiting on the final reports from the engineers, according to Mr. Gilbreth. The materials for the dam will be taken to the crest of the mountains from Victorville over the famous Horseshoe mine road. A cable bridge will be constructed across the river at Graveyard Canyon, over which all other building material will be taken, via Azusa.

This project is a revival of one undertaken some years ago by the Pacific Light and Power Company. It was reported impracticable by engineers and dropped.

MESSAGE IN SHOE TELLS OF WEALTH.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

DINUBA, Sept. 1.—A message left in an old shoe by Charles R. Hill, who took his own life in Hill's Valley, directed his sister to a spot at the base of a tree where $2400 in gold was found buried.

Hill was an eccentric recluse who lived in the section of the foothills, which was named for him. He left an estate valued at about $50,000.

GUARD OIL TANKS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

The tanks are so situated that they can be watched during the day without the expense of additional watchmen.

HEALTH RECORD FAVORS SOUTH.

San Francisco's Stork Just Ahead of the Reaper.

Fewer Die Here and More are Born and Survive.

Interesting Data Furnished by Board of Health.

Official figures of the State Board of Health would indicate that the fog streams of the Golden State are not as salubrious as the breezes of Los Angeles, or else that San Francisco's people are falling down on the old job of replenishing the earth. For the Health Board's August report, just issued, shows the stork in the Bay City is only a jump ahead of the reaper and at the same time reveals one very good reason why Los Angeles is growing ever bigger than the northern metropolis.

The birth and death statistics given by the board for the month are as follows:

County—	Births.	Deaths.
Los Angeles	1,048	834
San Francisco	610	599
Alameda	389	299
Fresno	193	105
Sacramento	145	99
Santa Clara	136	130
San Bernardino	120	78
San Diego	112	118
Orange	108	68
San Joaquin	100	105
Tulare	86	44
Sonoma	69	74
Kern	68	48
Contra Costa	61	40
Stanislaus	58	22
Humboldt	48	23

These figures, for cities only, tell the same tale:

City—	Births.	Deaths.
Los Angeles	685	502
San Francisco	610	599
Oakland	256	180
Sacramento	106	79
Fresno	72	55
Stockton	57	65
Pasadena	56	38
Berkeley	54	32
San Jose	54	31
Bakersfield	40	32
Alameda	37	24
Long Beach	34	41
Santa Ana	34	15
San Bernardino	32	30

Moreover, it is shown that of the 599 deaths during May in San Francisco, thirty-five, or 5.8 per cent., were of children under a year old, while of the 502 deaths in this city but eleven, or 2.2 per cent., fell in the same class.

It is shown that once again heart disease was the most frequent cause of death in California, 19.4 per cent. of all fatal cases being of that sort. There was not a case of smallpox in the State during the month.

A section of the report deals with convictions under the Food and Drugs Act, for aduleration and mislabeling of food, drinks and drugs. During June, the latest month for which statistics are furnished, but two convictions for this offense were secured in Los Angeles. Thirty-six were secured in the entire State, twenty-one of them in Oakland. The articles adulterated here were chocolate and tuna. The list for the State shows as "adulterated and mislabeled" such things as chopped meat, sausage, eggs and oranges.

Considerable space in the report is devoted to the question of cooperation with military authorities in caring for the health of troops, both by camp sanitation and by repression of vice. A plea is made for more complete birth records in every community and family, as it is said the draft registration has revealed a crying need for such data.

BUSINESS BREVITIES.

It is a common saying, "I never had a good picture." Mr. Steckel caters to difficult subjects, and it is not an experiment you undertake when having pictures of your children or a portrait of yourself made at the Steckel studio, but a certainty that the charm and beautiful expressions of childhood and individuality in portraits will be faithfully portrayed, and it is well said that when you once have had a portrait or beautiful child study from this justly-famed studio none other will please. This Frees Your Skin From Hair or Fuzz
(Toilet Tips)
The method here suggested for the removal of superfluous hair is quick and certain and unless the growth is extremely stubborn, a single application does the work. Make a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water; apply this to the hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub it off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To avoid disappointment, be sure your druggist sells you delatone.

Colossal.

BLASTS LIKE BATTLE ROAR ON SITE OF TITANIC CAMP.

Dynamite Eats Way Through Hard-pan at Linda Vista, Foot by Foot; Builders and Army Men Chafe, Yet Plank City Grows Like Mushroom.

BY M. S. GULLIVER.

WHILE military commanders impatiently mark time, a civilian army of 3500 men is ing day and night to complete colossal task of building the cantonment at Camp Kearny, the Linda Vista Mesa site. The mp must be done by the 20th inst., sooner if possible, for many ops have arrived and others will train as soon as quarters can be pared for them.

An almost superhuman task is being accomplished by the construction gineers and workmen, for every ot of trench for sewer and water ains must be blasted, to break up stubborn hard pan that underlies e entire site.

The big job of erecting a camp accommodate 30,000 troops be e one that nearly staggered the tractors when they found hard that is nearly impenetrable. ry foot of the twenty-five miles trenching for pipe has to be ted. The dynamite charges are a foot apart, and each "shot" only a pocket in the stubborn rth.

To meet this big problem, William E. Hampton of the Hampton Construction Company has increased the force of workmen day by day and utilized every modern contrivance obtainable, such as trench-digging machines and compressed air drills. Even the powerful trench-digging machines are unable to cope with the hardpan, which engineers declare is more stubborn than granite to drill for the blasting. Twice a day and several times at night there are bombardments that shake buildings and cause great clouds of white dust to swirl about the camp. The bombardments are conducted by civilians in their warfare on the hardpan, but they sound like real warfare. At each blasting there are shot 100 holes, with six sticks of dynamite each.

LIKE A MAGIC CITY.

But though construction men and army engineers are chafing at the slow progress of the trench digging, which retards the building, to the layman the building of the cantonment is like magic. Numerous buildings have sprung up like mushrooms on the mesa, which a month ago was nothing but dust-covered sage brush. At the rate of eighteen or twenty a day the buildings go up, so that each day has seen a wonderful transformation in the appearance of the swiftly growing soldier city. On account of the blasting, building has been less rapid than it will be this month.

"They put up another building while you were inside," gasped an astonished photographer to a correspondent who had been getting some figures on the big cantonment from Capt. O. C. Wyman, assistant to Construction Quartermaster, Maj. Charles H. Nichols, from whose office all news of the construction of the camp must go. Cameras are under the ban and the photographer, halted by some sturdy young men with "M. P." on their sleeves, waited to secure permission to use the objectionable box.

All news of the camp is censored and must come through Capt. Wyman, who in rapid-fire style reels off facts about the big project between the issuing of orders, telephone calls, receiving and sending wires to govment officials at Washington and a million other duties. Not even in the office of W. E. Hampton, the contractor, is it permitted to give out news about the construction of the cantonment.

PLANS CHANGE FAST.

According to Capt. Wyman, it is impossible to tell what will be done, as plans are constantly being changed and enlarged by the government. Since the original contract was made an additional contract for a permanent concrete sewer system and for a hospital unit and a large remount camp has been made. But if the plans are not changed over night, the cantonment will cover 2200 acres in the form of an oblong, 8100x2200 feet. The plan of the cantonment proper calls for 475 buildings, which include mess kitchens, showers, officers' quarters, regimental headquarters, brigade and general commander's headquarters, and big storerooms.

There are ten large storerooms 160x80 feet, 174 company messes,

Military City.

HUGE TRAINING CANTONMENT AT AMERICAN LAKE NEARLY READY

Camp Lewis, Washington, Where Los Angeles and Southern California Soldiers will be Prepared for War, is Scene of Tremendous Activity.

EIGHT weeks ago all was open prairie where now stands Camp Lewis, American Lake Cantonment, Washington, as a veritable monument to American efficiency.

And the contingent of Los Angeles engineers was in a good part responsible for the rapid and perfect construction of the great military rendezvous. For weeks the local men have labored from early until late whipping into definite system the mammoth mass of detail work, and they now are on their way to Mineola, L. I., where they will undergo a three-months intensive training course before leaving for the front.

Camp Lewis is about three miles long. Not less than 9000 men have been constantly engaged for several weeks, with carts and horses, tractors and trucks, hauling millions of feet of lumber, tons of nails and building hardware, sash and doors, windows and material for chimneys, while an army of carpenters and other artisans plied hammer and saw, chisel and auger to frame and construct the houses, cooking quarters, barracks, stables and other buildings which go to make up a complete military camp.

At this camp the Los Angeles drafted men will be trained for war in the trenches, along with the quotas from other Western States. Already the olive brown khaki uniforms are a part of the landscape, while the shouts of drill masters are heard on every hand.

At every corner and every entrance sentries challenge and halt every comer not evidently a part of the army. Tons of food stuffs are trundled through the gates, are halted and inspected and then permitted to pass inside, where bright-eyed, alert young men who last month were sitting at desks in Los Angeles offices or clerking in stores, now exact and give the proper military salute, check off the supplies with precision and accuracy and, in unmistakable tones of authority, designate where they will be unloaded and stored for use. Some of the buildings are completed while others are in a state of finishing, with busy workmen all about. But there no longer is a condition of chaos. Order has been established and every day witnesses the advance of the line of completion, with its military correctness and precision taking the place of disorder and scattered building material.

EXCELLENT COMMAND.

Maj.-Gen. H. A. Greene, who commands Camp Lewis, has taken a firm grasp of the details. He has had forty-two years of active service since he graduated from Pest Point and his efficiency as an executive is commented on freely by the workingmen. He is recognized as a genial but strict officer, who knows what is required and does not hesitate to demand what he considers necessary.

There will be ninety-two battalions located at Camp Lewis for training, nearly all the men wholly new to military duties. Officers who have been selected for their ability to handle new men will have charge of the drilling and training. When they arrive, their quarters will be all ready and there will be no confusion in assigning them to units. Altogether there will be not less than 30,000 men in camp when the entire quota is on the ground.

Every one connected with the work of preparing the last touches on the buildings is anxious to hurry the job and help to create an excellent record. Last Sunday everyone was instructed by the contractor bosses to report for work and there were no "slackers." They are to be given a holiday on Labor Day as compensation. On Saturday, a week ago, the contracting firm gave out in pay checks $251,695.44, with additional payments totaling over $350,000.

Officially the work of construction is reported to be completed according to the following percentages: Company barracks, 83 per cent.; officers' barracks, 50 per cent.; store-

WOMEN'S CLUBS:

IF THERE is anything worse than not being patriotic, it is to have misguided patriotism; and that is what all the social workers of the country, including the far-reaching organizations of the Y.W.C.A. and Y.M.C.A., are trying to divert into its rightful channel. There is no deeper problem before the public just now than what to do with the soldier on leave—and what to do with the girl who waits for his leave. I am not speaking of the soldier or sailor with a home near by, or the ones with relatives and friends, not even the ones who, far from home, still have self-respect to withstand the temptation to do anything that would belittle them or the flag they are defending. I am speaking of the happy-go-lucky boy, whose first war experience is a lark, and who is ready for anything, without really intending harm. That is the kind of boy, who, in a strange town, is apt to turn his liberty into license. The girl who is concerned in the problem is not the bad girl; not the painted vulture woman of the streets; she is simply a girl of normal intelligence, uncontrolled emotions, and with a sense of perverted patriotism. She is carried away by the sight of a uniform, she is bursting with eagerness to show her good will for the enlisted men. In her enthusiasm she is indiscreet, and the soldiers—well, they are just human beings.

At a luncheon the other day, a group of prominent people gathered to discuss this very problem. Three of them in particular had made a study of the situation in the military camps, and they told some of their observations. It was enough to make any mother sick at heart, and to make any girl be almost ashamed of her sex. One of these workers told of seeing a crowd of more than 200 girls waiting outside the gates of a certain cantonment for the soldiers to come out. Most of these men had leave from 6 o'clock that evening until 5 the next morning. Some of the girls were waiting for men they knew; others had come to "scrape an acquaintance," and it wasn't hard to do.

Another of the speakers told of waking at 2 o'clock in the morning and hearing voices under her window.

"It was a soldier and a girl who had introduced herself," she said. "And the conversation I heard made me ache to get at the girl, to send her home to her mother."

The Y.M.C.A. takes care of the men in camp; it provides recreation for them, and sees to it that they are kept healthy and cheerful. It is now the aim of the Y.W.C.A. to attend to the girl problem; to see to it that these young and enthusiastic girls turn their patriotic spirit into the proper channels to imbue them with a sense of their responsibility as hostesses, to conduct themselves in a womanly manner.

With this big problem staring us in the face, it's no wonder that it has set every thinking man and woman to thinking harder and deeper. I am glad to say, that here, in Los Angeles, was organized a few days ago, a band of young girls, who will pioneer in an organization called the Patriotic League of the Woman's War Work Council of the National Board of the Y.W.C.A. Of course, it isn't called all that, but simply the "Patriotic League," and every girl who joins pays a very nominal amount of 5 cents per month, and signs the following pledge: "I pledge myself to express my patriotism by doing better than ever before whatever work I have to do. By rendering whatever special service I can do for my community and my country. By living up to the highest standards of character and honor and help others to do the same."

Mrs. Isidore B. Dockweiler opened her home for thirty girls, who will form the mother chapter for this community. Miss Rosario Dockweiler was elected president, and appointed a working committee consisting of Miss Katharine Stearns, Miss Helen Jones, Miss Dorris Collins, and Miss Margaret Johnson. They will hold a meeting next Wednesday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock at the home of Mrs. E. P. Johnson at Twenty-seventh and Severance streets. They are planning to organize other chapters, and work until there is not a girl in the city who has not enlisted under the new banner. When every girl understands just what this movement means, it will take no appeal to make her realize her responsibility. It isn't the girl who understands who gets into trouble, it's the girl who doesn't know.

Cosmos Club.

Mrs. Alice T. Anderson, president of the Cosmos Club, announces the following committee chairmen for the coming year: Appointed committees, Miss Celia Katze; art, Mrs. E. J. Federated Aid Society.

The Federated Aid Society of the Los Angeles Presbytery held a large and enthusiastic meeting last Thursday, with more than 300 delegates present, at the Presbyterian Church of Santa Monica. Mrs. T. R. Welch presided over the conference of presidents. The luncheon was preceded by a grand march from the auditorium of the church to the banquet-room, where the long tables were beautifully decorated with carnations. The afternoon session was presided over by Mrs. W. D. McConnell, who introduced the speakers. A feature of the afternoon was the "Old Ladies' Chorus," which consisted of women 70 years old or older. There were twenty-seven in the chorus, and their work was admirable. The youngest was 70 and the oldest 87 years old. Several speakers discussed topics of interest. There will be a special meeting of the society at San Diego November 2. All members and friends are invited.

Native Daughters Celebrate.

Last Monday evening the members of La Esperanza Parlor No. 24, Native Daughters of the Golden West, entertained with a dinner party in honor of Mrs. Eliza Donner Houghton, daughter of the commander of the ill-fated Donner party that played an important part in the making of early California history. Past Grand President Dr. Bussenius had this entertainment in charge and, with the assistance of her committee, served light refreshments in the cozy dining-hall of the clubrooms. Golden glow and golden rod were used to beautify the clubrooms, the same color scheme being used in the table decorations.

The initiation, presided over by President Dorothy Hebel, was one of the most beautiful ever held in the parlor, adding the names of Miss Neil D. Hubbel and Miss Eliza Houghton, daughter of the honoree, to the list of members. Miss Senaida Guzman had the arrangement of the musical score.

A "Black Cat Dance" will be given by the girls to which all native sons and daughters, with their friends, will be specially invited guests. Miss Estelle Campbell is standing sponsor for the next programme and, with her committee, is endeavoring to break yet another record for originality and good fellowship. The first meeting of the committee will be at the home of Mrs. Mary J. Perdue, No. 1147 South Westlake avenue, when final arrangements will be made for the surprise feature of the dance.

Veteran Honored.

Not many organizations have the pleasure of celebrating the ninetieth birthday of a member. Such was the case with the Jessie Benton Fremont tent, Daughters of Veterans, at a recent meeting of the J. B. Thimble Club, held at the home of Mrs. Ella Hert of Melrose avenue. The affair was given in honor of Owen Adkins, a veteran of two wars. A huge cake was presented to him by his daughter, Mrs. Saunders. He was born in Kentucky in 1827 and enlisted at the age of 17 years in the Mexican War in the Second Indiana Regiment. When the Civil War broke out he enlisted as second lieutenant in Co. B of the Tenth Iowa Regiment and served until the close of the war. Many wishes were extended to him for more happy birthdays. The next meeting of the J. B. Thimble Club will be held at the home of Mr. Adkins's other daughter, Mrs. Flora Durfee, at No. 831 North Broadway, next Tuesday afternoon.

Woman's Advertising Club.

The Woman's Advertising Club of Los Angeles will open its third fall season with a dinner next Tuesday evening at the Pig'n Whistle.

A feature of the meeting will be the presence of Mrs. Herbert A. Cable as guest of honor. Mrs. Cable, who is president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, has recently been appointed on the State board of the National Council of Defense.

She will address the publicity women on the advantages of business women's organizations affiliating with the federation.

Harry S. Stuff, an advertising specialist, will discuss "Successful Advertising."

The club has planned much active work for fall and winter, not only along its own individual lines, but along channels that will be of interest to women generally.

A Hint to Home Folks.

This incident happened recently at the naval training station on Goat Island, in San Francisco Bay. Fifteen hundred rookies, lads who had just arrived at the station, were surrounding a sailor perched on a box distributing mail. The boat had just arrived and the mail was being handed out. As the names of the sailors were called the lads would step up and receive their letters. It was a fascinating sight.

So it continued for fifteen minutes until the crowd was well thinned out. All around were sailors intently reading. Some had smiles on their faces, others looked more serious and there was one lad who sobbed as if his heart would break. "Bad news?" questioned his chum. "Poor old Towser's gone," sobbed the lad in reply. "The folks say that he wouldn't eat a thing after I left and they found him Sunday back of the barn, dead."

The last letter had been distributed to its owner and the postman had departed, but there still lingered a dozen or more boys with long faces and serious mien. They were the lads for whom there was no letter. It meant a whole lot to those boys to hear from home. It would have lifted a heavy load from their hearts to have received just one line from some one that cared. They felt, in their boyish way, that no one thought of them. They were despondent and in a frame of mind that meant disaster to them.

Then there went among them a secretary of the navy Y.M.C.A. He knew what the matter was. He had seen incidents like this before. And he knew what to do. With a cheery smile and a word of good will he went to them individually and invited them to share in the entertainment at the association building that evening. And they went. Boyish minds easily adjust themselves to conditions. They forgot the thoughtlessness of the folks at home and entered into the spirit of the evening.

All of which carries its lesson. Keep in touch with your son. The home influence is the strongest tie he has to keep him morally straight. When it fails, the Y.M.C.A. can sometimes reach out and save the day.

FOR VERNON SITE.

Bay City Chemical Concern to Build Extensive Plant in Los Angeles Industrial Suburb—Work is to be Started in the Next Few Days.

Construction will be started within the next few days on a group of factory buildings projected by the Stauffer Chemical Company of San Francisco at Vernon, the contract for the work having been awarded during the past week to the firm of Leonardt & Peck of this city. The Bay City concern will make an outlay of approximately $100,000 on its new Southern California plant.

The main building of the group will be of reinforced concrete and will cover a ground area of 116x240 feet, or more than half an acre. There also will be a number of smaller buildings, some of concrete and some of frame construction. The plans for the plant were prepared in San Francisco.

ALLEGED BOY ROBBER IN JUVENILE COURT.

Edward DeHoog, charged with complicity in the robbery of the Westlake branch of the Home Savings Bank last February, was brought before Superior Judge Shenk, in the Juvenile Court, yesterday and the charges against him were reduced to such proportions that the case may be handled by that department. DeHoog is under age and therefore cannot be tried on a felony charge.

His hearing before the Juvenile Court was set for next Wednesday. It is probable that the same witnesses will appear at this time who appeared at the trial of Roy DeHoog, older brother of Edward DeHoog. The former was sentenced to San Quentin on charges of having robbed the bank.

Cuticura Healed Very Sore Inflamed Pimples On Ears

Scale Formed Over Them. Itched So Scratched. Used 3 Cakes Cuticura Soap and 2 Boxes Ointment.

"My ears got very sore and would inflame and then I had earaches and scales formed on the backs of my ears. The appearance of the breaking out was like small pimples which would break and then a scale would form over them, and get very sore and red. It itched so that I could hardly keep from scratching. This lasted almost a year.

"Then I was told to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment which I did, and I only used three cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment when I was healed." (Signed) Miss Edith McGlothlin, R. F. D. 2, Winters, Cal., February 18, 1917.

It is distressing to reflect that much, if not all, of this suffering might have been prevented by using Cuticura Soap and no other for every-day toilet purposes with a little Cuticura Ointment now and then as needed to soothe and heal the first signs of skin or scalp troubles. Nothing purer or sweeter than these delicate emollients.

For Free Sample Each by Return Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. H, Boston." Sold everywhere. Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c.

Satan, Beware!

"BILLY" SUNDAY HERE FOR TWO-MONTH DRIVE ON SIN.

Crowd Greets Noted Evangelist and His Party, and will Line the Sawdust Trail This Morning to Hear Opening Shots at Evil's Trenches.

"BILLY" SUNDAY, for years a baseball idol, and now, for nearly a quarter of a century, a professional saver of souls and one of the most striking figures in modern evangelism, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday. He comes for a two-month campaign against the powers of evil. He comes as widely advertised as the most resourceful [illegible] and with a preorganized campaign of preparedness designed to create an "atmosphere" suitable to securing results. "Billy" Sunday has turned thousands of people from sinful ways in other cities. The church folk here are counting on history to repeat itself. They expect that by the end of the campaign, that will extend from today until October 28, there will be a great in-gathering for their folds.

AT THE STATION.

Fully an hour before the "Lark" arrived, at 9:45 o'clock a.m., a great crowd had gathered at the station, and there were long rows of waiting automobiles to be used in the escort. When the train came to a halt a party of probably 100 persons, who had been able to pass the gates, assembled before the steps of the Pullman and gave hearty cheers when "Billy" and "Ma" Sunday appeared. There was an entire absence of formality. "Billy" threw his arm affectionately around the shoulder of his son George, and "Ma" gave him a hearty kiss. "Billy" insisted upon looking after his own suit case, but was finally persuaded that it would be all right.

Outside the gates a crowd of probably 2000 persons, including the big army of ushers, the members of the various committees and many personal friends of the noted evangelist, raised hearty cheers as he and his party passed to their automobiles. Mr. Sunday stood in his auto and grinned; he answered various [illegible] of greetings with spirited "[illegible]," and then the escort started. About 200 auto cars accompanied the Sunday party to their Los Angeles home. There a brief welcoming address was made by S. M. [illegible], and Mr. Sunday responded in a few words.

HIS GREETING.

"I have come to Los Angeles to do my part in helping to make it a better city in which to live, and to help the people individually. I expect Los Angeles to do its part. If we work together, great blessings will come to this city."

On the way to the Sunday home, No. 201 South Bonnie Brae street, the escort passed the great tabernacle at Twelfth street and Grand avenue, and Mr. Sunday expressed satisfaction with its appearance and location.

Yesterday afternoon, after only the briefest rest and a luncheon at the new home, Mr. Sunday, accompanied by Mrs. Sunday, accepted an invitation to visit the City Hall and there, with the Mayor, review the parade of the Los Angeles contingent of the liberty army.

This forenoon, at 11 o'clock, Mr. Sunday will give his first public address here, in the great tabernacle that has been erected at Grand avenue and Twelfth street. He will also speak at 2 o'clock this afternoon and at the services this evening. From today onward until the close of the campaign he will speak each afternoon and evening of the week days, except on Mondays, and three times each Sunday.

PERSONNEL OF PARTY.

The Sunday party is composed of a trained corps of fourteen experts in the various lines of work. The entire personnel is as follows: Rev. William A. Sunday, Mrs. Helen A. Sunday, Dr. James E. Walker, assistant; Homer Rodeheaver, chorister; Robert Matthews, pianist and private secretary; George Marquis [illegible], business manager; Florence Whitbeck, reservations; Rev. [illegible] Ward, men's work; George [illegible] Brewster, pianist and soloist; Miss Frances Miller, director of business women's work; Mrs. William Asher, director of extension work; Miss Grace Saxe, director of Bible study; Miss Alice Miriam Gamlin, director of boys' and girls' work; Miss Florence Kinney; director of students' work; Joe Spiece, tabernacle builder; Albert Peterson, custodian of the tabernacle.

For nearly two years the plans for the visit of Mr. Sunday and party to Los Angeles had been developing. It was expected it would be possible to have him come to this city last year, but his previous engagements prevented the carrying through of this plan. A committee of prominent clergymen of this city visited him in the East and finally made arrangements for the two-month campaign now opening. Soon thereafter the local campaign of preparation began.

The local campaign organization is composed of nineteen committees, covering eleven lines of work. This Campaign Committee has the backing and co-operation of 221 Protestant churches, representing eighteen denominations, and a membership of more than 60,000.

LOCAL WORKERS.

The board of directors of the local Campaign Committee is composed of J. G. Warren, D. E. Luther, W. E. McVey, Charles C. Chapman, Dr. Charles Edward Locke, Nathan Newby and H. A. Getz. Dr. John Albert Eby is the executive secretary.

The executive committee's personnel is: J. G. Warren, chairman; Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, first vice-chairman; Willis H. Booth, second vice-chairman; Dell A. Schweitzer, third vice-chairman; W. E. McVey, treasurer; D. A. Byers, assistant treasurer; Charles A. Baskerville, auditor; D. E. Luther, assistant executive secretary; Clara B. Homer, recording secretary; Charles C. Chapman, Dr. Charles Edward Locke, Rev. Herbert Booth Smith and Dr. W. S. Dysinger.

The chairmen of the various committees are as follows: Finance, J. D. Radford; headquarters, H. M. Patterson; tabernacle, R. C. Mitchell; entertainment, S. M. Cooper; restaurant, C. A. DeCoo; neighborhood prayer meetings, Dr. J. Clarence Pinkerton; men's Bible classes, Judge Curtis D. Wilbur, Dr. W. A. Phillips; choruses, L. F. Peckham; ushers, James A. Haskett; personal work, Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, Rev. W. O. Fisher; student work, Prof. A. A. Macurda, J. S. Smart; men's work, A. L. Miller; boys' and girls' work, Harry W. Elliott; automobiles, Dell A. Schweitzer; secretaries, J. C. Snell; hospital, Dr. W. W. Beckett; woman's work, Mrs. W. A. Moses, Mrs. Harry G. Henley, Mrs. Seeley W. Mudd, Mrs. John E. Coffin, Miss Sada Johnson, Miss Rose Smith and Miss Faith Smith.

The heads of committees were guests of J. G. Warren at luncheon at the Clark at noon yesterday, when the final details of the campaign were gone over. All the vast amount of detail is now completed, ready for the beginning of the big "drive" on the strongholds of sin, to begin this forenoon.

WEEKS OF ORGANIZING.

Sixteen weeks ago the active preparations for the local campaign began in the various churches. Dr. James E. Walker and Al Saunders, one of the noted converts of "Billy" Sunday, came to Los Angeles, and with Dr. John Albert Eby began a systematic presentation of the Sunday campaign plans to the various organizations. Interspersed with sermons and addresses on evangelistic topics were talks on "The Real Truth About Billy Sunday," "What Sunday Can Do for Los Angeles," and similar topics, all paving the way for the creation of a deep interest in the events which begin today. Men's Bible classes were organized and a friendly rivalry between churches as to the size of these classes was cultivated; women were organized into bands for religious work; cottage prayer meetings were instituted, and the formation of great choruses and bands of personal workers was carried on. Meanwhile the enormous tabernacle structure was completed, and details were made for the caring for great crowds of people.

The close co-operation of all the churches represented through the campaign committee is expected. This co-operation will express itself, in one manner, through groups of churches omitting their regular services on certain Sundays and centering the attendance of their congregations at the great tabernacle.

SCHEDULE OF CHURCHES.

As an indication of the lines that will be followed in this matter, the following letter has been sent out by the general committee:

"The following is the official call for the closing of the co-operating and affiliating churches during the Sunday evangelistic campaign in Los Angeles city:

The arrival here yesterday of Rev. "Billy" Sunday.

The large picture shows the noted evangelist standing in his automobile greeting the crowd that met him at the Arcade station. Below is a "close-up" of him and Mrs. Sunday.

"(1.) All the churches in Los Angeles city proper are asked to close their church service on the first Sunday morning, September 2, 1917, except the churches in Hollywood and other outlying districts.

"(2.) On the second Sunday morning, September 9, the churches in the following places are requested to close: Hollywood, Glendale, Eagle Rock, Pasadena, South Pasadena, Alhambra, San Gabriel, El Monte, Whittier, Long Beach, Wilmington, San Pedro, Redondo Beach, Venice, Santa Monica, Van Nuys, Lankershim and other suburban towns and communities.

"(3.) Beginning with the third Sunday, September 16, the city and suburbs will be divided into four districts, at Grand avenue and Pico street. The churches in the southeast district, east of Grand avenue and south of Pico street, will close on the morning of September 16.

"(4.) The churches of the southwest district, lying west of Grand avenue and south of Pico street, will close on Sunday morning, September 23.

"(5.) The churches of the northwest district, lying west of Grand avenue and north of Pico street, will close on Sunday morning, September 30.

"(6.) The churches of the northeast district, including all the churches east of Grand avenue and north of Pico street, will close on Sunday morning, October 7.

"(7.) Further announcement will be made with reference to Sundays, October 14, 21 and 28.

"(8.) No request is made with reference to the services on Sunday nights at any time.

"(9.) The churches in cities and towns more distant from Los Angeles may use their discretion as to the closing of their churches for the Sunday-morning services.

"(10.) It is suggested that the churches change their midweek service from Wednesday evening to Monday evening during the campaign. There is no service in the tabernacle on Monday. All social activities in the churches during September and October should be reduced to the minimum, and the life and interest of the church centered at the tabernacle."

Much interest has been expressed in the financial end of the Sunday campaign. Very frequently the question has been asked: What does Billy Sunday get out of it? Dr. John Albert Eby, executive secretary of the local committee, discussed the financial phases yesterday. He said:

"Mr. Sunday is not guaranteed a single cent for his services. The agreement is that he is to receive the offerings on the last day of the campaign. No one knows, of course, how large or how small they will be.

"Mr. Sunday is to pay one-third of the expenses of his corps of workers, and we are to pay two-thirds. The total salary roll for the campaign of two months will be a little more than $5000.

"We estimate that the total cost of the campaign will be about $55,000, and the guarantee fund is over-subscribed, there now being pledges for about $78,000. The cost of the tabernacle is $25,000.

"Criticism has been heard because of the securing of a house for Mr. Sunday at a rent of $200 a month, but when it is considered that from fifteen to twenty people will be taken care of there, given room and bath, it will be seen that the cost is very reasonable."

Mr. Sunday came here directly from the Sunday fruit ranch at Hood River, Or. He and Mrs. Sunday have been resting there since the close of their New York campaign, June 24.

Mr. Sunday has bookings ahead for five years. It is his plan to go directly from the Los Angeles campaign to begin a similar work in Atlanta, Ga. Then will follow a campaign in Washington, D. C., another in Chicago, and a closing of the year's work with a campaign in Duluth.

Capt. Connell said yesterday that he is not advised as to the troubles involved, but that he will enter upon his duties tomorrow morning and in the meantime try to acquaint himself with the situation.

JESUITS' COLLEGE WILL OPEN SOON.

WORK ON HANDSOME BUILDINGS RUSHED TO LIMIT.

Many Applications for Admission of Students Indicate the Enrollment will be Large—Series of Ceremonies will Mark Completion of New Institution.

Every possible effort is being made to advance construction of the handsome new buildings for the Jesuit College on West Sixteenth street—the new St. Vincent's—and classes will be convened there early this month. Many applications from new students are being received, and indicate that the enrollment will be large on the opening day.

A series of religious and social functions has been planned for the opening of the new school, which will be a notable event in Catholic educational circles.

The faculty in charge of the new school will include: President, Rev. Frederick A. Rupert, S.J.; principal, Rev. Zach J. Maher, S.J.; chaplain, Rev. John C. Grisez, S.J.; professor of philosophy, Rev. Henry E. Boesch, S.J.; director of sciences, Rev. Joseph A. Vaughan, S.J.; professor of sophomores, Rev. Felix A. SOLDIERS OVERSEAS MAY CABLE FOLKS.

MESSAGES LIMITED TO CASES OF DIRE NECESSITY.

Plain English Words to be Used. All Dispatches Must be Addressed to Censor in New York, Who will Forward Same After Official Approval.

Arrangements for code addresses for cablegrams to families and business connections of military and naval personnel serving abroad, have been announced by G. A. Lawrence, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company, who received official instructions yesterday from the United States Censor Board. The rules embody the following:

Any person detailed to duty overseas in the military or naval forces wishing to cable a member of his family, or partner, or other business connection in the United States, in plain English, should request authority from his commanding officer to have his address code word registered with the cable censorship. These requests should be forwarded to the chief cable censor, Navy Department, Washington, for record and registration. Requests from members of families, etc., will receive attention if also so addressed.

The code word must consist of not more than ten letters and must be pronounceable. In addition, the full translation of the telegraphic address of the person for whom the cablegram is intended must be given to give the chief cable censor in making application, also the family or business relationship, and not more than one address will be authorized for each person in the military or naval service oversea.

All cablegrams will be addressed, "Censor, New York," and the registered code word will follow text as the first word of the message. All such cablegrams must be prepaid to New York. They will be accepted from the cable companies by the New York censor and will be put on the land telegraph lines, with the registered cable address translated from the registered code word and forwarded "collect."

Cablegrams in both directions must be restricted to cases of dire necessity, on account of the present congested condition of the Atlantic cables.

SOLDIER'S WIFE IS REFUSED DIVORCE.

"JUST A LITTLE TIFF," IS THE JUDGE'S DIAGNOSIS.

Bride's Promise to Cleave to Her Husband Appears to Have been Only Temporary—She Leaves His Chicken Ranch Because it is "So Lonely."

"Were you married by a minister or a justice of the peace?"

"By a minister."

"You promised then to cleave to your husband?"

"I did."

"Wasn't it a promise?"

"Yes, at that time."

"A temporary promise, wasn't it?"

There was no answer to this last question asked by Judge Taft yesterday, and there was a wan smile on the face of attractive Mrs. Henrietta Holloway. She was in court to see that if her husband, J. D. Holloway, got a decree of divorce, the agreement to allow their baby to remain with her was not disturbed. But Judge Taft refused Mrs. Holloway a divorce.

"It is absurd, ridiculous on the part of both," he said. "It is just a little tiff, and I am going to give you a chance to get toegther."

From the determined character of Mrs. Holloway's face, a reconciliation seems far away. Mr. Holloway has been drafted and will shortly go to the soldiers' camp. He told the court his wife, after living happily in a bungalow at La Crescenta, packed up her clothing and said she was going away. He had moved there for his health and also to establish a chicken business to enable him to get away from office work.

Mrs. Holloway said she left because it was so lonely. She had no young friends in La Crescenta.

"When I asked him to move into the city, he said he would not do it for me or anybody else. If I went to the city, I could stay. So I went. I wanted to be near my parents' home."

Attorneys Law and Hall say they will appeal from the judgment of Judge Taft.

THE PRESIDING JUDGE.

The presiding judge for the next six months is Judge Gavin W. Craig, who succeeds Judge Finlayson. The latter will resume his court, Department Three. The criminal departments will be occupied by Judges Willis and McCormick. Departments Nineteen and Twenty will be used by Judges Avery and Valentine.

WAR ENGINEER NOW.

Carl Wirshing, an engineer in the county road department, resigned yesterday to take up his commission as captain of engineers. He will start for Fort Leavenworth, Kan., for duty.

LETS CONTRACT; MAY NOT ACCEPT IT.

PRECEDENT ESTABLISHED BY PUBLIC WORKS BOARD.

Decides it Cannot Legally Permit Change of Bid After it has been Opened—May Have Important Bearing on West First-street Paving Contract.

The Board of Public Works yesterday awarded to Mike Chutuk the contract for the construction of a sewer in Buchanan street, despite his protest that he had made a mistake of approximately $10,000 in his bid. Whether this action will be considered a precedent and result in similar action with reference to the bids submitted for the West First-street paving contract is yet to be determined.

Mr. Chutuk's bid of $35,609 was the lowest for the contract. Subsequently he told the board that there was a clerical error in the bid and that he meant to place the figures at $45,609. His original bid was $10,833 lower than the next lowest, and if the board had allowed him to alter it it would still have been less than his nearest competitor.

It was the opinion of the board that it had no legal right to recognize Mr. Chutuk's claim that an error had been made and its only course was to award him the contract upon the original bid. That the contractor may refuse to accept the contract is more than possible because the engineer's estimate of the cost was $44,000.

The bid of George Oswald for the First-street contract also contains a technical or clerical error and the board is awaiting an opinion from the City Attorney as to whether it can change the bid.

Criswell Goes East.

Councilman Criswell departed yesterday for Minneapolis to attend a meeting of labor-union leaders. The purpose of the meeting is to sanction the stand of President Wilson on the war. The Councilman said the labor unions are strong for the President.

PASSED BAD CHECKS.

Clever Bank Worker Pleads Guilty to Issuing and Cashing Paper Fraudulently. Two Cases Admitted With Several Others Expected.

C. S. Cooper, charged with passing bad checks, was held to answer to the Superior Court under $2000 bond when given a preliminary hearing yesterday before Justice Edward Judson Brown. The principal allegations presented by Deputy District Attorney Glover were that a check for $125, made payable to cash and signed by R. L. McKee, was cashed for Cooper by a Glendale bank, while another check for $180, made payable to R. L. McKee and signed by the Cordell Milling Company, on the Cordell (Okla.) National Bank, was also cashed by him.

Cooper pleaded guilty to the charges, but not until after all the evidence had been introduced. His arrest at Banning recently was the result of months of work on the part of a private detective agency. It was said yesterday by representatives of the agency that there are a number of other checks out against the man. It is alleged by the District Attorney's office, that Cooper has been operating a "check game" in different parts of the country for more than two years.

TAKE HAIR OUT NOT OFF THE SKIN

Hair is bound to grow out coarser and stiffer when merely removed from the surface of the skin. The only common-sense way to remove hair is to attack it under the skin. DeMiracle, the original sanitary liquid, operates on this principle. It alone contains certain ingredients which give it the power to rob hair of its vitality. It does this by absorption.

DeMiracle works equally well for removing hair from face, neck, arms, under arms or limbs to prevent it from showing through stockings.

Insist on the genuine DeMiracle. It is the only depilatory that has a money-back guarantee in each package. In 60c, $1 and $2 bottles at all toilet counters, or direct from us in plain wrapper on receipt of price.

FREE booklet mailed in plain sealed envelope on request. Write for it today and read it before you make another application of any depilatory. DeMiracle Chemical Co., Dept. G56 Park Ave. and 129th St., New York.

THE REIGN OF TERROR.
"Give Socialism a chance and it will show what it can do!" has been the cry of the Socialist from time immemorial. Socialism is getting a chance now in San Francisco, and it is making a bloody mess of it.

A SLICK SLACKER.
A Washington slacker claims exemption on the ground that he is a felon, being in jail for failure to register. He will be allowed to serve his prison sentence, but Uncle Sam will keep his eagle eye on the would-be shirker and will grab him the minute he gets out.

NOTHING BUT TROUBLE.
That unlucky citizen whose wife is suing him for divorce and who, in addition, has been sentenced to jail for contempt of court, must be a descendant of Hamlet's stepfather, who remarked to Hamlet's mother: "Oh Gertrude, Gertrude! When sorrows come they come not single file, but in battalions!"

WATCH OUR SMOKE.
The Paris press says that President Wilson may hope to open the eyes of the German people to the evils of autocracy, but that he must continue to be diligent in war preparations. France needn't worry any on that score. Uncle Sam's war preparations is one method he is pursuing in order to open Germany's eyes. Watch our smoke!

SHE WILL COME BACK.
A few days ago a handsome elderly woman helped herself from the family exchequer, donned a blue silk dress, white shoes and bright-ribboned hat and ran away from home. Her sorrowing husband describes her as "a woman of fifty, with golden hair and unusually attractive." If that is his genuine opinion of her and she finds it out she will not remain out in the cold, cruel world very long. She will be glad enough to come back to the man who thinks more of her than he does of anyone else on earth and who cares for her more than all the rest of the world could ever care.

MISSED HIS CALLING.
A chicken thief, who was asked by the court if he had anything to say for himself before sentence was pronounced, said that while going home from his work he had climbed over a fence and stepped on a hen; that the bird had attacked him and that in self-defense he had grabbed the fowl by the neck with no intention of either murder or theft. Sad to relate, the defendant was sent to jail, where, if he is wise, he will pass his time in writing a successful novel. There is no reason why such a brilliant thinker should be compelled to resort to chicken-stealing for a livelihood.

A FOOLISH ARGUMENT.
A pioneer physician of Pasadena who recently passed away at the ripe age of 86 years said that he believed his long and happy life was due to the fact that he had never used tobacco, liquor or any other kind of stimulants or narcotics. It is a common boast of many drug victims that the long-lived people are those who smoke and drink whenever they feel like it. The statement, however, is false and statistics prove it. The fact that a habitual drinker occasionally passes the three score and ten mark is evidence only that he possesses an extraordinary constitution and is no proof that intemperance conduces to longevity. The argument to the contrary is ridiculous on the face of it.

LAW AND LOVE.
A crazed motion-picture actor of Los Angeles who recently shot a handsome young woman with whom he had become infatuated, and then drank poison, wrote, as an excuse for his actions: "There was no love for me in her heart and I am taking the law into my own hands." It is a mistake that many persons make, in some degree, this assumption that it is possible to take the law into one's own hands. It can't be done. One can either obey the law or break it and suffer the consequences, but no one can manage the great laws which are already in existence. Where mutual affection does not exist it cannot be forced and any attempt to do so only removes the object of affection to a still greater distance.

It is estimated that the back-yard farm products this year will be worth $350,000,000. Isn't that rather high for a bunch of radishes?

And the mothers who smile when the boy is drafted are among the heroines of the hour. Theirs is the griping grief of what may come.

"Are Cubists Insane?" is the subject of discussion before a number of literary societies. How can there be a debate upon an issue where there is but one side?

Congressman Scott Ferris says that under no circumstances will he make the race for Governor of Oklahoma next year. Hey there, boy, page Al Jennings.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND—AND PEACE.

I.

CONGRESS has not made water run up hill yet, but it has solemnly repealed the law of supply and demand—and we suppose it will next abolish the law of gravitation. To governmental supervision has been reserved the final triumph of mind over matter. The great facts of Nature may be stubborn things, but they are slowly yielding to the beneficent influence of the paternalistic Wilson administration. Official regulation of everything from the birth rate to the hours when one may eat and the food that may be served, is the last word in modern government. The time when a man's house was his castle is as remote as that when one fixed his own price for the product of his own labor. Whether wheat be scarce or plentiful, we are to pay an arbitrary rate for it.

Gone are the days of the independent farmer; an open market will soon be as great a curiosity as is a hippogriff or a Dinornis. Administration theorists have discovered that a little liberty is a dangerous thing; so they are rewriting the civil law, the moral law, the criminal law, and the natural law. Descartes believed that the moon regulated the movement of the tides. That may have been true in the dark ages before the power of government regulation was fully developed; but the moon is no longer permitted to interfere with the operations of free government bearing the Wilson-Daniels brand. Some day, we suppose, the tides will move under strict governmental supervision.

Plato believed that the law of supply and demand was superior to man-made legislation; but Plato was an ass. We now are assured that the law can be suspended or abrogated at will by government decree. If Wilson and Hoover say that coal shall be four cents a bushel at the pit and six cents a bushel delivered in the bin, that is the price of coal, regardless of whether it costs two cents or seven cents to extract it from the earth. The producer who sells coal for more commits a felony; if he stores it at the mine, the government will take possession of the stock at a price which its deputies will name; if he declines to operate the works, the government will mine the coal, acting as his agent. The government will take the profit but he will be responsible for the loss. A formless thing such as an unwritten law of supply and demand will not be permitted to interfere.

Written law is now to be supreme. You see the democracy of the future will brook no opposition, not even from nature itself. Under the "new democracy" the workmen will receive higher wages but the products of his labor will sell for less. Henceforth it is to be possible for the government to reduce the hours of labor and increase arbitrarily the wages of railway employees, and at the same time cut down freight and passenger rates. The Gompers wage scale for miners, involving an increase of from fifty to eighty per cent., is to be enforced by government regulation, but the price of coal is to be arbitrarily reduced. In this way the demand is to be lessened and the supply increased. Society has been enslaved by the unwritten law of supply and demand for at least five thousand years; but the day of regeneration is at hand. A merchant will sell at the price fixed by the government, and no less, no matter if he be overstocked. If he becomes unruly and closes his shop, rather than keep up prices, the government will seize his stock and prosecute him criminally. Fish may rot in the stalls because there is no demand for them at the fixed price; but they must not be sold for less. The law of supply and demand is repealed.

Marked progress along this line has already been made. There was a time when the price of wheat in the Chicago pit was the standard of the country. Millers bought their supply there; the great foreign buyers transacted most of their business there. All the leading papers of the country carried the Chicago wheat quotations as regularly and as religiously as the weather reports. But the Chicago wheat pit has closed its doors. The prices were regulated there by the unwritten law of supply and demand and the speculators occasionally manipulated the market by cornering the supply. The government will attend to all that now. The new arbiter of prices is to be an eminent professor who was at one time a member of the Wilson faculty at Princeton. He is totally lacking in business experience; but that really doesn't matter for the old standards of business have all been reversed. The head of the government is also the seat of the business of the nation—metaphorically speaking of course. "Heads I win; tails you lose." And if newspaper writers dare criticise or producers dare stop producing, send 'em to jail! "Let the people rule"? No, Sam Gompers!

II.

THE KAISER has no doubt read with amazement, inflamed by royal wrath, President Wilson's reply to the Pope. It was sufficiently disappointing to Gott's "chosen" to discover that peace may not be had for his asking; but to have the President explain to His Holiness that the pledges of the Hohenzollerns are guarantees of nothing, must have made the choleric War Lord regret more deeply than ever that his bull-headed diplomats misconstrued America's reluctance for cowardice.

It is probable that the Allies were not without a grim sense of humor in honoring President Wilson with the office of spokesman in rejecting the Pope's proposal; for it should be remembered that a similar one was proffered by the President in the first months of the war and was then rejected by Sir Edward Grey in terms closely resembling those employed by Mr. Wilson in replying to the Pope.

In the interim the United States has not only learned that it had reasons for getting into the war, but also its reasons for not getting out of the war until victorious. In the beginning almost everyone sympathized with Belgium, but was inclined to believe that France welcomed the chance for revenge, that Russia was taking a long shot for the long sought Bosphorus, and that England was actuated by jealousy. Whatever effect those influences contributed to the cause of the war, they long ago ceased to be considered. In the same way such "origins" of the war as the Bagdad railroad, the Kiel canal, commercial rivalries and Balkan feuds, have ceased to be of the slightest importance in studying the present or future status of the war. Whatever land-grabbing may develop in Europe, after it is over, can have nothing to do with the reasons for fighting the war to an Allies' victory. Whatever political crimes the Allies may be guilty of—presuming that they will have failed to learn the same lesson that they are teaching Germany—they offer no reason for not fighting on until the German government is overturned.

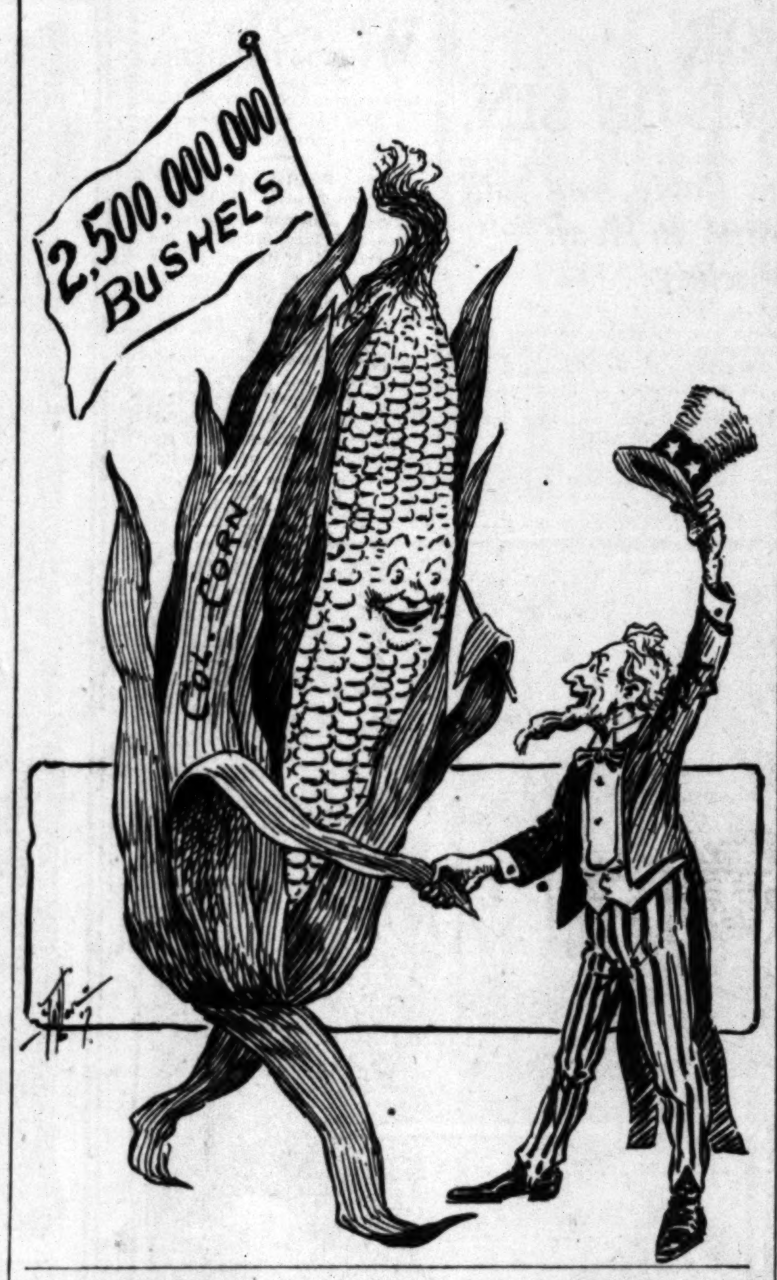
III.

THE United States wants peace; and we of this country probably want it more deeply and intensely than the Germans—or at least than the ruling class of Germans—for we have no love of fighting, no state-subsidized professors and preachers recounting the beauties of war; and we take no pleasure in looting towns, smashing cathedrals, and terrorizing inhabitants into a fearful respect for our uniforms—all of which is dear to the Junker, of whom the subliminated representative is His Majesty of the Shining Armor. The Germans now want peace because they are not winning. They cried for "World Dominion or Ruin," and being brought near to ruin they are welching on the bravado slogan and talking earnestly of an ante bellum status.

Which further shows the great capacity of the Germans for taking nonsense seriously. Give the Germans peace on their own terms and the world would have none. In a way unmentionable they are already preparing for a new generation of Teutons; royalty encourages bastardy by lending itself as god-parents; and a state appropriation provides for the care of the illegitimate. They do not want peace—they want an armistice. When the German people want peace they can have it by taking the power to make war from the control of the Hohenzollerns and the aristocracy that upholds them.

That the German people have had their lust for conquest affected by hunger is well enough known; but that they have not yet fully realized that their Kultur is unacceptable to the world at large, is also apparent. At present they are in a mood to nurse their grudge against the world until such a time as they feel renewed confidence in their arms; and they are quite exasperated that they cannot have their armistice for the asking. It is really quite preposterous that decadent England, degenerate France and fat, money-grubbing America should insist on fighting it out when the sons of Thor, the bristling Prussian Guard, the great War Lord himself have signified their readiness to stop. But a greater War Lord, King Hunger, is getting in his work and may lead the German people to "bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance."

Another Recruit.



IN SALUTATION.
Soldiers of the National Army, you who yesterday marched through the streets of the fairest city in the world, bidding good-by to those you love and receiving the plaudits of 100,000 souls that watched you pass, The Times salutes you in the name of liberty and bids you God-speed upon your way. To you who have been selected to don the uniform of freedom and defend the land in which you live; to you, "Volunteers, oh volunteers," who walked side by side with those that are soon to depart for the north to prepare for conflict in a country o'er the sea; to you, veterans who waded seas of blood far back in the sixties for the honor and glory and lasting unity of the several states, and who yesterday marched with the sons of California, cheering them with your presence and your undying enthusiasm in the cause of right and justice—to each and all of you The Times bows in salute.

For it is to you, young men, and those valiant ones in other lands who, like you, are offering their lives in the service of humanity, that all the world is looking to bring about the abolition of tyranny and oppression and the assurance of a peace that will be lasting because based upon the principles of justice. You are called to a glorious mission. Not for nothing are the drums beating and the bands playing and the colors flying above your heads. Those drums are beating the death knell of the god of war; the strains of bugle and fife are preludes to universal harmony; the Stars and Stripes are emblematic of the liberty which you will help to establish in every land on earth. To you, willing defenders of your country's honor and safety, The Times gives greetings and a fond good-by.

WHAT IS THE PUBLIC TASTE?
To gauge, to sense the big majority ruling of the public taste is the most important business of many industries and professions. Theatrical and film producers, publishers and department stores are particularly dependent upon this sense of what will draw.

It may be a science to foretell the finer shades of the public taste in many departments, but The Times protests that the vast body of the people stand for the wholesome, the decent, the normal and the good.

The bizarre, the vulgar, the prurient are, when accepted at all, taken simply as a condiment; like mustard, a little of it goes a long way. And those who essay to exploit this rare phase of the public taste can never hope to make any lasting success. They may create a temporary sensation, they may win a brief and fleeting patronage, but swift and sure sets in the revulsion of feeling and the public is itself again.

Positively nothing palls so quickly as vulgarity. And whether it is a newspaper or magazine, a film production or a drama, dancing or fashions, it is the sweet, the clean and the modest that win lasting favor and profitable success. The public is inherently faithful to decent ideals; only a very small and unprofitable minority can be found to support the lewd and the screaming.

It is safe to say that those who seek to found a permanent industry based upon an appeal to the public taste, must cater to the best and not the worst side of the public character. Even people who are themselves depraved retain this admiration and respect for cleanliness. There are few so low that they do not love the pure and the modest wherever it can be found. Sweetness and refinement still rule the world. Honesty, manliness, courage, dignity will hold the public taste for all time.

These are bromidic truths that all who run may read. It is self-evident on all sides. Yet we see wealthy film and play producers, anxious for public support and approval, offering that public a bizarre conglomeration of smut, produced at tremendous cost, designed to cater to their very lowest passions, astonished and amazedly scornful because a righteous community rises up in protest.

We see publishers putting forth licentious books, and yelling when an outraged government bars them from the mails.

There is much loud talk of the goody-goody minority trying to enforce its circumscribed outlook upon a broad-minded public. But the truth is that it 's a sternly virtuous public insisting upon the decency of a vulgar minority. It is not "broad-minded" to countenance filth and indecency. Too many of the depraved take unction to their soul on the score of "broad-mindedness," one of the most prevalent excuses for low tastes.

The straight and narrow way is the right, the clean, the wholesome way. And he who deviates from it never gets anywhere that is worth getting to. The vast majority of the public want to make life's journey by the direct route, the honest, straightforward route that is mapped out by the conscience. One may step aside and investigate the winding bypaths, perhaps, but that is not the road one chooses for reaching one's destination—not if one expects to make the journey without mishap, not if one expects to arrive.

Just as the skipper who would bring his bark safely to port keeps to the charted sea roads, putting his faith in his compass and ignoring the false mirage, so does the average man set forth upon his journey of life.

Therefore, aside from idealism and principles, putting the thing on a purely commercial basis, such industries and professions that depend for their livelihood on the public taste must in the long run find nobility, honesty and sweetness the more profitable. They can sell a little smut to some of the people some of the time, but wholesome ideals can be sold to all the people all the time.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

UNCERTAIN TIMES.

In times of war no prophet tells just what will chance tomorrow; it may be you'll be wearing bells, or plunged neck deep in sorrow. Perhaps the boss will on you smile, and say, "Boy, I admire you;" perhaps he'll say that trade's so vile he fears he'll have to fire you. We are at war with sword and gun, and as the trouble waxes, our Uncle Sam may need much mon, and load us down with taxes. From big expense there's no escape, when nations get to scrappin'; so let us get ourselves in shape to meet whate'er may happen. Let's purchase small tin savings banks, with red and yellow painted, and in them put the marks and francs, and other coin untainted. In time of war prepare for peace, that peace of mind unending, which comes to prudent folk who cease all vain and useless spending; who have a package put away, should evil days come nigh them, who'll do without their pies today, if they lack coin to buy them. Keep out of debt, for debt's a curse when times are calm and cheerful, and now that war is here it's worse—it's something dread and fearful. Be prudent now, before the stress of war has made us humble, and when the crisis comes you'll bless the day you took a tumble.

WALT MASON.

I GUESS SO.

BY CHARLES F. LUMMIS.

I am no Catholic. But neither (let us pray) am I a fool.

There is nothing in the world ever so much desired as Peace. We wish it even in our homes—and are, like Gen. Grant, "willing to fight for it"—though I do not beat my wife unless it seems the only road to Peace.

There is no one in the world so well entitled to say "S-sh" to the embattled nations as the Pope. He is recognized head of the oldest and the most numerous Christian church on earth. Politics have nothing to do with him—nor nationalities. His motives cannot be questioned.

The Pope has made a tentative sketch of the terms of that Peace which all the world wants.

His Prescription will not suit all palates—German, British, French, Italian, Russian and Wilson. But it is a cinch that we'll all have to "Take our Medicine" somehow. Any dose of a World War is D. Bitter. Mebbe Dr. Benedict's prescription may be worth testing.

Anyhow, let's Think for a Minute—such as have the Wherewithal.

Did ever any statesman in the world face a more frightful responsibility than in saying "Yes" or "No" to this Peacemaker? How many million lives hang on the answer of the Allies to the Pope? What bankrupt nations, extinguished homes, obliterated families—not to mention petty things like personal beggary and bereavement in a dozen countries—will lie upon the soul that does not Welcome any chance of an Honorable Peace?

Peace would disappoint a good many politicians, munition factories, contractors, and so on. Though if they didn't make shrapnel they could make shoes and shirts. War would more than "disappoint" ten million homes, even in this one country. Mothers have a curious, selfish liking to have sons; and girls a ditto to have brothers and sweethearts; and I am positive that Sherlock Holmes could find, here and there, a male American who is no slacker, but would just as soon "Do his Bit" by Mother, Sis and Girlie as fight England's battles.

Of course every sane person realizes that the Pope's Suggestion and Wilson's Answer are merely a Try-out Before the Game—a Preliminary Sparring. Mr. Wilson has not "Rejected" the Pope's Proposals—for the Pope has made none. He has simply expressed the world's Wish for Peace—very much along the Same Lines Mr. Wilson gave us a long time ago. No Kingdom in the world is so neutral as the Pope's, which has no more temporal power than the Mayor of Los Angeles.

The Pope's message to the warring world was written in Latin, and translated as well as the translator could. Our President's answer was written by himself in English. It is one of the big state papers of our history.

But me—I'd rather have written Benedict's slow words for Peace than the Classic Answer—that the world could have peace when in the judgment of a single individual, it Ought To.

An otherwise brisk Australian officer assures us that the Germans "don't know how to fight." Huh! That's a bad gospel for us to swallow. If they can't fight, what have England, France, Russia, Italy et al. been doing for the last three years? Getting "Played With?" Napoleon said "the greatest mistake is to underestimate your foe." We'd better reckon that we have something more ahead of us than a Game of Tag. Some of us are so Ancient of Days that we have vague memories of the Spanish-American War, a generation ago; and how our politics and our Secretary of War then killed off, on U. S. soil, before they ever enboated for Cuba, far more Sammies with typhoid and Alger Beef than Spanish bullets ever touched.

But probably we may hope now for less of the usual mistakes of a Democracy—since we no longer have one. We have today the most iron-clad autocracy that History has known. We naturally—with, our juvenile American sense of humor, have to thumb our noses at Josie Daniels and Pansy Baker. But it is not just. They are not responsible. Congress is not responsible—except for cowardly surrender of its prerogative and its duty. Only one man in God's world is responsible in this Great Day which involves the lives of ten million Americans and the fortunes and the sacred honor of ninety million more.

God be with this great and good man who from a college professor has seized himself with the most despotic control ever held upon a nation by any one man. I believe no man in America has a cleaner Conscience—though I know hundreds of more Experience and understanding of the American People. God guide him—since it's now only he and God that steer our national destinies—God guide him sure and fair to see that Our Boys are not murdered at home by tin-horn Cabinets, nor wasted abroad by Red Tape; that he will tell us what we fight For and Until—so we can fight Understandingly. For Americans will never fight their best unless they Know What For.

"God deliver me from my Friend; Unto mine enemy I'll attend," says the old Spanish saw. A placeholder friend of the President says: "Woodrow Wilson will win this war, if you let him alone."

If the Censorship covered Fool Language, as well as what some boy writes to his Bestest Girl!

No man will win this war! No man is big enough. And there is no man that any nation will "let alone." England has made a ghastly file of her politicians walk the plank. Russia has turned 'em inside out. France—unquestionably the best-regulated country concerned in this accursed fracas—says to this Cabinet officer or general, "Git! and he gitteth." Even in Germany they can (and do) change an incompetent cabinet.

BLASTS LIKE BATTLE ROAR AT CAMP

fifty-two officers' messes and 2000 lavatories and shower baths. The men will bunk in tents. There are 44,000 feet of sewer line and 40,000 feet of water mains, for all of which the trenching is being blown out, both horizontally and perpendicularly, as the hardpan extends down many feet. In the cantonment buildings proper there will be used 4,112,000 feet of lumber; in the hospital unit 3,000,000 feet of lumber, and in the remount camp 1,500,000 feet, or a total of 8,612,000 feet of lumber, or enough to make twenty-eight shiploads.

The huge building programme was augmented yesterday, on instructions from Washington to erect two storehouses and an infirmary for each regiment quartered at the camp.

Just beyond the cantonment, on the reservation, a great reservoir is being completed by the city of San Diego. This is to hold 1,500,000 gallons, a day's supply for the big camp, and sixteen-inch mains will carry it into the camp. There are to be twelve miles of railroad on the camp site proper, including a 600-foot bridge, a Y to the big storehouses, a branch to the hospital and one to the remount camp, and about three miles of track to Linda Vista station. The Santa Fe began the road June 28, and on August 5 the first carload of material was unloaded. Now 8.3 miles of track are finished.

There are 32,000 feet of gas mains laid to lavatories and mess buildings. The electricity is now in and 400 poles were used to carry the wires. The electricity at 11,000 volts is transformed at the camp substation to 2200 volts and distributed and transformed at each station to 110 volts.

Almost all the vitrified and cement sewer pipe in Southern California was bought Monday by the Hampton Company. Orders for 100,000 feet of vitrified pipe from Tropico and cement from San Diego were placed.

ON A BIG SCALE.

The entire site has been graded with immense caterpillar tractor plows and tractor land levelers. A six-gang plow does the work of fifty mules. There are more than 1000 men working on the trenches and 2400 feet of trench a day is being dug by this army.

The hospital unit, which has not been started yet, will consist of fifty buildings, with equipment equal to that of the best medical institutions in the country. There will be 500 beds and the unit will occupy fifty acres. There will be a well-equipped laboratory for bacteriological work, also an infirmary for each regiment. Some of the most noted specialists and surgeons in America are to go to Camp Kearny soon as the staff of the great hospital. Among the most widely known of these is William H. Mayo of the famous Mayo brothers.

Another addition made to the plans of the cantonment the past week is the remount camp. This is to be the greatest remount and breeding camp on the Pacific Coast. It is located southwest of the camp site and will accommodate 7000 or 8000 horses. There are to be corrals, forage barns, a hospital and convalescent stables for horses. For this alone 1,500,000 feet of lumber are being used. Quartermaster captains are in Imperial Valley and in the Northwest now, purchasing horses and mules for the remount camp.

Although no figures can be given as to the cost of the great cantonment, it will be between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. The contract was given on a cost plus basis to the William E. Hampton Company. This is done in order that nothing shall go into the building of the camp that is inferior or cheap. The construction company will be paid the cost plus their percentage.

HIGH-PRESSURE WORK.

Mr. Hampton has gathered about him for the work on the cantonment some of the leading engineers and draughtsmen of the Southwest. J. B. Lippincott, who was an engineer of the Los Angeles aqueduct, is the chief engineer for the construction company. These days are busy ones for the contractors, who must use all speed to get the camp ready for the troops. Every morning at 7 o'clock Mr. Hampton is at his offices in the American National Bank, San Diego, and by 8 or 9 o'clock is at Camp Kearny. There he remains until 6, and then spends most of his evenings at the city offices.

A force of 1000 men was put to work August 12, and then, as the contractor has received additional orders from the government and the problem of the hardpan has arisen, with the order for miles of concrete sewer system, he has increased the force. The beginning of the past week there were 2000 men at work and now there are 3500. To expedite the sewer trenching a force of 100 drillers was put on night duty the past week. The rapid increasing of the force of laborers means much work in itself, for everything in the camp is under army regulations and the men must all be properly housed and fed. A big force of men worked all night to get a big mess kitchen ready to accommodate the last 1000 men employed.

Sanitation is the watchword in the camp, as well as speed in the work performed. Flies and dirt are fought religiously by the men in charge. Every workman has a clean spring cot bed, the bedding of which he neatly rolls up at the head of the bed each morning for inspection. The great mess kitchens are in charge of "Big John," a famous chef, who fed the workmen of the aqueduct. "Big John," whose name is Restelle, is undisturbed by the size of his family, for he simply multiplies his orders and proceeds to provide accordingly. More than $2500 is spent daily for food at the camp. The ten big mess kitchens are modern in every respect. Great revolving ovens turn out 120 loaves of bread every thirty minutes, 175 pies every half-hour, and 300 pounds of cake in the same time. "Big John's" family eats 250 gallons of hot cakes each morning, 4000 pounds of meat, 1500 pounds of beans and 7000 biscuits. Everything is of the best grade and cooked deliciously. Steaks, cake, hot rolls and good pies are on the menu. The problem of securing dishes for the construction camp has been difficult. Every agate plate and metal knife and fork in the stores of San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco has been bought. The last supply for the last 1000 men came from Kansas City.

THE MILITARY CHIEFS.

Maj. Charles H. Nichols, Engineer Corps, is in charge of the construction of the camp. He relieved First Lieut. Charles S. Rogers, who came here from Washington and superintended the camp in the early stages. Lieut. Rogers continues on the executive staff. Maj. Nichols, who comes from New Haven, Ct., is an experienced engineer and ranking officer of more mature experience. His assistant is Capt. O. C. Wyman, a reserve officer from Plattsburg. The executive officers are Capt. G. A. Christensen, Lieut. Edward H. Dietz and Lieut. Rogers, reserve officers; Maj. J. F. Sherburn, National Guard, California; Capt. F. E. Barnum, Utah National Guard; Capt. B. A. Meade, Colorado National Guard; Capt. C. A. Lore and Capt. F. S. Rumage. Maj. James S. McKnight, California Coast Artillery, was in command of the troops at the camp pending the arrival of Maj.-Gen. Strong, the commander. Maj. H. P. Wilbur is camp quartermaster and Maj. D. P. McCord has charge of the medical department.

The amusement and recreation features of the big cantonment are all in charge of the Young Men's Christian Association. Five big buildings will be erected by the association according to army regulations. Each building will have moving pictures, billiard-rooms, a large recreation room and reading-room. Writing paper is furnished free to the men, the pictures are free, and so is everything offered in the buildings. Each building will have five secretaries and a physical director.

The Young Women's Christian Association will have two hostess houses at the camp, where relatives and friends of the men may meet them. There will be tea and lunchrooms and comfortable quarters for the women visitors.

END IS IN SIGHT.

The completion of the great cantonment will be a matter of but a few days once the task of digging the sewer and water trenches is done. Some of the buildings cannot be erected while the blasting is being done. All the buildings are of balloon construction, and when unretarded by the sewer work they can be thrown up in a day or two. To date, 19,200 feet of the 40,000 feet of water trenching is open and 5700 feet of water main laid; the sewer trench is half opened and a considerable portion laid. All the storehouses are finished and seventy-eight company messes, and a total of 115 buildings has now been reached. The telephone exchange is in and the entire gas system laid. About 13,900 feet of the 44,000 feet of sewer trenching is finished. About 1,678,000 feet of lumber has been used in the buildings now up.

Before the 20th inst., the date set for completion, the contractors expect to have the big camp finished. The date for completion was at first set for the 1st inst., but the hardpan and the many additional contracts given by the government made this an impossibility.

Although the constructing quartermaster, Maj. Nichols, and his staff are very busy, other officers who have arrived are left without anything to do until the troops are there. While watching the stupendous task of the contractors in digging and blasting the trenches, some of the officers have been heard to wonder why the hardpan site was chosen.

Their problem will come later, for when the camp is built they will have to find a soft spot where the men may practice digging trenches. It is a certainty they never can dig trenches in the hardpan of the mesa soil.

TROOPS GATHERING.

All the staff officers are there now, and daily troops are arriving. Maj.-Gen. Frederick Strong, commander of the Fortieth Division, who arrived last Sunday, made his first inspection of the camp Monday. He was until recently stationed in the Hawaiian Islands. He is eagerly awaiting the completion of the camp. The other general officers there are Brig.-Gen. George A. M. Tuthill, commander of the Seventy-ninth Infantry Brigade; Brig.-Gen. LeRoy S. Lyon, commander of the Sixty-fifth Field Artillery Brigade, and Brig.-Gen. George Cameron, commander of the Seventy-eighth Infantry Brigade. Lieut.-Col. John W. Gulick is Chief of Staff to Maj.-Gen. Strong.

Mobilization of the National Guardsmen will begin the 16th inst.

Some idea of what the cantonment means to Southern California may be gained from a partial list of food articles which will be used there for the year. The quartermaster's figures are: 199,500 bushels potatoes, 58,400 bushels onions, 34,200 gallons each of pickels and vinegar, sufficient wheat for 15,603,750 loaves of bread, 34,200 bushels navy beans, 4300 bushels evaporated apples, 3200 bushels evaporated peaches, 1,710,000 pounds canned tomatoes and 1,109,700 pounds butter.

AUTHORITY ON WAR.

Frederic Villiers, Who Will Talk on "What I Saw at the Front," has Been Witness of Great Conflicts for the Past Two Score Years.

Frederic Villiers, dean of war correspondents and artist-illustrator, who is to lecture on "What I Saw at the Front" next Wednesday evening at Trinity Auditorium for the benefit of the British Ambulance Society, is a remarkable personage.

From the Serbian affair in 1876 until the present day, wherever men and nations were fighting, there Villiers was to be found.

Mr. Villiers was educated in France, and became one of the celebrated exhibitors of war pictures at the Royal Academy and at the Institute of Painters in Oils. He was war correspondent for the London Graphic in Serbia in 1876, and the following year was with the Russians in Turkey. Two years later he was in Afghanistan, Gadamuck and the Bazaar Valley. A trip around the world followed, and then he was with Lord Beresford on the Condor, at El Magfa and Tel-el-Kebir. He was a guest at the coronation of Czar Alexander III at Moscow, and also at that of Nicholas II. From that date to the present he has been active with pen and pencil in all the wars down to the present world conflict. He was specially invited by the French military authorities to join the army of the Allies.

The Real Difference.

[Detroit Free Press:] "I can't see why that man is boss over me. I do most of the work around here."

"I guess that is so."

"It is. I know more about the business than he does. Whenever he wants to know anything about what's going on he comes to me to find out."

"That's usually the way."

"I'm the fellow that ought to be the boss."

"A lot of men think that way, and yet there's one big difference. He knows something that you don't know."

"What is it?"

"He knows enough to hire good men like you to do the work. If you knew that you'd be the boss and he'd be in your place."

REAL DEEP-SEA DOINGS IN BIG TRANSIT SHED.

The Concrete Floor is a Deck and it is a Busy Life for All at the Naval Training Station.

FROM the time the cooks are called, at 4 a.m., until taps is sounded at 9:05 p.m., the 1800-foot transit freight shed on the outer harbor municipal wharf is a ship at sea, to all intents and purposes, so far as the life of the 1000 men who are training there is concerned. The entrance to the shed is over solid concrete steps, but for the sake of harmony with the nautical terms used in the life inside the shed, it might as well be called a gangplank, for once you are inside the shed you are among men living sailors' lives, as aboard ship.

The officer you are looking for may be standing on a concrete floor that is anchored almost as solidly as the rock of Gibraltar, but the orderly soberly informs you that he is on the "forward deck," and says it as if he expected you to believe him. From the galley to the end of the section occupied by the training station, the distance is nearly 1200 feet, but it is manned like the deck of a great ship, and every man who is not there on duty is "ashore."

UNIQUE IN WEST.

The outer harbor naval training station is the only one of its kind in the Twelfth Naval District, embracing the entire coast of California and several interior States. It was established recently to train volunteers who had enlisted in the Naval Coast Defense Reserve, an organization to provide for expansion of the navy in time of imminent or actual war, which was authorized by the act of August 29, 1916. The legislation enacted provides for various classes of reserves for the navy, such that any citizen inspired by patriotic motives may find the opportunity for service. Applicants for enrollment are required to have such experience and qualifications as to be able to perform useful service in or with the navy. The result is men of an unusually high class, many of whom have had actual experience on yachts and motor boats.

Commander J. J. Hunker is commandant of the station. He was a retired naval officer who had been living at Pasadena for several years when called back into the service. His aide is Lieut. Eugene Overton, a former well-known Los Angeles attorney. The executive officer is Capt. John Mel, who was detailed by the Navy Department for duty in this district in connection with the enrollment of the naval reserve force. Under direction of the commandant, he is charged with the training of the district patrols.

MILLIONAIRE TARS.

Several of the men who are going through the routine work, making ordinary seamen of themselves, are rated as millionaires. One man gave up his business as western representative of one of the largest insurance companies in the country, to enter the service. Soon after the station was opened, a man who had been peeling potatoes asked for shore leave for a few days. Asked his reason, he replied that the foreman on his orange ranch had suddenly quit and that unless he returned home at once, his crop, valued at thousands of dollars, would be in jeopardy.

Life at the station one day is much like another, but there is enough routine to make it interesting. Much of the time is spent at infantry drill, for which the boulevard along the side of the big shed affords ample space. Besides there are the lifeboat drills in the channel on the opposite side, for which boats have been provided. But it is not all work and no play. Ample time is given for sports, after the day's work is done. It has been found that a large part of the instruction given men for the day can be done on land as well as at sea.

Several racing crews have been organized and when the lifeboat drills are done, some of the prettiest rowing races ever seen take place in the channel. The swimming call at 4:15 p.m., following the day's work, also brings out some exceptional talent and fine sportmanship. The exhibitions of swimming and diving seen in the channel on the west side of the shed awake the enthusiasm of old college days.

KEEN SPORTS ASHORE.

Nor is the recreation all on the water. On the land side there is boxing, wrestling, basket ball, volley ball, etc. Each Wednesday there is a ball game and all the men who desire to attend are given shore leave. The result is spirit that knows no defeat.

An added feature in the way of entertainment is the new navy Y.M.C.A. building, just completed. This is 40x80 feet, affording an auditorium seating 600 men. A programme is given each day, including indoor and outdoor athletic events. A. W. Lutz is in charge of the athletics at the new building, H. E. Fry is the social secretary, J. H. Thors the social and religious worker, and Paul Rider, desk clerk.

At the present rate of enlisting, the outer harbor shed may yet prove too small a place for the work. When the station was first proposed, it was believed the center section of the shed, 600 feet long, would be sufficient, but now the number of men has increased until nearly all the second section is in use. The regularly enlisted men on the submarines occupy the southerly section, making a total of nearly 1500 naval men all housed under one roof.

Following is the programme of the daily routine at the training station:

4:30—Call cooks.

GOOD WILL AND JOLLITY MARK SOLDIERS' CAMP.

France may be Just as Sherman Said, but Tent City is a Maker of Men, a Melting Pot for Pride.

BY EMILY SQUIER.

WAR may be what Sherman said it was, but getting ready for it isn't; at least, that's what the boys in camp will tell you, and they ought to know. The first thing that strikes an outsider who visits the near-Los-Angeles encampment is the spirit of good will and cheerfulness prevailing among the men. It reminded me of a college campus gone military. Everyone is willing to show you the sights, and to tell you interesting stories—often more interesting than true—about camp life, and you can pass a greeting to any man there and have it received with grateful comradeship. There are few grouches, and almost no offenders against discipline. An officer told me that in one month there have been just ten minor offenses among 1000 men. So much for Uncle Sam's stewardship.

There is something inspiring about that city of tents. The sun is hot and the dust is thick and friendly, but it's easy to forget sun and dust on seeing those rows upon rows of khaki-colored tents, with their khaki-clad inhabitants to match; and if you're a man you want to be right with them; and if you're a girl—you do, too.

It's a regular melting pot for prides and prejudices; a boy afflicted with the name of Percy and a misplaced eyebrow gets to look like a human being after the first week out; he can eat like one and swear like one. A tough "listen t' me, guy," sort of person collects a set of manners by observation and external application that are as natural as if he were born with them. One young fellow out there who could buy the whole camp with his pocket money has for his tent mates—and good pals—a barber, a mechanic and a reformed chauffeur, while a fastidious clubman, who probably never had seen a potato in its natural haunts, is helper to one of the cooks—and likes his job. A certain musical critic whose hardest manual labor had consisted in damning with his pen the future of many would-be musicians, is now a private in one of the hospital corps, and criticises no music except the kind heard at night. He was glimpsed recently washing socks for his tent mate—and they were tolerably clean when he finished.

FIRST PRINCIPLES.

It's a fine thing to see how easily these fellows shake off civilization and get right back to nature. The fond mamma who journeys out to camp for the first time is generally shocked and saddened to see Oswald's bed, which 's an uncompromising cot, sans mattress or springs, or to see the electric light, which is one candle-power minus the power, or perhaps an electric lantern without the electric part. The family silver has been supplanted by a plebian trinity of fork, knife and spoon, and instead of the dainty Dresden china which adorned the home table, there is a two-compartment pan to hold the "chow," and a mongrel tin cup of life-size proportions in which to carry the liquid refreshments. Mamma tries to sympathize with Oswald, and can't think why he doesn't want it.

From a feminine standpoint, the worst thing about the camp is the absence of mirrors. But the boys don't mind that; they say the worst thing is learning the bugle calls. Most of them don't know whether it's "retreat" or "tattoo" being sounded, but the one they all learn in "bugling at a glance" is the wiggly call for mess. They may not arise when "reveille" sounds in the morning, and they may rush out for inspection at "taps," but, take it from an eyewitness, when the "grub" call sounds every man is there on time, and just a little ahead of it.

The three important events of the day are the three meals. Every soldier thinks so, and every man thinks his company has the best cook. And their chefs are worth bragging about, too, for many of them, before enlisting, were employed in expensive hostelries. One of them was the chief chef at the Hotel Maryland, and another took to the khaki from the Alexandria.

As I watched those cooks, working away at top speed in their tiny screened kitchens, without the conveniences of experienced help they formerly had, and when I thought of the $200 some of them had received and the $35 they were now getting—I wanted to take off my hat to those men as top-notch patriots; the soldier has plenty of time for relaxation; the cook has practically none.

The food is always well cooked, and there is always enough. I had lunch with the men of one company, and now I know that Mr. Government is a first-class provider, let the knockers say what they will. I felt very masculine and soldierly when I got my double-header pan and tin cup and stood in the "chuck line" with the other fellows. We filed past two boys who dished out the food, and into one part of the pan was put a big slice of beef, a fine boiled potato with two big spoonfuls of gravy, and in the other side was a helping of squash and a slice of bread without butter. The cup was filled with iced tea.

We all sat at a long table in one of the tents, and it was one of the best meals I ever ate. There were no napkins, extra silver, or condiments, but no one seemed to miss them. Anyone who wishes a second helping may have it, but the first dishing up is so generous that few feel the need of a second. The one big lack is enough sugar; so the boys buy some of their own, and thus supplement the somewhat meager supply furnished by the government. They might get butter the same way, but they feel that unless all have it, it isn't exactly democratic for one or two to use it, so they go without, and don't mind at all. The food remaining on the tin plates is scraped into an incinerator, and the plates are then washed and rinsed in very hot water. Each man does his own. They wanted to do mine for me, but I wasn't taking any favors.

Pacifists who like to emote on the "bloodthirsty dispositions" of the soldiers, should come out to camp and see the collection of mascots, and the way they are treated. There is a white pup who strayed into camp, and for quite a while was a bone of contention between an infantry company and a cavalry company. They coaxed him back and forth until he himself didn't know who belonged to him. Then the cavalrymen got a grand idea. They branded the pup fore and aft with the company insignia—not enough to hurt him, just enough to burn the hair—then they stenciled his four corners, and now there's not a doubt in the world as to where he belongs. Another cavalry troop has a goat, and still another owns a white kitten that is being literally petted to death. An infantry company owns a monkey, and is somewhat reticent about his former life. It has been noticed that a certain organ grinder frequently hangs around camp looking as if he'd lost something. A perky little brindle bull pup belonging to an Ambulance Corps got lost the other day in town, and the sergeant was lamenting to me that they could never get him back.

"Why don't you advertise?" I suggested.

"Advertise!" he sniffed. "Not a chance; he was stole in the first place."

Other mascots, more or less beloved, are some ukuleles and banjos which have sneaked into camp, and which are tortured every night.

PLENTY RECREATION.

Besides the recreation which the men themselves get in singing and playing in the evenings, there are other pleasurable evenings arranged by the Y.M.C.A. There are open air picture shows, boxing bouts, and concerts, which always are well attended and hugely enjoyed.

The regulars take great delight in playing pranks on the newcomers, and while each man is in the throes of the impromptu initiation, the whole camp joins in the fun. They had one recruit wandering around camp for three days asking for "shrinking soap." Each company was "just out of that kind of soap," and passed him on to the next door neighbor. Another tenderfoot was kept on the qui vive looking for a "four by four outpost," which all the camp solemnly tried to help him find.

The camp life, take it all in all, is as fine a tonic as a man can have. The regular hours and the nutritious food, the rigorous "setting up" exercises, the drilling, and military discipline, turn out an average man, fit of body and active of mind. The only drawback is one which mamma notices when Oswald comes home for "twenty-four hours leave." He walks through the house with a springy stride that has no pity on varnished floors; he scorns the superfluous silver and uses the same spoon for soup, coffee, and dessert. He yawns loudly at 9 o'clock, and falls off his chair at 10; he is prowling around the house at daybreak, and wades into his breakfast with the gusto of a logger. His manners, parlor and table, have suffered a bit, but when he's ready to go back to camp, mother looks at her son, trim and straight in his khaki, and sends him back to the watchful care of Uncle Sam, knowing that he's making her boy into a MAN.

POSTAL RECEIPTS.

The August receipts of the Los Angeles postoffice for the month just closed amounted to $129,043.19, as compared with $189,546.97 for August of last year. The increase is $9,496.22, or 5 per cent.

OUTDOOR WORK AT SEA SCHOOL.

Government Instruments Here for Students.

Sextant System Soon to be Rule at Harbor.

Another Class in Navigation is Under Way.

With the arrival yesterday of the instruments and library for the government navigation school at the harbor the outdoor work was taken up for the first time, and in the future groups of earnest students taking observations with sextants will be familiar sights.

So far the instruction has been indoors, where the students enrolled have been mastering the rudiments of navigation from books and laying the foundation for work that will enable them to pass the rigid examination of the United States inspectors, who issue certificates that will entitle them to navigate ships as officers.

Baron Long has tendered the use of his power boat Par for members of the school. The students will be taken outside the harbor toward the southeast end of Catalina, where they may have an opportunity to make observations with a clear southern horizon.

Tomorrow morning another new class will be organized and it is expected there soon will be at least thirty enrolled in the school. The latter was founded upon the suggestion of a Boston man, who saw the great need of officers for the fleet of ships Uncle Sam is building as fast as possible. Without these schools it is probable that, great as are the difficulties in building ships as fast as they are needed, there would not be enough officers to man them as rapidly as completed.

In order to make sure that practical men would be selected, the first qualification laid down for admission to the schools is two years' experience in the deck department of an ocean-going steamer. This means that the officers for the new ships will be recruited from able seamen who know something about life at sea besides that which can be learned from books.

Motor boat and yachting experience does not count in the qualifications for membership. Neither have the rigid examinations of the inspectors been relaxed in the least, so that the officers secured for the new ships will be fully up to the standard of those secured in the past for American ships.

"The day has passed when the master of a ship must be a two-fisted fighter, skilled in the use of belaying pins, to command by force the respect of his crew," said Prof. F. N. Neubauer, who is in charge of the school, yesterday. "No profession today offers greater returns, none gives finer social status or offers greater opportunities of responsibility and trust than the positions open to reliable men as ships' officers.

"I consider this port an ideal location for a permanent navigation school. I believe if the city were to take up the question seriously the school could be made a permanent institution, although as now established it is designed only as a temporary expedient. If the city were to provide a suitable building, the State an instructor and the Federal government the necessary equipment, it seems to me it would be an equitable division of responsibility for maintaining a much-needed institution.

"As soon as the school was firmly established the next step would be to secure a training ship, contemplated in the act of 1915, in which the State and Federal governments, it is provided, would join in maintenance of a vessel for the instruction of men who seek knowledge fitting them for the position to which they aspire.

"There are now six schools, located at Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco, Astoria, Portland and Seattle. The conditions here, including accessibility and climate, should make this school one of the first rank.

NEW OFFICERS IN TEACHERS' ROLES.

ARE AMONG INSTRUCTORS AT THE SECOND CAMP.

Labor of Training a Thousand Candidates for Higher-grade Commissions will Start in Earnest Today at the Presidio of San Francisco.

Student has become teacher at the second Reserve Officers' Training Camp at the Presidio of San Francisco, where the routine of instructing the second line of reserve candidates will be under way tomorrow morning. Since August 24 hundreds of men from California, Oregon, Washingaon, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, Idaho and Wyoming have been reporting at the Presidio. They are candidates for commissions in the higher grades—first lieutenants, captains, majors and colonels—and tomorrow they will be in the thick of it. And a large number of their teachers will be men who went through the first camp and were commissioned only a few weeks ago.

The personnel of the camp will not be complete till next Wednesday, when the selected alternates are to report to fill up each State's full quota. In all 1000 men will undergo the training and of these 621 are Californians.

The course will continue three months, as at the first camp. There will be some weeks devoted to familiarizing the men with all the procedure of close order and ordinary skirmish drill, and interior guard duty, and then they will get down to the brass tacks of modern warfare. They will be introduced to real trenches and to the changed tactics and the new methods of reconnaissance and patroling made necessary by underground fighting and by the airplane. They are to be taught the very latest military lore that can be supplied by America's experienced Allies and by Pershing's men.

The establishment of this second camp has been attended by various changes in method, including more rigid selective examinations before calling the candidates. Moreover, men at the first camp were provided with subsistence and clothes and arms, but were paid nothing. In this second camp every candidate will be paid $100 a month while he serves there, and is enlisted for a three-month period.

It has been announced that the present camp is the last to which civilians will be admitted; officers in future are to be picked from the military organizations already in existence, including the draft army.

HIDEY DENIES FRAUD.

Claims Ignorance of Mortgage Held Against Automobile Taken as Fee for Services—Will Contest all Charges, He Says.

As a result of sensational charges brought against Attorney D. M. Hidey recently by the Big Four Automobile Company, which caused the arrest of the attorney, an answer was filed in the Superior Court yesterday to the charges and rigid denials of the allegations were made. Mr. Hidey denied particularly that he knew the automobile company held a chattel mortgage against the automobile in question at the time he accepted it as a fee, and later disposed of it.

In the charges brought against Mr. Hidey, many allegations of a serious nature were made. These, Mr. Hidey sets forth in his answer, are untrue. Mr. Hidey said yesterday that he will contest the case vigorously.

At Balboa Park.

NAVAL CADETS SOON TO GET TOUCH OF SEA LIFE.

First Battalion Shortly will be Sent Aboard Fighting Units.

THE naval training camp at Balboa Park, San Diego, where 1500 young apprentice seamen are preparing for service, is rapidly being increased. In half-battalions the men will be sent down from Goat Island as rapidly as possible to comply with the quarantine regulations until the quota is raised to 5000 men.

An up-to-date isolation camp is being completed to accommodate 500 at one time and here the new arrivals will be held three weeks before entering the training camp proper. The isolation camp, under the supervision of Medical Inspector Dr. Ammen Farenholt, is one of the most modern on the Coast.

In addition to the eight buildings now occupied by the naval camp, the large building in the exposition devoted to the Canadian exhibit will be occupied by sailors within the next two weeks.

Sea fighters are turned out from the camp in three months now, instead of from four to six months, as in time of peace. On the Plaza de Panama and the isthmus, used as parade grounds, the young men are kept busily drilling, a sight of which civilians never seem to tire.

The past week marked the beginning of the furloughs for the seamen who have just completed their training, and the anticipation of the vacation home for the youths, many of whom are away from their parents for the first time, has brought much joy to them. They are given from five to ten days' furlough and traveling time. The visits home were made possible by the recent regulation which provides that the government pay the seamen only part of their money each month and save the remainder until the training is finished. In this way many of the young fellows had saved up traveling expenses and fare and the necessary half-month's pay they are required to have for their return.

In the training camp the so-called problems of safeguarding the morals of the sailors have not greatly bothered the superior officers, for, with strict surveillance over them, the rigid regulations and the small amount of money the men have to spend, they could not get into much mischief. Capt. William D. Brotherton, commandant, and other officers are regarded with a rare feeling of admiration, respect and comradeship. This is due to the kindly interest shown in the cadets by the older men.

The sailors receive $32.60 a month pay, but actually get of this sum only $5 twice a month until they shall have finished. On pay day the little Japanese tea-house on the grounds, where ice cream and tea cakes are sold, and the ice-cream-cone man's stand on the Plaza are the most popular spots in the park when the youngsters hasten to spend their allowance.

Orders are expected shortly for the first battalion of apprentice seamen to fight on Uncle Sam's ships. A number have gone now, but only in small numbers.

The officers of the camp are Capt. W. D. Brotherton, commandant; Lieut. E. A. Lofquist, executive officer; Lieut. E. E. Scranton, Lieut. A. H. Dutton, Lieut. F. J. Loomis, Lieut. E. B. Lapham, Lieut. F. C. Beisel, Ensign H. H. Phleger, battalion commanders; J. C. Conover, adjutant; Joseph Merritt, paymaster; W. E. Blackwell, C. A. Albright, J. H. Albuing, pay clerks; Dr. Ammen Farenholt, medical inspector; Dr. W. M. Kerr, Dr. L. H. Clerk, Dr. A. C. Smith, Dr. H. E. Spruance, Dr. P. W. Wilson, Dr. F. W. Muller, Dr. H. A. Thompson, Dr. W. P. Blake, assistant surgeons; Dr. Lester Cranz, dental surgeon; Dr. C. H. Welbe, dental surgeon, and W. F. Gildberg, pharmacist.

To the medical department is due much of the credit for the quick elimination of the meningitis which appeared in the camp six weeks ago. They boys were immediately placed out of doors to sleep and eat and were put under a strict quarantine. Cultures were made from the nose and throat of every one of the young seamen to detect disease carriers. The camp is now reported free from the contagion.

Deputy United States Marshal Dillon yesterday arrested as slackers R. S. Cole of Yuma and Antonio Roynoso of Phoenix and turned them over to United States Marshal Walton, who placed them in the County Jail. They will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Hammack Tuesday morning.

ARMY SEEKING LUMBER JACKS.

Ten Battalions of Woodsmen Required for Logging in France.

Local recruiting officers have been notified that Gen. Pershing wants ten battalions of lumberjacks for the army at the front in Europe. All classes of woodsmen, saw-mill men, axmen, teamsters, truckmen, sawyers, millwrights, blacksmiths, foresters, etc., are included. Recruiting officers will be sent into the local woods districts at once.

Sun won't fade it—water won't spot it

How often have you hung your windows with brand new shades, only to see them quickly become streaked and faded from sun and water!

Sun cannot dim nor water spot the soft, beautiful tints of—

The Unfilled Grade of Brenlin Window Shades

That is one reason why it will save you money as well as improve your windows if you shade them this time with this famous Unfilled Grade. A still greater reason is this—it wears twice as long.

Come in and let us show you why.

We are installing "Brenlin" in the new Masonic Home, the new Ville de Paris building, the new Coulter building and the finest hotels, office buildings and residences in the city. These are all places where the very best in window shades is demanded. The quality of Brenlin is the reason we are awarded these contracts.

We will be pleased to furnish you an estimate on shades for your home. No job is too large or too small for us to handle.

houses, 87 per cent.; water systems and sewage are nearly completed; plumbing and kitchens, 40 per cent.; roads, 62 per cent.; interior wiring, 58 per cent.; exterior wiring, 53 per cent., and transmission lines, 68 per cent. ENGINEERS' QUOTA FILLED.

Quarters for the commanding general and members of his staff are ready for occupancy. There are six sleeping tents and one each, mess, cooking and administration tent. Sixty-two members of the Oregon Engineers have been transferred to the California Engineers, which is now up to its full quota of 250 men.

Officers will pay $1 per day for their meals. All have tents or other sleeping quarters furnished free, together with medical attendance whenever necessary. They may purchase blankets at the post exchange. Many of the officers from Los Angeles took their own blankets with them, no other bedding being officially permitted. But there are pillows from home, sheets and comforters, rugs to spread in front of the cot, with a plentitude of towels and wash rags. Each officer may have a wash basin supported on a frail metal frame, with racks for the toothbrush, soap and a receptacle for the shaving outfit. A small mirror completes his outfit.

All the officers of the Quartermaster's Division and the civilian clerks about the post are working Sundays and overtime. The advent of the Los Angeles men is looked for eagerly, and their quarters are being placed in first-class condition.

Wives and sweethearts and sisters of the Los Angeles men will be glad to know that special arrangements are being made for the entertainment of the soldiers during their leisure hours. R. F. Carter, who represents the Playground and Recreation Commission for the War Department, is now in Tacoma arranging with the various social organizations and the leading men and women of the city for events and social affairs to make the hours of relaxation for the soldiers exceptionally agreeable. It is said that many frat girls in Tacoma are planning campaigns that will go down into history. It is estimated that at least a dozen college fraternities will be represented in the Los Angeles troops.

There will be plenty to do in camp when the boys from California arrive. There will be first call and reveille at about 5:30 o'clock in the morning, followed in a half-hour by assembly and roll call. Breakfast will be ready at 6:30 o'clock. At 6:30 there will be physical exercises, and at 7 o'clock probably guard mount will be held. Drill in the foot movements will begin at 8 o'clock and last until 12 o'clock. Dinner will take up a half-hour, to be followed by a study hour. At 1:45 the men will be marched back to the drill ground, where rifle exercises will take up the time until 5 o'clock.

LECTURES FOR OFFICERS.

Supper will be served at 5:30 o'clock, and there will be no work for the balance of the evening except to answer retreat at sundown, when the flag is lowered to indicate that the official day's work is over. But there will be lectures for the officers and the noncommissioned officers to attend, and time will be required to study their text-books. But there will not be so much of this as regular drill on the parade ground during the day time. But the ambitious officers will be glad of the chance to study and perfect themselves, as there will be opportunities for advancement. Again, every officer has a conscientious wish to help perfect his men in their work, and this can be done best by preparing for the next day's work on the evening before.

Not anything like the volume of work done at the training camps will be expected at Camp Lewis. The actual drilling will be in charge of capable noncommissioned officers to a very considerable degree, so the officers will have many daylight hours for their work. And in the work of the camp, such as guard duty, sentry-go, etc., hours of leisure will follow a term of a few hours' duty, so that those from Los Angeles who have friends in Tacoma will have abundant opportunity to visit them so long as their good conduct sheets are clear.

Infractions of the orders governing camp duty and the army regulations will meet with severe punishment. Life at Camp Lewis will not be like a few days' outing with the militia—a big lark. The work is serious, and the men who devote their energies and their hours to the work in hand, and contemplate the results in a serious manner, will discover that their leisure hours will bring ample opportunity for pleasant relaxation. They will have to earn their play hours, but such will be forthcoming if earned.

"Growing conditions here are ideal" says A.D.Cleaver of NUEVO RANCH
STUART

Nuevo Ranch—In the rich, fertile San Jacinto Valley

Nuevo Land Co.

Gentlemen: Last February I bought 40 acres of the Nuevo Ranch. The land was planted to apricots, nectarines and walnuts, which are now three years old. I came from Orange county just west of Santa Ana in the famous district known as the Peet lands, where I own a large ranch. One of the principal reasons I located here was because I wanted to get into a real healthy country with a high elevation. Nuevo appealed to me because it seemed to be climatically perfect and the growing conditions were ideal. I came here a sick man. I had not worked for a year. In three months I was able to go out and work as usual. Before coming here I looked around a great deal, but Nuevo suited me best. This country compares favorably with Orange county. I can't recommend the place too highly. We have an excellent type of soil, the kind that makes for success in most any branch of farming. You can always count on me to say a good word for Nuevo at any time.

[Signed] A. D. CLEAVER.

$500. LAND AT $250. PER ACRE

One man's opinion may count for little—but when scores of practical, experienced ranchers all agree that Nuevo Ranch lands (with water) at $250 per acre constitute the best land offering in Southern California, it is time for the conservative land seeker to sit erect and take heed.

The unanimous unconditional verdicts of careful, hard-to-please farmers concerning Nuevo lands (to quote from duly signed statements) are: "The land is deep, rich and responsive." "My one desire is to obtain more of this land." "I simply couldn't resist buying." "The land speaks for itself." "The water supply is right." "My land paid for itself in one season." "The valley is its own endorsement." "Nuevo will fully equal Banning and Hemet as a fruit country." "Orange county is good, but I like Nuevo better." "I can't recommend this place too highly." We could go on quoting statement after statement, but why not go and study Nuevo yourself—right now?

If you are a real, "dead-in-earnest" land seeker we will provide comfortable accommodations at the land for you—at our expense. You can stay several days if you desire—meet every man on the tract—study every condition from A to Z. The more you investigate Nuevo, the more you will like Nuevo. We will not coax you to buy—we will permit you to form your own conclusions and we will abide by your decision.

WANTS FREEDOM, CASH.

Wife Claims Husband has been Unduly Intimate with Other Women.

Alleging that her husband, William E. Allen, Jr., was unduly intimate with Mrs. Hazel Perkins on numerous occasions during the past several months, Mrs. Lyle F. Allen filed a sperate maintenance petition in the Superior Court yesterday. She is seeking $100 per month for her support.

In the complaint, filed through Attorney John C. Miles, Mrs. Allen states that she was married to Mr. Allen at Riverside April 13, 1914, and that they separated here September 9, 1916. There are no children.

WILL NOT LABOR.

There will be a total suspension of public business at the Federal Building tomorrow, Labor Day. There will be no session of the courts or any activities in any department. The postoffice, all stations and branches, will be closed all day. But for the convenience of the public the parcel post window at the main office will be open from 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. There will be no deliveries by either the city or rural mail carriers.

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Beside, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

AMAZING CHILDREN.

KIDDIES PERFORM WONDERS IN FOX FEATURES.

By Grace Kingsley.

That Pied Piper of picturedom, "Jack and the Beanstalk," which has lured all the youngsters in town to Miller's during the past two weeks, and which appears to be in for a long run, has proven that children are natural actors. After all, playing is only make-believe, and make-believe is the business of childhood.

The Franklin brothers are the magicians who have been directing the play instinct of children on the screen for the past four years, and from whose genius has sprung this epoch-making "kid" picture. They know all the ways there are to develop the dramatic instincts of children, from making them play comedy by promising them ice cream to getting them to weep in tragedy by telling them they are bum actors. But the Franklin "boys" have found out that each child is a little natural barometer as regards the real affection a person in authority has for him, and, loving children, they strive always to gain the little folks' devotion.

Immense tact and patience were, of course, required in the handling of the 500 children who take part in "Jack and the Beanstalk"—but, at that, the Franklin brothers confess they find it far easier to handle children, now that they are accustomed to it, than they do older actors. The children are very temperamental at times, and exceedingly clever, too. For instance, in a scene where little Virginia Corbin had to weep, she got into the spirit of it so thoroughly that she apparently couldn't stop crying. Her mama petted her and so did the directors. Finally she looked up coyly from under her long lashes. "Maybe," she suggested, "maybe I could stop crying if I had some ice cream." Needless to say, it was at once forthcoming. She was the sweetest and most tractable of children at all times, as well as brilliantly intelligent.

Francis Carpenter is a really brave youngster. Once, when he was with the Fine Arts, there were a lot of stunts to be done by him in a picture. It was proposed to substitite a boy who was a little older, but no bigger, in those scenes. But Francis wouldn't stand for it; he insisted on doing even the hardest stunt, viz., being swung from an automobile onto a moving train. Francis has worked with wild animals, too, and loves them.

Violet Radcliffe always plays boys' parts; she scorns the role of a girl, through secretly she is as little-womanish as any of them, playing with her dolls like any other little lady. When "Jack and the Beanstalk" was being discussed, she was offered a girl's part—a "proud sister" sort of role, afterward eliminated altogether. But she scornfully held out for the villain's role or nothing, even offering to thrash a boy who coveted it to prove her artistic fitness, and she got it. All through her acting of the part she cleverly burlesques the work of a certain well-known screen "heavy," and when the actor himself saw Violet work, the other day, he laughed until he came near losing his reputation as a "bad man."

The Franklin "boys" began their work on "Jack" realizing from past experience that they had to deal with the individual natures of many children, and that of course each child would have to be handled in a different way. One thing they soon learned, though, was that, as in older people, inspiration comes through example. If one child was willing to do a special feat, the others were soon anxious and eager to follow suit. At one period of their work it was necessary to have some of the children fall from a height, and while every safeguard was made against any danger, it was hard to get the children to do it. Francis Carpenter was appealed to, and he at once, with his sturdy chest thrown out, went through the stunt, with the result that all the children around were soon offering, like Tom Sawyer's friends in regard to the fence-whitewashing episode, to pay the directors to let them do it!

A child is naturally afraid of a knife, and that chopping block had a lot of terrors for little Virginia Corbin; but when she was told that Sarah Bernhardt had died a thousand times as "Cleopatra," at the bite of an asp, and that every time she imagined she really was dying, the child was fired by a desire to do likewise—to be like the great Bernhardt, the idol of her profession; so she proudly and realistically went through the scene, forgetting all about being afraid.

Those who have been privileged to view scenes from "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" claim its marvels exceed even those of "Jack and the Beanstalk." Other kid features include "The Mikado," into the comedy spirit of which it is said the children enter marvelously well, and "Alice in Wonderland," which will, perhaps, have the biggest appeal of all.

To those timid souls who may imagine the children are submitted to hardships, be it known, the mothers of the children accompany them on location, and there are, besides, extra hired helpers. They are always under the watchful eyes of those who love them, and in no case is a child allowed to take any big chances while under the direction of the Franklin brothers. Some of the stunts which look dangerous in the pictures are really "faked" by double photography, and despite all those hundreds of children worked at Chatsworth for several days, there was not one of them seriously or even painfully hurt. A few black and blue spots were the sum total of the accidents.

The children's education was attended to, even in Chatsworth, where a special teacher, sent out by the Board of Education, held school during certain hours each day.

Lost—an Express Train.

From the day when Mark Antony lost his reputation down to the recent disturbance in which Mr. Nicholas Romanoff lost his crown, men and women have been losing things of more or less consequence, but it took the shave-headed and resourceful J. P. McGowan, of the Signal, to lose a whole express train.

Somewhere out in the mountains of Southern California, McGowan lost a train, a regular train with engine and cars and everything. It just disappeared. The earth didn't swallow it because there was no hole in the ground along the whole right of way where it might have dug itself in, and it didn't fly away, because the territory is more or less populated, and a thing of such size as a train couldn't soar through the clouds without attracting somebody's attention.

The mysterious disappearance occurred in the first chapter of "The Lost Express," the new Mutual-Signal serial starring Helen Holmes, which furnishes Miss Holmes with more neck-breaking stunts than anything in which she has ever played.

"The Lost Express" is based on the story of a great scientific mys-

Weaving Silky Webs for Erring Men.

Dorothy Dalton,
Louise Glaum,
Theda Bara,

Vampires of renown.

They steal away susceptible masculine hearts, bringing nothing but disgrace and ruin for the victim and sorrow for the loved ones so cruelly deserted—in motion pictures.

WHAT OUR FAVORITE SIRENS THINK ABOUT THEIR WORK.

BY PAUL HUBERT CONLON.

WEAVING silky webs of forbidden love about the destinies of their poor male victims the alluring vampires of the screen impart such a strange and compelling fascination in their characterizations that generally the film fan is attracted back to his favorite theater to see what new wiles are used on fallen man. Photoplays constructed to suit the stars who have become famous for their portrayals of siren roles have the quality of holding the intense interest of both sexes of theatergoers.

Of the most brilliant actresses of this type, of screen drama Theda Bara gives the more powerful delineations, and her roles are nearly all classical in their content. Her's is an exotic personality. The strong dignity maintained throughout all her characterizations tempers the utter badness of some of the women she is called upon to present. Of late Theda Bara is lending her talents to studious conceptions of certain famous women of history with more than satisfactory results. She has just finished a magnificent Fox production of the greatest of all sirens, "Cleopatra," which is said to be the most stupendous classical photoplay yet attempted.

Since Theda Bara's arrival in Los Angeles we are enjoying the presence of the three leading vampires in the film world, the other two being Dorothy Dalton and Louise Glaum. Each actress represents strikingly different types. What Theda Bara is to the classical voluptuous, Dorothy Dalton is to the great outdoors. Combining an indescribable charm of face and figure with the silky grace of a mountain lioness she invests her roles with an individuality that assures her versatile ability. And versatility is what she most desires. In contrast to the actress who builds her success upon characters of similarity, Miss Dalton prefers to display her abilities to better advantage. Judging from the corking interpretations she has given various roles in Ince productions she has succeded admirably.

But Dorothy Dalton believes the day of the vamp is over. When I questioned her concerning the passing of herself as a vampire she laughed and said:

"La vamp est mort, vive la vamp!

"Yes, inded, the vampire of the photoplay is gone—gone, the chances are, never to return to the realm of the film.

"She served her purpose, did the dear little lady—gave a lot of actresses of unimpeachable personal reputation and quiet, home-loving inclinations a chance to cavort in front of the camera, luring the stronger sex to their picture ruin; a chance to smoke cigarettes so fast that the tobacco kings were wont to call her blessed and pray that her taste for the leaf would never desert her; a chance to bejewel herself as no queen in real life ever was, in weird attire, seductive to the nth degree, and giving people a wrong impression of society.

"At first the photoplay vampire was an interesting sort of creature to me. She afforded a wonderful contrast to the cute little girlie from the small town, the curly-haired dearie who simpered and giggled her way through hundreds of feet of virginal film negative; she plotted and planned and perpetrated all sorts of terrible things, only to find herself defeated by Virtue in the final hundred feet of the picture—defeated usually at the hands of the cutey with the curls.

"Film history doesn't record the name of the inventor, the discoverer, the designer of the film vamp, but once she was introduced to the public her name was legion. For a period it seemed as if every actress wanted to vamp. I, for one, caught the fever, and vamped my way through two or three photoplays, more to prove to myself that I could than for any other reason. And, in strict confidence, I found the profession of vamping quite the most humorous thing I had ever done since I deserted the speaking stage for the photoplay. It is a rather difficult matter to enact a big dramatic scene in an important screen effort, but I found that vamping was quite the easiest, as well as the most luxurious, work in the entire gamut of photoplay endeavor.

"Having assured myself that I was able to vamp, I made up my mind that never again would I attempt to lure young-men to their film ruin, and when I negotiated my present contract with Thomas H. Ince I stipulated that I should not be cast in any vampire role, and Mr. Ince kindly agreed to let me have my way."

Now we come to Louise Glaum. Here is the salamander type. She can do the baby vampire as well as the wild and dangerous woman, although she gained fame as "The Peacock Woman." In fact, I prefer her as the former sort.

"It sometimes seems a shame for me to masquerade as a vampire," said the Triangle siren, "especially when men are led astray in real life so easily that one scarcely needs even peacock fans, to say nothing of incense, but fate cast me in a vampire role, so I am not really to blame.

"I will let you in on a little secret—it's the clothes that get them. Dress any woman with ordinary beauty in the clothes I wear, touch a match to a joss stick, shade the lights and let the orchestra play fade-away music and the men will fall, on the screen or off."

It is not generally known, but Miss Glaum started her film career as a comedienne. She calls her present work living down her past.

"I marvel when I look back at the work that 'Cleopatra' contained, and much as I appreciated it when it was going on, it is only now that I realize how tremendous and absorbing it was," declared Theda Bara when she was asked about her latest great accomplishment, and it was evident that she had something more in her mind than the physical labor that the creation of the Siren of the Nile contained. It was not the making of the scenes of the masterpiece for William Fox that alone meant so much to the star. Miss Bara continued quickly, lest the full import of her words might not be gathered.

"There was an enormous labor attached to the presentation of this role. I was the one that had to know it, but I do not speak of this now, but rather of the mental effort that preceded it, that continued throughout every moment that the producion was being enacted and that lasted long after the actual filming was over.

"Complexed but definite, strange but understandable after long and deep thought, I found Cleopatra to be and so I have presented her. I found her using her mind so that her heart could be satisfied, and it was necessary I should give the best of my mind to interpret her. And

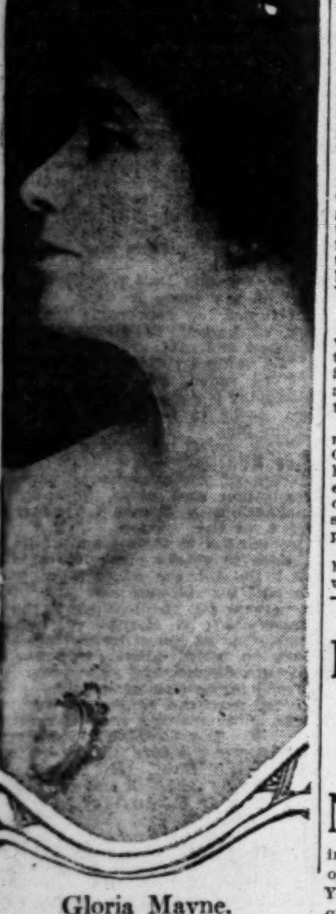
FOR CONCERT SERIES.

PHILHARMONIC COURSES TO HAVE GREAT ARTISTS.

All of the artists scheduled for the Philharmonic courses during the coming season are already in America, so there will be no disappointments for nonarrival of the stars. Manager Behymer has arranged at the present three series, each of seven events, but as a number of requests have been made to have but two series, each of ten concerts each, one an evening series and one a matinee, he is going to leave it to popular opinion which shall be inaugurated. Patrons are requested to write Manager Behymer at his offices in the Auditorium Building, stating their preference. Whichever arrangement will be made the same artists will be presented, these to include Margaret Matzenauer, contralto; Jeanne Jomelli, dramatic soprano; Leo Ornstein, pianist; Alma Gluck, Harold Bauer, Eugene Ysaye, Schumann-Heink, Emilio de Godgorza, Leopold Godowsky, Maud Powell, Reinald Werrenrath, Efrem Zimbalist, the Minneapolis Symphony, Yvette Guilbert, Frieda Hemple, Theodore Karle, Cecil Fanning, Mischa Elman, Julia Culp, and the sensationally successful Mme. Galli-Curci.



Gloria Mayne,

Who leaves today on a concert tour of the North, playing twenty engagements during September.

Mme. Matzenauer returns to her New York home early in September, having set this month aside for appointments with the costumers, dressmakers, and rehearsals with her accompanist, in anticipation of her first transcontinental tour of America. She has spent seven years on this side, but looks forward with the keenest delight to her first concert tour, contending that touring gains a popularity with the American public that she could never otherwise have, merely singing in opera. October and November will be devoted to concertizing, also April and May, the opera season engaging her time during the intermediate months.

Ignace Paderewski has spent the summer on his Paso Robles rancho, indulging in the mud baths, and seems to have discovered the spring of eternal youth, judging from his looks. He will open the Los Angeles season October 3.

Melba, than whom there is probably no better-known prima donna, will arrive from her Australian home next month, going direct to Chicago, where she will sing in opera. The only concert she will give will be in this city, when she will be assisted by her brilliant pupil and protege, Miss Peggy Center of Honolulu, and Frank St. Leger, the young English pianist-accompanist, who proved himself such a splendid musician when heard with Melba two years ago. He has just been invalided home from the Egyptian front, where he was on duty for eighteen months.

The Cherniavsky brothers have been enjoying their holiday on a New Zealand stock ranch, assisting at the sheep sheering, in the gardening, and generally devoting their entire time to a well-deserved rest. Their second American tour will start in Los Angeles the latter part of October.

Jeanne Jomelli, the Dutch soprano, who was brought to this country by the astute Hammerstein for his operatic season, returns to Los Angeles in November. She is at present in the Northwest, singing at several festivals there, and across the line to the Canadian soldiers. Charles Wakefield Cadman, the gifted American composer, will be co-star with her on her Los Angeles programme, as probably there is no singer before the public who interprets the Cadman songs to greater advantage than this gifted singer.

Leo Ornstein, the pianist-composer, will be heard for the first time in Los Angeles in November. He spent his summer holiday in Maine, arising at 4:30 a.m. daily, practicing until the breakfast hour, then devoting the balance of the day to out-of-door sports, until now he is an expert golf enthusiast, paddles a canoe like an Indian, and plays a stiff game of tennis.

Alma Gluck-Zimbalist and her husband, Efrem Zimbalist, with their tiny daughter, Marie Virginia, have been at Fisher's Island, New York, where each day has been devoted to so many hours play, so many hours practice, as each has the season entirely booked from November, when Gluck sings in this city, to May, when they both appear at the eastern spring festivals.

Many of the artists have purchased homes on this side, and have declared their intentions of spending at least three-quarters of each year in America. The prospects for the music season in Los Angeles are the brightest of any ever scheduled, if one is to judge by what Manager Behymer has arranged for.

Agnes Woodward,

Director of the California School of Artistic Whistling.

Whistlers to Tour.

Miss Agnes Woodward, director of the California School of Artistic Whistling will leave Wednesday for Chicago to attend the convention of the International Lyceum Association at which time she will present Mary Louise Hand, one of her most brilliant whistlers on an important programme of the convention, September 17. Little Miss Hand won many laurels while on her tour a year ago on the Ellison-White Chautauqua circuit throughout Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana. She will fill other dates while in Chicago, returning to Los Angeles the last of September and resuming her studies at the School of Whistling.

Miss Woodward will remain in the East several weeks, interviewing whistlers who wish to learn something of her method of instruction. She will also visit Detroit, Buffalo and other eastern points before returning to the Coast in October.

At the request of the Entertainment Committee of the National War Council of America, Miss Woodward has been asked to furnish some talent or organize an entire concert company for entertainment work at some of the military posts, the expenses to be paid by the government.

During Miss Woodward's absence, her work at the whistling school will be continued by two of her assistants, Miss Elizabeth Worthley, and Miss Lorain Griffin.

On Her Concert Tour.

Gloria Mayne will leave today for a concert tour in the north, having made about twenty engagements for the month of September. Juline Berri, danseuse; Katherine Fiske, violinist, and Elsa Newton, pianiste, will be the artists assisting. Among the engagements will be two concerts under the direction of the Civic Women's Club of San Luis Obispo. The club on this occasion will open its new clubhouse pavillion, with a seating capacity of 3000. The programmes have been quite artistically arranged; all the numbers will be given in three period costume of "long ago," "yesterday" and "today." Among the modern numbers Gloria Mayne will sing "May Day" by Grace Freebey, and the "Serenata Hindustani." Mme. Mayne and her company will return to Los Angeles October 1, to begin work for the local concert season.

Edwin House at the Orpheum.

As the first of a series of notable musical artists who are already booked, and will appear at the Orpheum this season, that theater offers for the coming week, to begin Monday, Mr. Edwin House, the notable basso cantante in a song recital. Mr. House is too well and favorably known here to need an introduction; the mere announcement of his coming being sufficient to induce all music lovers to seek to hear him. His programme embraces both the classics and the lighter numbers, and his range of repertoire is so great and so catholic that his offerings are sure to please even the varied tastes of an Orpheum vaudeville clientele. Mr. House will be followed later by quite a notable company of equally fine artists in musical America, many of whom have hitherto been available only to the concert or the operatic stage.

Young Tenor Leaves for New York.

Howard McCreary Wylie, the promising young local tenor, and pupil of Theophilus Fitz, left Wednesday for the East. He goes by boat to San Francisco and Vancouver, then up through Canada and on to Chicago, where he is to spend a week and be entertained by several leading musicians. From Chicago he goes to his home town, Newcastle, Pa., staying there a month. Then he will go on to New York, and there continue his musical studies under Oscar Saenger.

Mr. Wylie will be remembered as having assisted Miss Eunice Abernethy in two June recitals, winning much comment on his artistic work. He was a student of the Hollywood Junior College, and will be missed by his many Los Angeles friends.

Local Author's Success.

BELASCO BIDS FOR PLAY BY NICHOLAS DUNAEW.

BY PAUL HUBERT CONLON.

NICHOLAS DUNAEW, the Russian author and actor, who for the past year has been a leading spirit in the Los Angeles colony of art and letters, leaves for New York this week in response to a request from David Belasco, who has made a definite offer for Dunaew's latest play of American life, "The Silent Lie." It is understood that Mr. Dunaew has not yet accepted the Belasco offer, although it is very probable a final settlement will be made shortly after his arrival in New York, for the master producer is planning a fall production of the play.

This success of the young Russian writer calls to mind the prophecy made by several prominent men in the theatrical world during a literary affair recently given by Henry Christeen Warnack, The Times critic, at his home in Alhambra. Among those present were James Young, a photoplay director long identified with Shakespearean and classical productions on the stage; Frank Egan, director of the Egan Institute of Dramatic Arts, and Douglas Gerrard, actor and director. When Mr. Gerrard laid down the script of "The Spider," after a brilliant reading, the consensus of opinion was that the tragedy is as profound a psychological study as Ibsen's "Ghosts."

Although the primary function of the drama is to reveal the unbelievable power for evil exercised by unscrupulous army officials and politicians, the eternal hope in Russian breasts for freedom from the yoke of their autocratic oppressors is masterfully drawn in the characters of the family that once resided next to Dunaew in Moscow. That a new and free Russia would inevitably rise from the ashes of a degenerate empire is the deep-rooted belief of these patient people, whose endurance has been the marvel of the centuries. Dunaew's timely theme is developed into a glorious significance of the eagle wings of the new republic shining in the light of happiness.

In the climax the mother's prophetic call to freedom rises to the highest pinnacle of dramatic expression. "The Spider's" theme presents the realization of these truths: the beautiful wisdom that grew out of nature, and the bitter wisdom coming in the evolution of the soul.

Henry Christeen Warnack declares that two lines alone in Dunaew's play are worthy of the basic themes of separate dramas. These are: "Every country needs a class that will revolt," and "The soul is always stronger than any burden it has to bear." It is a significant fact that Nicholas Dunaew wrote "The Spider" several months before the great Slav revolution took place.

Since the time of the first reading of the tragedy in Los Angeles the work has received the attention of such critics as Prince Paul Troubetskoy, the internationally famous sculptor; Princess Troubetskoy; William Clifford, a well-known photoplay and dramatic writer and editor; Mannie Loewenstein and many others. Their praise and faith in this Russian drama I take as foretelling its instantaneous success when it receives a New York production with players who are capable of realizing the amazing possibilities of their roles.

At the time the literary folk of Los Angeles were busy prophesying the future of "The Spider," Mr. Dunaew declared he was finishing a drama of American life that was even more powerful than the Russian tragedy. He refused to allow even his closest friends to read his script until David Belasco had given his final decision. The great producer's reply was a big cash offer for the world's rights to "The Silent Lie."

Belasco has not yet read "The Spider." It is my prediction that when this tragedy is given a New York production with an actress of the Bertha Kalich or Emma Dunn type in the mother role, which contains a heart interest symbolical of the patient suffering of the Russian people, it will be rated as a classic worthy of rank with the works of Ibsen, Sudermann and Galsworthy.

Nicholas Dunaew.

It is worthy of note that George Bernard Shaw, Max Nordau and even Henrik Ibsen himself proclaimed Nicholas Dunaew the only actor who had ever portrayed "Oswald," the unfortunate heir to degenerate tendencies in "Ghosts," as Ibsen conceived the character. A former Russian character actor once told me that Dr. Ibsen clasped Dunaew in his arm after witnessing a performince in Christiania and said, "You ARE Oswald." The late Pope Pius presented Dunaew with a valuable ring for his poem, "Michael Angelo," which was published in Rome about five years ago.

Coming to America for the first time eleven years ago with Alla Nazimova, Dunaew stayed only a short time and returned to Europe. Some four years ago he returned to the United States and became a naturalized American citizen. Entering motion pictures via the scenario route he became known as one of the most striking figures in screen success, "My Official Wife," featuring Clara Kimball Young and directed by James Young, was written by Mr. Dunaew, who also assisted in the direction.

For many years his short stories and prose poems have been in much favor in Russia, Germany, France and Italy. At this writing the leading newspapers and magazines of those countries are publishing his works. In addition to a brilliant description of life at the eastern front, "Meditation in the Trenches," published in The Times magazine section a few weeks ago, about six more of the Russian writer's short stories have been secured.

Following the probable Belasco production of "The Silent Lie," this autumn in New York, Mr. Dunaew will return to Los Angeles to begin work on a new drama. Meanwhile the critics await the decision of the powers-that-be at the hub of the theatrical world concerning "The Spider," for which they are all certain of its sure-fire success.

We cannot afford to disappoint such customers.

Remember, this is the first time we have ever made our opening-of-the-season price so low.

We may never do it again—the cost of all materials is still advancing.

"Slavs Capture Important Position in the Tschavoskiethlosky Mountains." "Austrians Flee Before Troops Under Command of Gen. Gogetumwithswordovitch." "Germans Forced Backward Into the Valley of Gotterdamerungsourkraut." Whoever is tired of reading about the various movements in the theater of war, let him go into a Los Angeles theater of joy and find rest for his troubled soul. First, let him go to see "The Cinderella Man," one of the brightest plays of the season. When his nerves have been soothed and strengthened by that aroma-breathing production, he may be in condition to bear the bright lights and the sounding cymbals of vaudeville—and the programmes in the vaudeville field of entertainment are especially good this week. The Orpheum brings a bunch of exceptionally clever stars to that theater on Labor Day. Pantages and the Burbank promise the best bills seen at those houses for several weeks while the Hippodrome starts the week tomorrow with its fall season road show. The Little Theater, the Mason and the Majestic are dark.

Morosco.

"The Cinderella Man" is still with us and will begin its fourth week at the Morosco Theater with today's matinee. Having broken all records for attendance at the Morosco so far, the management expects the fourth week of the production to be as successful as have the past three weeks. "The Cinderella Man" is popular because it is a story of youth and love and laughter and all that goes to make the world worth while. At a time like the present, when the world seems to have gone mad with hatred and jealousy, and when all the oceans seem to be made of blood and tears, a play of this sort is a bright spot, a peace offering of that better spirit which it is hoped will one day dominate the lives of men.

Orpheum.

As an opening for its fall season of entertainments the Orpheum, for the week beginning Labor Day, offers two headline acts, one of these being the offering of Lew Brice and the other of Harry Girard. Mr. Brice, who is not new to Los Angeles, returns with the Barr twins, said to be two of the prettiest girls in the vaudeville world, in "A Little o' This and a Little o' That." Girard comes with Agnes-Cain Brown (his wife,) in a musical sketch by Mr. Girard called "The Wall of an Eskimo," and act which will charm not alone from a musical standpoint, but from its rare scenic effects. Rita Boland is another newcomer who is said to shine in personality, songs and gowns. Edwin House, one of the big singers of the country, will be the first to head a big list of musical artists engaged by the Orpheum people, and the Chung-Hwa Chinese four are exponents of Celestial humor and harmony. Hamilton and Brown in "The Headliners," Harry B. Tooner and "America First" have been retained for another week.

Pantages.

"Wanted, a Wife" and "Women" are the two headliners on the Pantages programme this week. The former act is said to be an exceptionally clever one-act comedy, with a capable cast, including a bevy of pretty singing and dancing girls, while "Women" is an amusing comedy sketch dealing with the eccentricities and foibles of the gentler sex. Julian Hall sings, dances, whistles, plays musical instruments and entertains in a few other ways, while the big musical feature of the bill is provided by the Lucy Lucier Trio, whose voices are said to blend in a very honey of harmony. The Royal Gascoignes are jugglers, and a de luxe dancing act is offered by Mlle. Rhiengold, assisted by Louis Kauffman.

Hippodrome.

If there is anything lacking in the fall season road show which opens at the Hippodrome tomorrow it will not be the fault of the booking offices, from which the management of the "Hip" has received promises of a number of exceptionally interesting acts. Being Labor Day, the week will start with a continuous performance for the day. Among the features billed for the new show are the following: Chadwick and Taylor, a pair of ebony entertainers; Truet, Kramer and Cruet in "A Circus Day in Georgia;" Lew Hoffman, the Nutty Hatter, otherwise known as the juggling fool; Field, Keane and Walsh in a sketch entitled "After the Matinee;" Ed and Lottie Ford, "America's premier steppers;" Emily Darrell and company with a bundle of fun in "Late for Rehearsal," and the Willie brothers, equilibrists. Moving pictures will also form part of the programme.

Burbank.

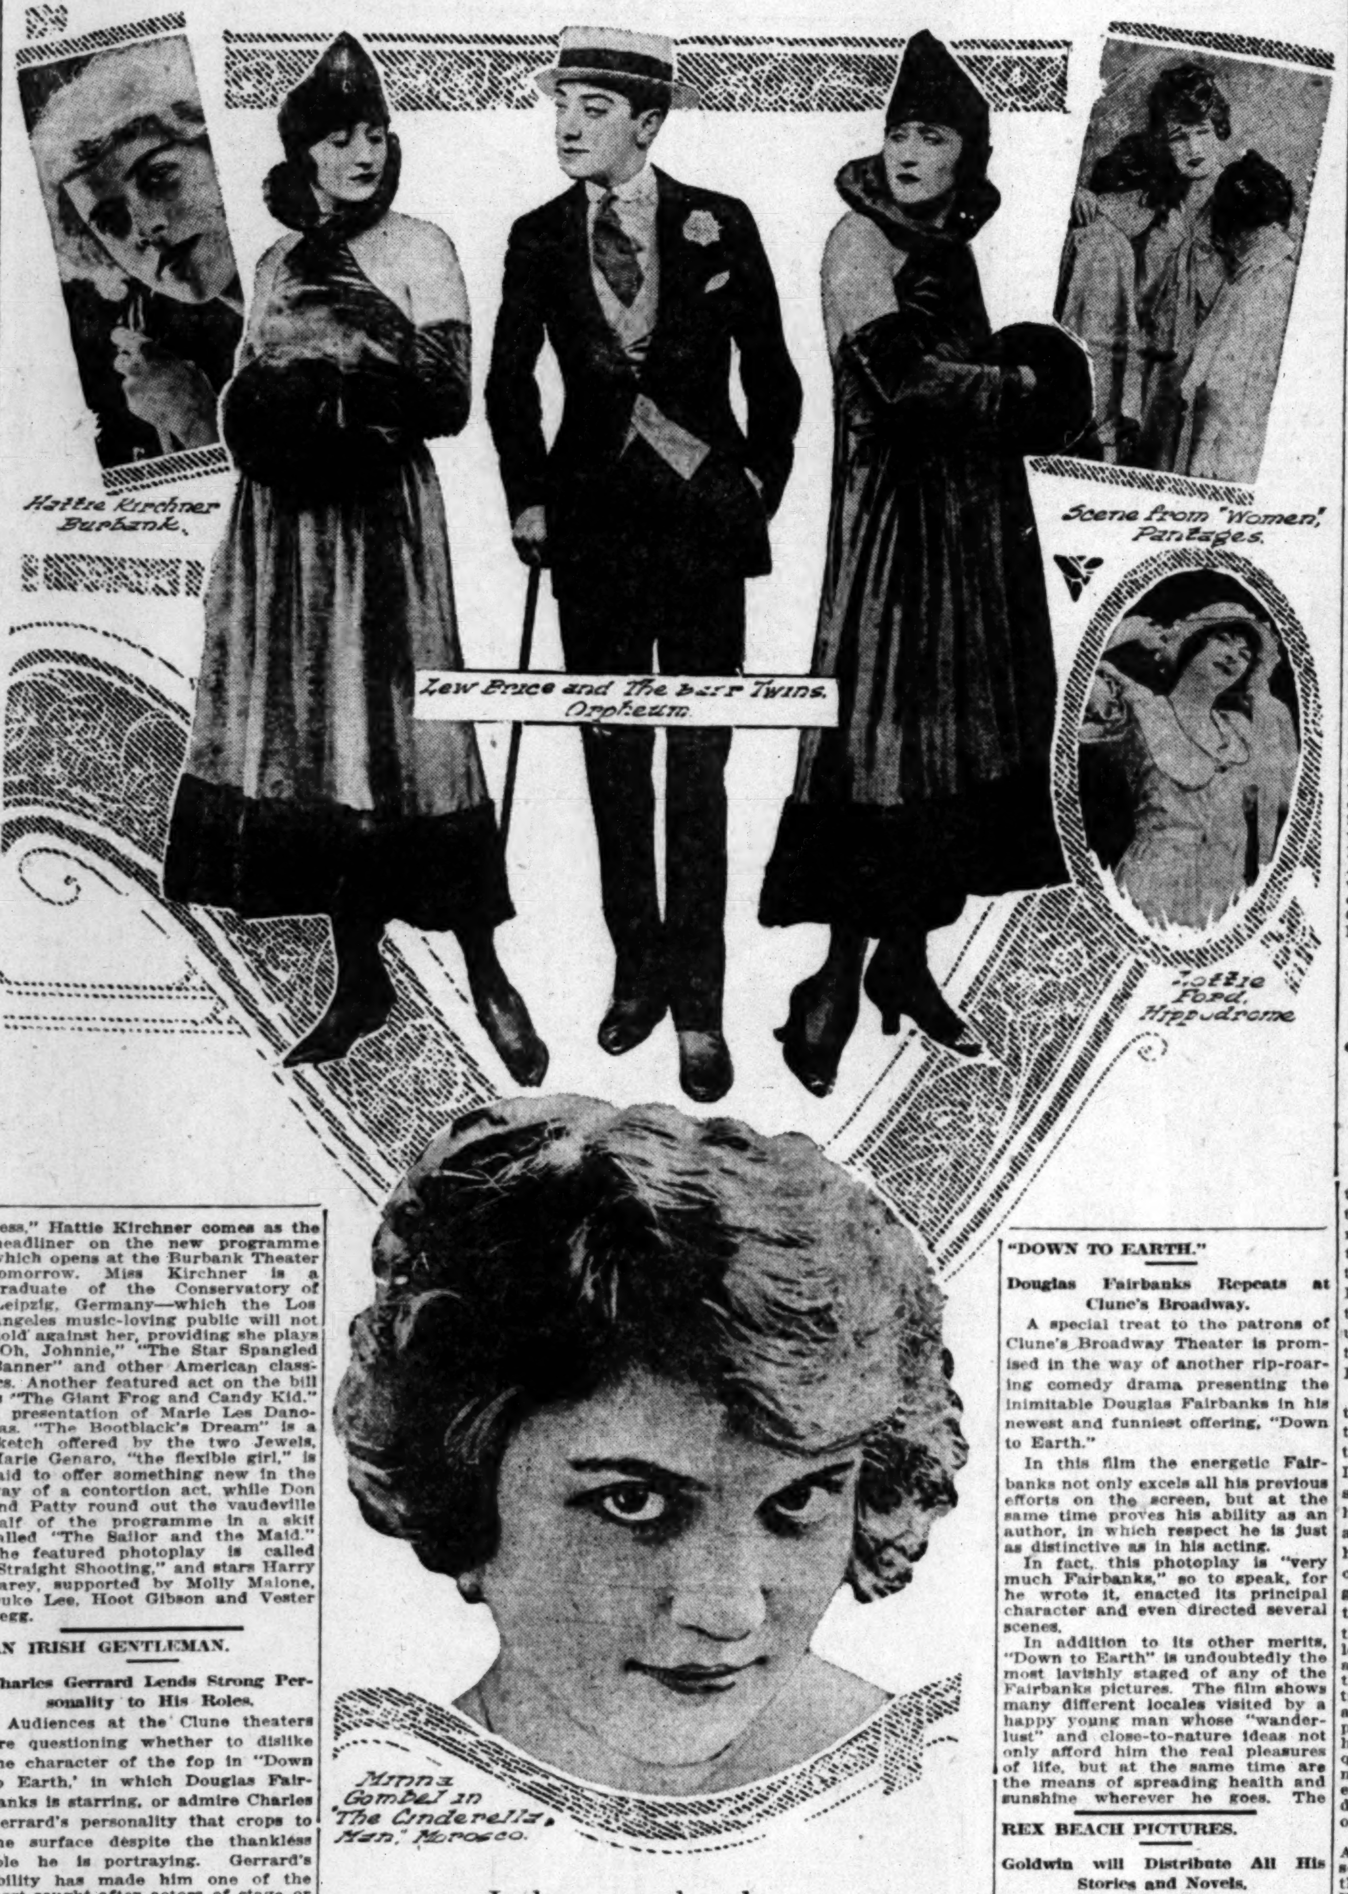
Billed as "The Violin Enchantress," Hattie Kirchner comes as the headliner on the new programme which opens at the Burbank Theater tomorrow. Miss Kirchner is a graduate of the Conservatory of Leipzig, Germany—which the Los Angeles music-loving public will not hold against her, providing she plays "Oh, Johnnie," "The Star Spangled Banner" and other American classics. Another featured act on the bill is "The Giant Frog and Candy Kid," a presentation of Marie Les Danovas. "The Bootblack's Dream" is a sketch offered by the two Jewels. Marie Genaro, "the flexible girl," is said to offer something new in the way of a contortion act, while Don and Patty round out the vaudeville half of the programme in a skit called "The Sailor and the Maid." The featured photoplay is called "Straight Shooting," and stars Harry Carey, supported by Molly Malone, Duke Lee, Hoot Gibson and Vester Pegg.

Artistic Dispellers of Gloom.



In drama, comedy and song.

AN IRISH GENTLEMAN.

Charles Gerrard Lends Strong Personality to His Roles.

Audiences at the Clune theaters are questioning whether to dislike the character of the fop in "Down to Earth,' in which Douglas Fairbanks is starring, or admire Charles Gerrard's personality that crops to the surface despite the thankless role he is portraying. Gerrard's ability has made him one of the most-sought-after actors of stage or screen, particularly after his remarkable portrayal of English Eddie in "Within the Law." And woe betide the ordinary film star who gives Gerrard an opportunity to display his talents as the "heavy" man.

Douglas Fairbanks is to be congratulated on matching his ability with Gerrard and playing fair throughout the picture, professionally speaking. Fairbanks is too great an artist to begrudge a fellow-actor the golden opportunity, and so Charles Gerrard won an almost equal criticism with the star. It is certain that these two made "Down to Earth" an excellent comedy. May we see the Irish actor in roles more suitable to his talents in the future.

HER LATEST CONQUEST.

Mme. Petrova Wins Heart of Seven-Year-Old Leading Man.

A more devoted sweetheart never laid his heart at fair lady's feet than Mme. Petrova's latest adorer who appears with her in her new Paramount picture, "The Law of the Land," adapted from the play of George Broadhurst to be shown at Tally's Broadway this week.

Always at her beck and call and bringing her smuggy "drorings" of herself for stickly packages of taffy—all this and more is Ted Sawyer, the 7-year-old boy who takes the part of her son.

This is the youngster's first appearance before the camera and he is more than enthusiastic about it. He likes "close-ups" of himself and his idea of a good picture would be five reels of himself sitting within a few feet of the camera and peacefully absorbing a five-pound box of taffy like the one Mme. Petrova bought him one afternoon.

Director Maurice Tourneur, however, who directed the production and who has made it one of the finest of his whole notable career, says the boy will be heard from some day and insists that these vagaries are nothing more than the "artistic temperament" which, like murder, will out.

Favorite Sirens.

you must believe me when I say that the finding of the innermost part of this character and delivering it to the world was a mental effort not to be lightly entered into.

"And what did I find in this strangely wonderful woman of the Nile, you ask? Was the vampire, as you care to call it, there? Wait, you shall see. One thing I shall say, I found a woman there with all that that implies, and she did the things that some women do when their heart and mind are tried to the uttermost."

"But, alas," said Miss Bara as a new phase came to her, "the days of romance are over. The long list of famous women are really a thing of the past and today we have the ballot box."

"DOWN TO EARTH."

Douglas Fairbanks Repeats at Clune's Broadway.

A special treat to the patrons of Clune's Broadway Theater is promised in the way of another rip-roaring comedy drama presenting the inimitable Douglas Fairbanks in his newest and funniest offering, "Down to Earth."

In this film the energetic Fairbanks not only excels all his previous efforts on the screen, but at the same time proves his ability as an author, in which respect he is just as distinctive as in his acting.

In fact, this photoplay is "very much Fairbanks," so to speak, for he wrote it, enacted its principal character and even directed several scenes.

In addition to its other merits, "Down to Earth" is undoubtedly the most lavishly staged of any of the Fairbanks pictures. The film shows many different locales visited by a happy young man whose "wanderlust" and close-to-nature ideas not only afford him the real pleasures of life, but at the same time are the means of spreading health and sunshine wherever he goes. The theme is typical of the true Fairbanks nature, and in addition to its mirth-provoking qualities carries with it the well-known optimism and philosophy of the famous screen star, proving in all one of the greatest screen tonics ever presented.

Never before has the favorite actor been given a scenario more closely allied to his own smiling nature. Douglas Fairbanks knows himself better than any other living person, and in writing the story for his own characterization it is therefore naturally to be supposed that he gives himself the best vehicle to express his own ideas of life, such as he has so effectively brought out in his recent book, "Laugh and Live."

The ever-popular and always-interesting Hearst Pathe News continues to be a prominent feature on the Broadway's bill, and following its established custom will show the latest current issue of the News with the Fairbanks picture.

REX BEACH PICTURES.

Goldwin will Distribute All His Stories and Novels.

All future Rex Beach pictures, made from his stories and novels, are to be distributed by the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation. The contract places the Goldwyn distribution in immediate possession of Mr. Beach's recently-completed production of "The Auction Block." This play was six months in the making.

"The Auction Block" was directed by Larry Trimble, who since its completion has joined Goldwyn, and is now directing Jane Cowl in "The Spreading Dawn," written by Basil King.

J. A. Quinn has booked the entire release of the Goldwyn features, the first being Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus," from the world-famed play by Margaret Mayo, opening at the Rialto, Monday, September 10.

Not Up to Expectations.

[Boston Transcript:] "What did you get out of that will case?" asked the first lawyer.

"A hundred and fifty thousand dollars," replied the second lawyer.

"Good round sum, eh?"

"Yes, but I thought the old man left more than that."

M'NAMARA A BUSY MAN.

Irish Writer and Producer Turns Out Film Comedies.

Walter MacNamara, the "little Irishman" who wrote and produced "Traffic in Souls," the feature picture that brought more than $1,000,000 into the Universal coffers, is hard at work in the scenario department of the Triangle Film Company to the old Fine Arts studio. Mr. MacNamara first came to Los Angeles some six months ago to furnish original comedy ideas for Mack Sennett, and when the Triangle deal was consummated the new corporation engaged him.

"Ireland—A Nation," the successful production founded on the life of Robert Emmett, the Irish patriot, was produced by Mr. MacNamara in old Erin and it enjoyed one of the most profitable runs ever recorded in New York City. Before entering the picture game he had been very prominent on the English and Irish stage. Since coming to Los Angeles Mr. MacNamara has become well known in local motion-picture circles as the chaperon of Johnnie Gray, the titled demon, and Charlie Fuhr, the celebrated bon vivant.

Contest.

IT'S UP TO YOU.

Guess Which is Which When the Barr Twins Walk on the Stage With Lew Brice in the New Headline Act at the Orpheum This Week.

The Barr sisters, who are two-thirds of the act of Lew Brice and the Barr Twins, at the Orpheum, really are what they claim to be—twins. Eighteen years ago, or thereabouts, they were born in Pittsburgh. The only difference in their ages is a matter of three minutes. Consequently, Gertrude claims to be the older. The other one is Evelyn.

It is almost impossible to tell them apart. Lew Brice declares that when they were rehearsing their act, "A Little o' This and a Little o' That," which they will present at the Orpheum this week, he had to tie a blue ribbon on one and a pink ribbon on the other. Then he forgot whether it was Gertrude or Evelyn who was the blue-ribbon girl. He solved the problem by getting wider ribbons and printing their names on them in large black letters. The act calls for their separate appearance at the opening, and the girls are still fond of playing a trick on Lew Brice by switching around. According to the rehearsal plans, Gertrude is scheduled to make her appearance first, but Evelyn frequently does it. The audience is not aware of the change, and it generally takes Brice a few minutes to detect the joke that has been played on him.

Although the Barr twins are American girls by birth, they present a Parisian appearance, due to the fact that they were educated in France. In fact, they made their first stage appearance in that country and returned to their native land only a few years ago. Their Orpheum engagement marks their first professional tour in the West, but they have already definitely established themselves on the Atlantic border. They made a decidedly favorable impression last season when they played in "The Century Girl" at the Century Theater, New York. It was there that, Brice first saw them and entered into the agreement whereby they were introduced to vaudeville.

JANE COWD COMING.

Jane Cowl, who will appear soon in "The Spreading Dawn," at Quinn's Rialto, is also the author of a new drama, "Lilac Time," now being presented on the road by her theatrical managers, Selwyn & Co., prior to its entry into New York.

Miss Cowl is the first screen star to write a successful play under an important management, and her work has challenged the attention of the critics wherever "Lilac Time" has been presented. In addition to being the author of the play, Miss Cowl is also the star.

Accomplishments.

UNCLE SAM'S VERSATILE NEPHEW IS FAIRBANKS.

ACTOR, athlete, photographer, author, business man, mountain climber, motorist, cowboy, explorer and humorist—these are the accomplishments, vocations and titles of Douglas Fairbanks, the most versatile nephew of Uncle Sam. Proficient in each calling, the energetic Douglas has distinguished himself in many different ways since he first saw the light of day thirty-four years ago.

As an actor his achievements are too well known in both theatricals and motion pictures to repeat here. In the field of athletics he has entered many contests and has countless medals to show for his efforts. Even during these days when the motion picture demands much of his time, he constantly keeps in the pink of condition for which purpose he has enlisted the services of two trainers. On the screen the result of his athletic activities are often evidenced in surprising feats that no other actor would dare to attempt.

The philosophic and humorous writings of Douglas Fairbanks have attracted wide attention. His latest book, "Laugh and Live," has met with much popularity, and many of the photoplays in which he has appeared with particular success are from his pen.

"Down to Earth," his latest picture, which is to be shown at Clune's Broadway all next week, was written by himself and presents typical Fairbanks sunshine, philosophy and humor.

As president of the Douglas Fairbanks Film Company he has proved himself to be a capable business executive and an appreciative employer. Immediately upon becoming the head of his own company several months ago, Mr. Fairbanks established a new idea in the way of services and recompense. After carefully selecting a prospective employee, he establishes a salary never before obtained by the applicant and bids him live up to the salary. The result obtained through this unique plan is immediately apparent and has worked out most successfully.

Photography has always been one of Douglas's pet hobbies and his den contains many artistic accomplishments in this line. Hunting big game, exploring wild regions and mountain climbing have all been practiced by the film actor on many occasions. The delicate art of bronco busting and lariat twirling he has completely mastered and there are very few things about an automobile that he does not know.

The many different achievements of Douglas Fairbanks are due partly to his continuous effort to conquer new fields and his surprisng energy and persistency. Through his variegated career the popular Fairbanks has encountered conditions in many different walks of life which have given him the opportunity to become proficient in a greater variety of callings than the average person.

Prior to his association with theatricals he had traveled extensively in various different capacities. Science, mining, law and even the ministry were studied by Douglas at a time when his ambitions were not clear in his own mind. When finally he made up his mind that he would become an actor he realized that he had decided for himself where his future activities would hold forth. In speaking about his initial stage work Douglas recently said: "In my first characterization and in that of Florio in 'The Duke's Jester,' which followed, I failed to make any particular dent in the classic drama, but I probably wore the most astonishing costumes ever beheld on the stage, having been fitted out by a well meaning but misguided wardrobe mistress in odds and ends of ancient, modern and medieval garb." So successfully did his costumes affect the players who happened to be on the stage whenever he made his entrance, that he was released without any visible signs of pain when another opportunity was offorded him. On the stage Douglas Fairbanks soon attracted attention, however, as his individuality was a revelation, and this same individuality has made him undoubtedly one of the most popular stars in motion pictures. Despite his many other accomplishments however, Douglas Fairbanks is primarily an entertainer—a typical American—and a devoted father and husband.

ABOUT VERNON STEELE.

Motion-picture fans, long accustomed to seeing Mae Marsh and Bobby Harron playing together on the screen, will be eager to know the name of her new leading man in her first Goldwyn picture.

His name is Vernon Steele. He is young, tall and handsome, and he is already known in many parts of the United States, where he played as leading man for Billie Burke in "Love Watches." Mr. Steele is in his twenties, and first came to this country with Marie Tempest.

American Names.

[Tom Daly, in Philadelphia Ledger:] Here's the way the American names run in the list of men accepted for service in a Manhattan district: Weinstein, Segal, Kalaban, Rosavitsky, Klubek, Bigansky, Mechanic, Rescigno, Greenberg, Pondasha, Liphitz, Beyer, Boltax, Arzle, Koltena, Moshensky and so on to the number of sixty. The only Anglo-Saxon names in the bunch are Cooper and Miller, but their Christian (?) fronts are Louis and Aaron, respectively.

HE SAID SOMETHING.

"It's a pity the camera can't shoot nothing but film at some of the specimens that think they are actors," remarks Honus, Essanay's head carpenter.

The Correct Furnishing of the Bedroom

The illustration shows a most unusual dressing table and stool of the Louis XVI period.

THE bedroom is more susceptible to the whims of changing style, in furnishing, than is any other room in the home. And yet there are certain underlying fundamentals which one must always recognize in furnishing the bedroom, regardless of fashion tendencies.

This dual situation merely emphasizes the necessity for reliance upon competent authority and widens the latitude for artistic expression in the furnishing of bedrooms.

The California Furniture Co., catering as it does to those who appreciate the artistic side of home furnishing, is constantly and intimately in touch with style sources and presents the most advanced suggestions for the correct furnishing of the bedroom. The display of bedroom furniture alone occupies an entire vast floor and includes the finest productions of all the important periods as well as the inexpensive pieces for the most modern home.

Men, trained in the art of home-furnishing, are here to serve you and to assist you in making selections and in working out the best results for you at least cost.

We most cordially invite you to come and see our display of bedroom furniture and to compare values.

An interesting display of bedroom furniture is presented this week in our south window.

MAE MARSH RETURNS.

Favorite Angeleno Screen Star Comes Back in "Polly of the Circus;" Goldwyn Pictures Acquire "The Cinderella Man" for Production.

Through a remarkable coincidence as the result of a big theatrical deal between Oliver Morosco and Goldwyn pictures just completed in the East, Mae Marsh is to appear in the first picture presentation of "The Cinderella Man," which is now being featured in drama form at the Morosco Theater here.

Mae Marsh will make her first appearance as a star of the Goldwyn pictures at Quinn's Rialto Theater within a week in the first offering of the Goldwyn programme, "Polly of the Circus." She has just completed this picture and will begin work upon "The Cinderella Man" in picture form immediately.

In the meantime, Miss Minna Gombel in the leading role of the dramatic version of "The Cinderella Man" is appearing at the Morosco Theater and popularizing the play to an extent that will make it pictorially worth while when it is seen here later in pictures.

The deal, whereby Goldwyn pictures secured "The Cinderella Man," was consummated in New York last week between Oliver Morosco, the owner of the play, and Edward Childs Carpenter, the author, and Goldwyn pictures. The rights of this play for picture presentation were especially purchased for Mae Marsh in the leading role. It is announced that George Loane Tucker will direct it.

Morosco and Carpenter were averse to turning this play over to the screen producers at this time, because it is still a big money-making proposition in dramatic stock, but the deal was finally put through when the proper financial arrangements had been advanced. As a result, Mae Marsh will be seen later in the season in "The Cinderella Man" at Quinn's Rialto Theater.

J. A. Quinn announces that, following "Polly of the Circus," with Mae Marsh, which will introduce the Goldwyn pictures to his house, the Rialto will present exclusive Goldwyn pictures including such stars as Maxine Elliott, Mary Garden ,Madge Kennedy, Jane Cowl, Marie Dressler, Mabel Normand and many others.

Programmes.

SIN AND SORROW.

VAMPIRES AND UNDERWORLD TRAGEDIES THIS WEEK.

Sin and sorrow and gilded vampires and underworld tragedies play a considerable part in many of the cinema productions offered at local theaters this week, but what's to be done about it? If moralists found it difficult to elevate the stage (and they did and do) the possibility of making every screen drama look like a field of snow-white daisies is very remote indeed. For without the aid of fine speeches and dulcet voices—with which even the worst villain in a legitimate play ever sees to hide his rascality, purely for the sake of his art—there is nothing left for the pantomimists to do except to depict the unsavory elements of human character as faithfully as possible in order to afford a consistent contrast to beauty and innocence. Moreover, since the highest forms of creative art must always of necessity be largely reflective of the nature and capability of the artist, as well as of human nature in the aggregate, the elevation of the stage and screen can only come with the development of human nature toward the wholesome and the clean. However, there are plenty of bright dramas and purely humorous productions on local screens this week and those who are already elevated can steer clear of the muddy spots along the theatrical highway. All who are elevated or who desire to be elevated will please make it known by saying "Aye." Opposed, "No." Thank you. The "No's" have it.

Clune's Auditorium.

Beginning tomorrow the most popular little woman in America—Mary Pickford—comes to Clune's Auditorium for a week in her latest cinema production, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." As the little girl of the quaint old New England village Rebecca goes to live with two old maiden aunts. How she sells soap to get a parlor lamp for the Simpsons, gives a circus in a barn with all the children of the village as performers and goes through various other fascinating experiences is told in a delightful manner in this happy story of American childhood. The picture was directed by Marshall Neilan and the little star is supported by Eugene O'Brien, Jack McDonald, Marjorie Daw, Kate Tancray any Mayne Kelso.

Alhambra.

"The Soul of Satan." Heaven preserve us But so long as we only see it in pictures the spirit of "Old Nick" (saving his presence) will probably do none of us any harm. On the contrary he should prove most interesting. Anyway, "The Soul of Satan" is the title of the featured photoplay at the Alhambra this week and Gladys Brockwell is the star. She is surrounded by a cast that includes Joseph Swickard, Bertram Grassby, Charles Clary, William Burress and Frankie Lee. The added atraction is a series of pictures of warfare on the battlefields of Europe.

Clune's Broadway.

Coming direct from a big run at the Auditorium, Douglas Fairbanks will open the week at Clune's Broadway Theater in his own creation, "Down to Earth," said to be the happiest photoplay in which the smiling "Doug" has ever been seen. Mr. Fairbanks is credited with a book, several scenarios and countless articles all dealing with life as he has known it in the big out-of-doors. "Down to Earth" is on the same order, being the story of a young American whose love of living in the country is in strange contrast to the ideas of his sweetheart, a society bud, who is finally converted to her lover's way of seeing things by a few trips into nature's wonderful garden.

Miller's.

The ten-reel fairy spectacle, "Jack and the Beanstalk," starts on its third and last week at Miller's Theater today. In order to retain this production for another week Mr. Miller was forced to set back the premiere of his new de luxe feature, but he did so because he wished to give those who are returning to the city from the mountains and beaches an opportunity to enjoy this fantastical film. Critics have called this production the "Intolerance" of kiddie pictures and it is said to have shown to the biggest crowds of any picture ever seen at Miller's Theater. The young hero of the story is Francis Carpenter and he is supported by a constellation of clever little stars, including Carmen De Rue, Violet Radcliffe and Virginia Lee Corbin.

Quinn's Rialto.

The present week marks the last lap of the race which "The Whip" has been running for seven weeks, neck and neck with a score of other popular features at the various picture theaters. Notwithstanding the fact that this will be the eighth week of this photoplay at Quinn's Rialto it is expected that as many people will see it this week as in any one of the last seven weeks. Manager Quinn says that it will be impossible to keep "The Whip" over for a ninth week, as he has already booked "Polly of the Circus," featuring Mae Marsh, for the week beginning September 10.

Superba.

Chuck full of that suspense and double-quick action which made the charm of the olden, golden West, the melodramatic story called "Pay Me" comes to the Superba this week, starring Dorothy Phillips, the girl who attained the topmost round on the ladder of picturedom by her clever work in "Hell Morgan's Girl." In "Pay Me" Miss Phillips is seen as the queen of a western dancing and gambling hall, and she is supported by Lon Chaney and William Stowell, who have appeared with her in many of her former successes.

Symphony.

The Symphony Theater is getting "blooded." Nothing but big plays with classy titles, and featuring five-pointed stars, need apply for admission at that house. Last week it was Mabel Taliaferro in "The Jury of Fate," while this week the management promises an entertainment equally as good in "The Girl Without a Soul," starring Viola Dana, who plays a double role, and who is said to play it exceptionally well.

Garrick.

A sensational and risque subject is said to have been handled in an inoffensive and highly interesting manner in "The Sin Woman," the attraction at the Garrick this week The scarlet woman, played by Irene Fenwick, does her best to hide her evil actions from the public by her clever way of dressing and by her polished manners, but in the last scene she is tarred and feathered by persons who are outraged because of her sins.

Tally's Broadway.

In speaking of her latest picture, "The Law of the Land," the attraction at Tally's Broadway Theater this week, Mme. Petrova said that this is the strongest play in which she has ever appeared. "It contains a theme of paramount interest to every individual," said Mme. Petrova, "and will appeal to old and young alike." "The Law of the Land" is a production from George Broadhurst's novel of the same name. An added attraction at Tally's this week will be Clara Kimball Young in the first play she ever produced.

Palace.

Adventures in the Paris underworld, life among the cunning and desperate Apaches, a brave man's daring and suffering for love—these are some of the things that go to make "The Silent Master," the featured film in which Robert Warwick takes the leading role at the Palace this week. Warwick is seen as a man of wealth in Paris, in league with a mysterious court in which wrongdoers who cannot be reached by ordinary processes of law are punished. The production was taken from E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel, "The Court of St. Simon," and is said to be replete with gorgeous settings and exciting climaxes.

SHOOT—BUT NOT FILM.

Two of the Universal comedians may be fighting side by side before long "somewhere in France." They are William Franey and Milton Sims, leading fun-makers of the Joker comedy companies. Both were called in the selective draft and both when examined this week were passed by Uncle Sam's representatives.

SOCIETY.

DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

LOS ANGELES, August 31.

[illegible] dearest:

Have all your military beaux been vaccinated, too? It is their first taste of war, and they are wearing their wounds with such fine brave smiles and such a clever eluding of bumps. Some of them go around with a string tied on their arm to warn clumsy folks to keep their distance. But most of them scorn such ostentatious protection and have cultivated a courageous limp instead. "Oh, nothing, only my arm!" they say with a desolated smile as they draw away from one with anxious precipitude.

Lots of them would rather face a cannon than that little needle. One hears such funny tales about their deportment under the trial. One boxing prize fighter, for instance, who had won all sorts of eclat in the ring, nearly fainted when he had to be vaccinated. The correct greeting for one's soldier friends is "Good morning, how's your poor arm?" and woe betide the female who is not properly sympathetic. Her lack of womanliness will be forever in doubt.

Of course we went out to Arcadia. It is one's patriotic duty to keep oneself informed. Oh, my dear, why are military camps always hot and dusty? There is none of the glamour of war out there, just grim, comfortable, horribly efficient, serious orderliness. We went on a Sunday afternoon, and the men did not seem to know what to do with themselves and their unaccustomed leisure. They all seem to long for a fine gory fight, anything to break the monotony. Which reminds me, the Y.M.C.A. has provided them with a proper prize fight ring where they can bang each other about for pleasure. Aren't men funny? There they were in the broiling sun and dust, punching the life out of each other, suffering terribly, and calling it a pastime.

We were very lucky to fall in with [illegible] O'Sullivan, who was one of the darling dancing bachelors a couple of months ago. Now he has joined in the regulars and got married into the bargain. His pretty little bride runs out in a lordly machine to fetch him home for his week-end furlough, not forgetting to take a supply of cookies for his boys when she goes, ensuring her soldier hubby's redoubled popularity. He took us all over the camp, and believe me, it would not be at all comfortable for unescorted females to try and do it alone. One would be horribly conspicuous—and not necessarily welcome, either.

Speaking of wives, these appendages are proving a considerable embarrassment to some of our men at the Presidio. You see, all the wives and mammas that could manage it have transported themselves to San Francisco and just hover. Some of them even insisted upon accompanying their lords to the very gates of the camp for enlistment, just like taking little Bobbie to school for the first time, and the men suffered much guying in consequence. "Hello, old chap, where's your mamma?" is the sort of greeting these unfortunates get. And thereafter, just to prove their manliness, they sternly neglect the ladies, don't even telephone to the hotel, and then there are weeping and "You have ceased to love me" sessions nicely calculated to harrow the heart of a hero. Especially when he has discovered that the making of an epauletted general begins with instructions to sweep out the tent, and jolly well see that you do it properly. Dishwashing, waiting at table and laundry are all part of the initial training for an officer. Won't they make good husbands after a dose of that?

Ted Ford of Pasadena, who is back for a short furlough from France, where he has been aviating, is suffering an embarrassment of welcome. They are smothering him with attentions over there, and when they tried to make him the hero of the evening at the Maryland on Thursday night he was so scared he went home to bed and stayed there. Nothing would induce him to get up until the meeting was safely over. Now he is furtively there, and we suspect him of wearing some of those invisible suits Capt. Knyvett was telling us about.

Capt. Knyvett, by the way, certainly wore the most deplorable trousers. Not leggings, but trousers that bagged with shameless criminality and looked as if his mother had made them, at that. Somehow, we don't associate bloodthirsty heroes with baggy trousers—they would have looked so much more suitable on a pacifist. It speaks well for his oratory that there were times when one could forget his trousers, even when they were the most conspicuous things on the platform. I believe he wore them as a means of protection from feminine admiration. Otherwise, of course, we might have rushed the platform and kissed him. It was most interesting to watch the expressions on the faces of some of our immaculately sartorial clubmen who fixed their eyes on those trousers and shuddered perceptibly.

Knyvett was superb until he started to talk slushy mush about the women. Then he declared that this war was really being fought "for our women, boys," and saddled us with such a wealth of virtues we could never hope to live up to, that we almost wanted to fight him ourselves. It was very nice of him to declare that women have the harder part, but here in California we know better. If women had to leave their lives and vanities behind and go into training camps, war would pretty soon cease altogether. Why, we make a fuss when we have to sit in the back seat of an automobile without a veil.

This is Del Monte week, and all the golfers have hied them to the State tournament. A good way to discover who is in town is to try to arrange a dinner party—one soon learns that everybody is most anywhere but at home. But all the schools are opening next week and then the city will be itself again.

So, darling, you are mistaken about Harold coming into a fortune. The pater says that when he wears his jewelry, his stunning tie pin, his ring, his watch chain and his gold cigarette case, it is a sure sign that he is utterly broke. You see, he is one of those clever Bohemians that live entirely on their possessions, and he is therefore richest when they are in pawn. When he has them all out, you know that he has spent his last cent getting them. Then he feels wealthy enough to borrow more money, and when that is gone he pawns his treasures again. It sounds quite deliciously simple, doesn't it?

Yes, I have heard the rumors about our pet widower, too. Wearing all those frisky ties does look suspicious. But I think it only means that the boys bequeathed him their excitable ties when they went into camp, and papa, being of an economical turn, feels he must wear 'em.

This will probably account for a good deal of the friskiness of some of the proud fathers are exhibiting just now. Wherever possible, they are even wearing out their son's suits. One father declares that war is horrible, but he has one solace. Since John went away the complete pair of cuff links have always been his. They both had similar cuff links before, and when a single one went astray, the remaining pair always, without exception, belonged to John. Papa had become so ingenious at substitutes and so clever at keeping the linkless sleeve out of sight, that it is really funny to see him suddenly shoot out both his cuffs when he remembers that all is well.

By the way, since knitting thread went up, it is cheaper to buy those army wash rags already made. And thus is one labor of love cruelly denied us. Knitting is still fashionable, though. But instead of knitting sweaters for the navy we are doing them in fancy colors for ourselves. We manage to look pleasantly industrious without making any immediate sacrifices.

So long, dearest,
Your catty BETTY.

Arrival of September.

With the arrival of September many social activities will be resumed; many vacationists will return to town and many girls will pack their trunks and leave for the East for school, or take up their educational work here. There will be the usual round of parties and dances—no, not the usual round, perhaps, for war time has taken too many men away to make the affairs as gay as they used to be, but there will be frolics enough to delight the heart of any pleasure-seeker. The Amateur Players, somewhat depleted in their ranks by the call of Mars, will still continue their dramatic work, and will present something in October.

There will be weddings, too, for several of our most charming brides-elect have chosen this month for their marriages. One of these attractive maids, Miss Lucy C. Harper, whose coming wedding was announced in these columns several weeks ago, has just returned from Seattle, where she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Wolgamot for the past six weeks. Miss Harper was the recipient of many parties and showers in the northern city. The bride-to-be is a decendant of the pioneer Holst family, who came to California in 1849. She is to be married the 11th inst. to Richard Garrod, a native of England.

Another interesting bit of news is told by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Charles Barnes of Oak Hill Park, who announce the engagement of their daughter, Gladys Adele, to L. Roy Black, formerly of Virginia. The wedding will take place this fall. Miss Barnes is a graduate of Cumnock, and will be the honoree at many pretty affairs.

Honor Northern Guests.

In honor of Prof. and Mrs. William Gorsuch of Seattle, Mrs. H. F. McLaughlin of No. 1209 Arapahoe street, assisted by a capable trio of hostesses, entertained Thursday at a delightful soiree. Prof. Gorsuch read a whimsical little comedy, "Dolly Reforming Herself," by Henry Arthur Jones, and Miss Molly Byerly Wilson, a contralto who has recently come here from Chicago, contributed several beautiful numbers. About thirty guests enjoyed the evening. Prof. and Mrs. Gorsuch have spent a month in Los Angeles, and will leave just in time for Prof. Gorsuch to take up his work at the University of Washington, as head of the department of public speaking.

Celebrate Golden Wedding.

Senator and Mrs. John W. Ballard of No. 468 South Lake street, celebrated their golden wedding anniversity Tuesday afternoon. The rooms were bright with golden glow dahlias and golden rod, and with the many floral tributes sent by loving friends. Assisting the host and hostess in receiving were their daughters, Mrs. Ella B. Hanna and Mrs. Zoe B. Fuller. In the dining-room their grand-daughter, Miss Dorothy Edwina Hanna, the Misses Ruth Chandler and Doris Gibbs assisted in serving the guests. As part of the informal programme Mrs. Celia A. Rendall and Dr. H. E. W. Barnes read original poems composed for the occasion.

Mrs. Ballard, who was Miss Fidelia M. Scholl came across the plains in 1861. Two years later Senator Ballard came from Illinois, and the lady who became his future wife was the first girl he met in California. They were married August 28, 1867, at Suisun, and spent several years at San Francisco before coming to Santa Ana, where Mr. Ballard became District Attorney and later Superior judge of Orange county. They have resided in Los Angeles fifteen years, and for the past four years Senator Ballard has represented the Thirty-eighth District in the State Legislature.

Announces Daughter's Engagement.

Mrs. G. E. Talcott of No. 2007 Ocean View street announces the engagement of her daughter, Myrtle Adele, to Capt. Gordon C. Hunt of London, Ontario, Can. The wedding date has been set for late autumn. After touring California the young couple will leave for an extended honeymoon trip through the East. They will make their home at London, Can.

Informal Dance.

Among the many delightful affairs of the past week was an informal dance given last Friday evening by Miss Louise Dolan at her home on West Fifty-second street.

Miss Dolan made a charming hostess, dressed in a white silk evening gown with a bodice of pink rosebuds. Prominent among the guests were Prof. William Wilson, who gave an interesting address, and Miss Pauline Walbaum, who was applauded for her work at the piano. Harry Hanson, well-known railroad man, was one of the honored guests. About twenty-five guests enjoyed the affair.

Crenshaws in East.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. L. Crenshaw, who left last week for the East, have arrived in Kansas City, and will spend a month or so in that city before returning to town.

Entertains at Luncheon.

Mrs. George Beidler was hostess recently at a dainty luncheon given at the Athletic Club in honor of her sister, Miss Blanche D. Young of Chicago, who is visiting Southern California. Covers were laid for the Misses Blanche Young, Anna McDermott, Anna Morrison and Grace Bird, and Mmes. Edwin F. Hahn, P. S. Bell, Joseph T. Kenny, F. W. Sinclair, A. J. Twja, David Beidler and James S. Green, and the hostess.

Arrive at Del Mar.

Lieut. and Mrs. Charles Givernaud have arrived at the Stratford Inn, where Mrs. Givernaud will remain indefinitely. Lieut. Givernaud is assigned. to duty at Camp Kearny.

A Patriotic Luncheon.

In honor of Mrs. J. E. Hatch, her house guest, Mrs. H. A. Holcomb of No. 675 South Ardmore avenue entertained at a luncheon last Wednesday afternoon. Red, white and blue was the color scheme, tiny flags floating from each plate. Place cards were also of flags, the centerpiece being red, white and blue flowers. As the guests took their stand at the table, Mrs. Roth Hamilton played and sang the "Star Spangled Banner." Each ne felt the enthusiasm of the hour and during the luncheon experiences in Red Cross work was given in regard to helping for the comfort of our soldiers.

At the conclusion of the luncheon Mrs. Hamilton gave a stirring and enthusiastic reading entitled, "Vive la France!" which caused all present to feel the necessity and duty of the times. Later a game of five hundred was enjoyed and the winner was presented with a beautiful silk flag.

Present were: Mrs. J. E. Hatch, Mrs. P. James Moran, Mrs. Roth Hamilton, Madame Jennie Kempton, Mrs. J. Doyle, Mrs. J. H. Henderson, Mrs. B. S. Johnson, Mrs. William Kelly, Mrs. H. F. Wheeler and Mrs. H. A. Holcomb.

Prompt, Courteous, Interested

Service

We believe that most people purchase jewelry at one store in preference to another for two reasons. One reason is good merchandise. But that alone will not keep a customer, while service---the other reason---will. Few people patronize a store which is not prompt, courteous and interested and it is with this thought in mind that we are striving to make Brock & Company service superior to that of any other jewelry store.

A Declaration of Independence!

Jacoby Bros. are going to "STICK" on BROADWAY—

—We have always had unbounded faith in BROADWAY—and this faith has not been affected in any way by the wanderlust of our neighbors!

—We're going to "Stick-to-Broadway" because, as we see it—it will be the great thoroughfare of Los Angeles in the future—just as it is at present!

—We want to keep our store where it's most convenient for you! If the real center of the city should be established elsewhere, we undoubtedly would follow—but we have no desire to put you—or ourselves—to the inconvenience of a pioneering expedition!

We're going to "stick" on BROADWAY---and we're doing it with a world of enthusiasm and confidence in the future!

—We have prepared for the biggest year in our store's history!

—Our store and our warehouses are bulging with merchandise! Merchandise which we contracted for months ago—and which, as a consequence, we are selling at much less than the prevailing prices!

—We have perfected our store service in a hundred and one little ways! We want you to find it pleasant, as well as profitable, to do your buying here!

We wish there was room on this page to tell you of all the wonderful merchandising plans that we have made!

—You couldn't help but be interested in merchandise that is priced less than present cost—and that's just the way that a great many lines are going to be sold! It will pay you well to watch our advertisements—they're going to be brimful of news about worth-while merchandise on which you can save!

—We want you to think of Jacoby's as your store! We will be glad indeed to have you offer any suggestions that you will, to make it more nearly suit your needs!

Monday night's paper will tell of a great "JUBILEE" we have planned to emphasize the fact we're going to "Stick on Broadway"

GEORGE BERANGER ENLISTS.

Australian Actor Leaves for Service in Egypt and France.

George Beranger, a well-known Australian actor who has made an enviable reputation in motion pictures during the past four years, last week enlisted in the British Engineers and departed for London via New York and Montreal—all in one day. From London Mr. Beranger will be sent into the inlands and waterways service either in Egypt or France.

Beranger is only 24 years old. When he was 20, he was majestic director under the supervision of D. D. Griffith. Since that time he has portrayed strong roles in several Fine Arts, Lasky, Universal and Triangle productions and was conceded to be one of the best actors on the screen. His loss wil be felt in Los Angeles theatrical circles.

SHOCKING NOTE.

A couple of hundred inmates of the Los Angeles County Jail were shocked one day this week when Director Elmer Clifton and his company of Bluebird players invaded their domicile to stage scenes for Clifton's latest photoplay, "The Dragnet," in which Herbert Rawlinson is featured.

The shock, however, was an electric one and occurred when one of the powerful lamps the Bluebird people were using to light the interior of the jail became short-circuited and sent a strong current through the iron bars of the cells. No one was injured, but there was some lively action in the jail for a minute or two until the electricity was shut off.

The past week he has been busy with soap and brush in an efford to remove the stain, but so far has been unsuccessful.

Look at the picture above, then turn to your Bible and find the answer to the question. The picture illustrates the verse in which the answer will be found.

Each week we will publish an illustrated question from the Bible and the following week publish the answer. See if you can find the answer before we publish it!

Make a family pastime of this interesting feature—it will amuse and instruct you.

Last Week's Question and the Answer

Last week's query: "What was the height of Goliath?" was illustrated by a picture of that giant himself. The answer is found in the First Book of Samuel, Chapter 17, Verse 4:

"And there went out a champion out of the camp of the Philistines, named Goliath, of Gath, whose height was six cubits and a span."

"Six cubits and a span" is equivalent to eleven feet, eight inches.

a consumptive. They paused outside the door, before rapping, and heard the sick woman exclaim: "Oh, Bob, now I can have that expensive wine the doctor ordered. Where did you get the money?" "Oh," replied Bob, "I met a man that owed it to me." And it was then the good-hearted Barney stole away without saying a word to anybody.

Charlie Plays a Convict.

Charlie Chaplin will next be seen as a bestriped convict in "The Adventurer," which is already being cut.

Many scenes from "The Adventurer" were taken along the Sierra Madre coast range, where Chaplin, in the role of an escaped convict, flees over the rocky coast pursued by armed guards, of whom big Eric Campbell is the chief.

While ordinarily an escaped convict probably does not have much fun, the clever Chaplin has managed to wring a tremendous lot of humor, as well as some real human touches of pathos, from the subject, and, as a whole, the picture is said to be the best thing Chaplin has ever done.

Just Like Real Thing.

That poverty comes high is proved by the setting for "Doing Her Bit," in which Ruth Stonehouse is starring under the direction of Jack Conway. In this, a block from the New York tenement district has been reproduced at the Triangle's Culver City studio. Not a thing has been overlooked from "Casey's corner saloon" to "Uncle Ikey's emporium." As for local color and background, the street is littered with Triangle kiddies with a premium on extra men who can't speak English and have a luxurious growth of whiskers.

In "Doing Her Bit," Miss Stonehouse is shown as the sister of a slacker, and as a result of her efforts not only the wayward brother, but many other war dodgers in the tenement district, are imbued with a spirit of patriotism which carries them into the recruiting station and Uncle Sam's Liberty army.

Never, however, in the good old summertime, did the breezes blow in the tenement district as they blow at Culver City, and the other day, just as the cameraman got busy, a fierce ocean gale set in and work was halted while the entire company engaged in a battle with flying fire escapes and other properties waving in the breeze like so many flags.

Jack Gilbert, the youth who has been steadily coming to the top as a film idol, because of his unusually magnetic personality and the real talent which accompanies his good looks, has a leading part. That is, Jack has good looks now. Just what he will look like after his fight with eight men, scheduled for this week, one cannot tell.

Johnson is with Triangle.

Julian Johnson, until recently editor of the Photoplay Magazine, has been appointed editor-in-chief of the Triangle Film Corporation and is en route here from New York to assume his important post.

The position was created for Johnson by H. O. Davis, general manager and vice-president of Triangle, and is one of exceptional responsibility, Mr. Johnson acting as editor-in-chief and a sort of middleman between the script editor, the capable Jack Cunningham and Mr. Davis himself, relieving the chief of much of the work of final decision on pictures, which has heretofore been a part of his arduous duties.

Nature-faking Note.

How to make a gopher make a noise like a chipmunk is the problem that has been up to the Lois Weber company in filming Mary Roberts Rinehart's story, "K." In that story a chipmunk runs under the dresser in "K's" room and drags out a certain necktie that was lying on the floor. That sounds like a simple and chipmunkly thing to do. But it isn't so simple as it sounds, take it from Miss Weber, likewise from Phillips Smalley, because, in the first place, chipmunks don't grow in California to any extent. Therefore a gopher was chosen. But he turned out to be a gopher with no sense of artistic values and no taste for ties. Also, in an unreasonable and recalcitrant frame of mind, Mr. Gopher bit Phillips Smalley on the wrist.

Mr. Smalley seemed to be resourceful enough, too. He sewed a nut into the tie to tempt the gopher, but the gopher always got excited and insisted on sitting up in front of the camera and looking kernel in the nut. So, th the rest of the scenes of "T taken, the balance of the must wait until a more gopher actor can be found.

"And I thought," lament Smalley the other day, "I th the woods were just full actors,' but it seems not!"

Texas Governor Borrowed Big Sum from Friends.

Refuses to Disclose Identity of His Benefactors.

Dramatic Scenes Mark the Impeachment Trial.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

AUSTIN (Tex.) Aug. 23.—In no judicial proceedings in Texas was there ever witnessed a series of more dramatic incidents than those which characterized the testimony of Gov. James E. Ferguson in the cross-examination by former Attorney-General M. M. Crane during the two days of the early part of this week that he was upon the witness stand. It was a pitiless, searching and relentless inquiry that Mr. Crane made into the many official acts and private financial transactions of the Governor, which were alleged in the impeachment charges against him to have been committed in violation of the laws of this State. It is reported on apparently trustworthy authority that W. A. Hanger, leading counsel for Gov. Ferguson, was strongly opposed to the latter taking the stand as a witness on his own behalf in the pending proceedings. The Governor, however, insisted that he be allowed to tell his own story of the various matters with which he was charged. At one point in the cross-examination where it was developed by Mr. Crane that the Governor obtained from unknown friends last April the sum of $150,000 with which to pay his personal indebtedness, witness refused to divulge the names of the men who had advanced him this money. He told Mr. Crane that rather than do so he would resign from the Governor's office. The question was not pressed and the names of the Governor's friends who made him the big loan were not brought to light.

USE OF STATE FUNDS.

On this cross-examination the Governor admitted for the most part the several charges that were made against him, offering, however, excuses for his action. He claimed that his depositing of more than $100,000 of State funds in the Temple State Bank of Temple, was not altogether a new practice on the part of State officials. He admitted that the greater part of this money was loaned to other banks and that the Temple State Bank drew 2 per cent. interest on the daily balances in other banks. He also admitted that the Temple State banking laws. He explained stockholder, loaned him money in excess of its capital stock and surplus which was in violation of the State banking laws. He explained the charge that he had used $5600 of State money which was in the Temple State Bank to his credit as Governor, by saying that this money was taken out of that account without his knowledge. It developed that the sum was not repaid for something like a year afterwards.

Excerpts from the Governor's testimony indicate the trend of the examination and throw light upon the charges that were made against him and many of which were corroborated by witnesses that were examined on behalf of the prosecution.

"You stated," said Mr. Crane, "that political agitation of your private affairs had brought you to the verge of bankruptcy and that you secured money to meet your obligations. From whom did you obtain that money?"

"I got the money at a time when it meant bankruptcy if I didn't get it," replied the Governor.

"Bankers had refused to let me have it, not because the security I had to offer was not all right, but on account of the unpleasant notoriety which my private affairs had received by reason of political agitation of them. And there I was with a good stake, and one which I had worked a lifetime to accumulate, about to be sacrificed because I could not get a reasonable accommodation.

FRIENDS ADVANCED MONEY.

"I went to my friends and told them of my condition. They did not want to be subjected to the harassment, and they said, 'You must give us your word that you will not let us be known in this transaction,' and if the price of the Governor's office must be that I disclose the names of my friends who let me have this money, and submit myself again to the dangers of bankruptcy, then I must suffer and I will pay the price. I cannot disclose their names—with all due respect to this committee."

"We shall pass that for the present," said Mr. Crane.

"Where was the money paid?" asked Mr. Crane.

"Here and in Temple—$65,000 here and $35,000 in Temple."

"Most of it during the month of April last?"

"I don't recall."

"Was it paid in currency?"

"Yes."

"Why in currency?"

"Because the parties loaning the money did not want to be known in the transaction."

"You deposited $50,000 between the 22nd and the 27th of April. Was the remainder deposited before or after that?"

"I don't know."

"You decline to answer from whom you got $150,000 in currency. How many different parties paid it to you?"

"I won't say."

"You won't say who they were, or where they live?"

"No."

"Were there more than one?"

"I refuse to answer."

"I can tell you this much," proceeded the witness, "and it is suggested by so much whispering around that I did not get it from anybody who wanted a school located at any particular place."

"Did you give any security?"

"Everything in the world I have is behind it."

"In the form of a mortgage?" asked Mr. Crane.

The witness refused to answer this, and declared that a man's private affairs should be protected from being dragged out in public, and he said that they were protected under the bill of rights.

"We will pass that now," said Mr. Crane.

TROUBLE AT UNIVERSITY.

The witness was then questioned by Mr. Crane as to the trouble with the university, and practically the same ground was covered as has heretofore been many times rehearsed during the investigation.

In reference to this effort to bring about the removal of Dr. R. E. Vinson, president of the university, this testimony is taken from that of the Governor:

"You think Dr. Vinson not big enough for the job?" asked Mr. Crane.

"Didn't you consider him a big enough man for the presidency of the university the day you heard his testimony before this committee?"

"No," replied the Governor, "I've seen grand-stand players before."

"He was telling this committee," said the witness, "about the wonderful work the university girls were doing this summer teaching women over the State how to can fruit. I want to say right here that I will give a scholarship for two poor girls in the university if Dr. Vinson can find five society girls in the university that can can a bushel of peaches so they will keep for sixty days."

"I'll take that up with Dr. Vinson," said Mr. Crane.

"And I think you will find yourself 'on,' as the saying goes."

The Governor reiterated his belief that too much money was being spent for higher education, and that he believed in popular education for the masses and not higher education for the aristocratic few. He said that Representative George C. Peddy sounded the keynote of the whole affair when he spoke at the university, being cheered to the echo, when he said that the trouble was started when the Governor got up the rural school bill. Asked if he did not know that Peddy supported the rural school bill in the House, he replied that he did not know.

The Governor again criticised the university for having one teacher, as he said, to every eight students. Asked by Mr. Crane if the University of Texas did not have fewer instructors per pupil than any other university of the first class in the country, he said he did not know, but that, if so, it didn't make it right; that a country school teacher taught thirty or forty pupils.

"You will put your judgment on this matter against all the universities of America and Europe, will you?"

"Yes, I will stand or fall by that," said the witness.

HEAVILY IN DEBT.

In the matter of his personal indebtedness, including overdrafts, notes and other obligations to the Temple State Bank, it was shown in cross-examination that these amounted to practically $155,000 in June, 1917.

Mr. Crane asked if the witness was familiar with the law which forbids anyone becoming indebted to a bank more than 25 per cent. of its capital stock and surplus and the witness replied that he was.

"But you borrowed from the Temple State Bank more than its entire capital and surplus?"

"Yes sir, and paid it."

"And did not the bank examiners complain of your overline of credit at this bank?"

"They may have complained to the Banking Commissioner, but not to me and I want to say right here that there is one bank in Dallas guilty of twenty-seven violations of this same law. Your bank (addressing Mr. Crane,) has committed perjury on this very point."

"That is denied," said Mr. Crane.

"Did you not hire private counsel to prosecute an Amarillo bank on this charge?"

"I do not remember."

"Did you not in March, 1915, wire A. D. Martin to know if he would take that case for $250, to which he replied that he would take the case for $250?"

"Yes, I arranged his employment."

Questioned as to whether it was right to violate the law in this manner, the witness replied that a strict enforcement of the statute would put every banker in the State in the penitentiary, and that the business of the country could not be carried on without violating this law. Asked why he had put his indebtedness in the form of notes signed by John H. Davis, Jr., Alva Ferguson and the Bell-Bosque ranch the witness stated that he thought it was better to put it in that form.

The Governor denied that his loan of $500 to Speaker F. O. Fuller, which was made a few weeks ago, was for the purpose of influencing Mr. Fuller in any of his official acts. He also testified that the selection of Abilene as a site for the West Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College was regularly done. He claimed that his action in remitting a bond forfeiture judgment of $5000 against Wilbur P. Allen, chairman of the Board of Regents of the University, was not for the purpose of influencing Mr. Allen's acts as a member of that board.

SIMPLE RULES FOR DESCENDING GRADES.

In driving down steep grades various resistances may be utilized to keep the car under control. If the engine is kept running and the gears are in high, there is only slight resistance. This may be increased by shifting into second speed and further increased by shifting into first. When still further resistance is needed to maintain a check on the progress of the car and it is not desired to use the brakes, the ignition may be shut off and the throttle closed. By opening the throttle the resistance is still further increased. The maximum of resistance and the best control on a dangerously steep hill may be obtained by shifting into first, switching off the ignition and applying the brakes at intervals.

LOOSE RIMS SOON WEAR OUT TIRES.

It is generally understood nowadays that wheels which are out of alignment cause undue tire wear. Few owners, however, realize that rims which are loose or otherwise improperly mounted will have the same effect of causing excessively rapid tread wear. A loose rim generally makes its presence known by a clicking or squeaking sound. This is not always so, for occasionally a small stone or some sand may get in between the rim and felloe so as to prevent noise. The rim appears to be tight but in reality is running out of alignment and wearing out the tire.

RIM EXPANDER.

In the absence of a conventional rim expander, diagonally split rims may be spread by means of the lifting jack and two blocks of wood.

HOW RUMANIA GREETED SCOTT.

American General Received at Temporary Capital.

No Headway in Kingdom Made by German Agitators.

Aid of United States Greatly Needed in the War.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

JASSY (Rumania) July 21.—Rumania, all that is left of the little kingdom, two-thirds of which lies under the Prussian heel, gave Maj.-Gen. Hugh L. Scott, the American Chief of Staff and member of the American mission to Russia, a royal welcome when he and his aides visited this little provincial city in Moldavia, which has been converted into an improvised capital.

The King and Queen, all the members of the council, the chief of staff and the entire Parliament joined in greeting Gen. Scott, who carried a message from former United States Senator Elihu Root extending the sympathy of the American diplomatic mission and all the American people to brave little Rumania, which has never complained, never talked of separate peace in spite of the loss of her most fertile lands to the Austrians and Germans and the hardships 4,000,000 of her people are enduring under German oppression.

Queen Marie and King Ferdinand entertained the American general and his party at luncheon in the simple residence which serves as the imperial home of the war capital. The Queen wore a white nurse's costume, with a red cross on her breast and the white veil all the Rumanian nurses use as a headdress when on active service. Similar costumes were worn by her two daughters, the attractive young Princesses. King Ferdinand wore the fatigue uniform of a general officer and his son, the 12-year-old Prince, was dressed in a Boy Scout's suit.

PLENTY OF SUPPLIES.

The drawing-room in which the royal family received the American officers was stacked high with Red Cross supplies. There were evidences everywhere of war preparations. News of the successful Russian advance at Tarnopol two days before had relieved anxiety as to conditions along the Russian front and the imperial family showed the same eagerness to resume hostilities that is displayed by every Rumanian peasant.

German propagandists have made no headway in Rumania. The little country has been greatly encouraged by America's entrance into the war and awaits American material aid for the trained and experienced army of nearly 250,000 men who are keen for revenge and eager to strike.

The Rumanian Parliament greeted the American representatives in a small theater which serves as the seat of the legislative body. Premier Bratiano, Take Jonescu, leader of the Conservative party; F. Porumbaro, president of the Senate, and many other leaders delivered addresses of welcome in which they affirmed Rumania's intention to defend its rights and continue the war as long as a single man is able to fight.

The representatives of the American mission, the American charge, Mr. Jackson, and Rumanian speakers were seated on the stage of the theater, which was elaborately decorated with flags of all the Allies. The members of Parliament and representatives of various military and civil organizations crowded the auditorium of the theater.

BRATIANO'S STATEMENT.

"Your presence is a manifestation of the brotherhood of arms which makes us happy and proud in the midst of our trials and suffering, in the unequal struggle with an enemy which has set back for many centuries the conception of relations between belligerents," said M. Bratiano. "Rumania upholds the justice of its position and will not alter its decision at any cost. That decision cannot find stronger encouragement than the participation in this struggle of the moral and material forces of the great republic of the new world which places its ceaseless energy, its high character, its justice and its American genius at the service of humanity. This participation is a guarantee of final peace, a fountain of peaceful progress.

"Rumania will find in the principles of justice and liberty the conditions necessary for its legitimate developments, thanks to the union of the Rumanian people up to this time cruelly oppressed by Austria-Hungary and prevented from enjoying national life in conformity with their own civilization, aspirations and interests.

"Our actual association in arms, the dangers which we face together, the great duty, for the accomplishment of which we shall contribute each according to his means, will establish between us and the great republic a bond of greater value than we can estimate, for it will constitute between our countries an undying friendship which peace will strengthen and develop."

Gen. Scott's reply to the welcome of the Rumanian leaders was frequently interrupted by applause. The American officer spoke in English and his address was translated into French by Col. T. B. Mott.

SCOTT'S REPLY.

After thanking the Rumanians for the cordial reception extended to the American delegation, Gen. Scott said:

"We have come with a message from the other side of the ocean, to assure you of American brotherhood. America admires you profoundly and has high regard for the courage with which you have endured the recent trying months. We realize in America, all of us, the danger which threatens you and us. We have no financial nor commercial aim. We enter this war to maintain right and justice.

"America intends to stand by your side, and by the side of all our Allies, until the end, and extends to you its most profound sympathy. She desires to aid you in every way. We have received from your Ministers and officers a statement of your most urgent military necessities. Our mission will insist with all its strength that your requests be granted. We are happy to find you so courageous and determined. We go to battle with you on all fronts, until the time when the liberties of all nations, small as well as large, shall be safeguarded."

Gen. Scott and his party, which consisted of Cols. R. E. L. Michie and W. V. Judson and Lieut.-Col. F. L. Parker and T. B. Mott, were entertained while in Jassy at the Palace of the archbishop. They were able to remain only one day because of the necessity for their immediate return to Petrograd to join the American mission on its homeward trip.

War Aid.

HOSPITAL SUPPLIES NEEDED IN RUSSIA.

RED CROSS EXPERT REPORTS CONDITIONS ABROAD.

Tetanus Antitoxin and Powdered Opium Needed to Relieve Wounded Soldiers—Slav Surgical Experts Make Most of Facilities at Hand.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PETROGRAD, Aug. 20.—An estimate of the situation in Russia was made today by Dr. Frank Billings of Chicago, one of the leaders of the American Red Cross experts, after a fortnight's observation in Petrograd since the American Red Cross mission arrived here.

"The new government is facing the present crisis with clearness of vision and sincerity of purpose, which, since the formation of the Ministry less than two weeks ago has not failed in confidence," Dr. Billings said. "While the seriousness of the situation is manifest, there is every reason to hope that the present government will be strengthened by the full confidence of the Russian people for the great task before it."

Dr. Billings, W. B. Thompson and other members of the mission, have lost no time in getting under way the organization of the work for which they were sent to Russia. Already they have established a big working headquarters in the Hotel d' Europe and a supply house in Moscow. They also have met and conferred with heads of the government from whom they report most hearty co-operation. For the technical skill and proficiency of Russian physicians and surgeons, Dr. Billings expressed great admiration, while the hospitals, he said, were "run as well as any in the world. He especially commended the inventive genius of the Russian surgeons. The members of the commission expect to visit Moscow during the coming week.

"The mission has been most cordially received by the provisional government," said Dr. Billings. "We now are in active co-operation with the sanitary department of the army and with the Russian Red Cross and are about to get into touch with the Zemstvos and unions, these organizations comprising the great relief organizations of the people.

"While these organizations have exhausted every effort in the manufacture of supplies and are doing excellent work otherwise, we found the armies in great need of medical and surgical supplies which are vitally necessary for the care of the wounded. Tetanus antitoxin, powdered opium and many other things are not to be had in adequate quantities in Russia. We are studying these requirements and with the co-operation of the war council and the Red Cross at Washington the most vital of these needs will be met at once.

"We have been deeply impressed by the members of the provisional government whom we have met. We feel that we have the support of the government, and with adequate assistance from home we will be able to render great service to the Russian people."

All the members of the commission are in excellent health.

RUMANIAN QUEEN THANKS MRS. MORRIS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

STOCKHOLM, July 30.—Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, wife of the American Minister here, has received a grateful autograph letter from Queen Mary of Rumania, thanking her for a quantity of bandages sent by Mrs. Morris. Queen Mary, who writes from Jassy, gives a list of things particularly needed for the army. It includes linen of all sorts, nightshirts, bedclothing, thick dressing-gowns, slippers, towels, handkerchiefs, soap, stockings and boots. She concludes:

"Oh! There are so many things we need. I am quite afraid when I begin to count them. We have suffered much, struggled much, but we have had courage and now many hands are stretched out to help and to make hope live in our hearts again."

WANTS DEFENSE LOAN FOR NETHERLANDS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

THE HAGUE (Netherlands) July 30.—A loan of £400,000,000 from America for the defense and equipment of the Netherlands East Indies is advocated by a writer in the Indian native paper, Kaoem Moeda. He deduces from an exchange of views between American and Dutch Chambers of Commerce in 1913 that the United States was willing to finance a Netherlands East Indian loan if the country were in a good state of defense, and suggests that half the loan in question would suffice to establish the projected native conscript army and that the other half might be devoted to economic improvements.

On the basis of a 5 per cent. rate of interest, the service of the loan would require £20,000,000 annually, which sum, he says, is produced by the natives in taxes.

GERMANS CONTINUE DEPORTATIONS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

ROTTERDAM (Netherlands) July 30.—The seeming contradiction between the news of continued deportations in Belgium, and German declarations that no deportations to Germany have taken place since February, last, apparently is to be explained by the fact that deported Belgians are now being sent to work behind the lines on the western front, in the repair of roads, the laying of railroads and construction of works of defence. Instead of the former economic pretext, military grounds are put forward to justify these measures.

The fresh deportations began in the region of Luxemburg and Hainault, according to a correspondent of the Nieuwe Rotterdam Courant. In the former case the entire male population was transported to the neighborhood of the front in northern France. The social standing of the men was not considered. This seems to be the case at other places, too. People in Belgium fear these fresh deportations will be increased.

GERMANS PERMIT IMPORT OF BULBS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

THE HAGUE (Netherlands) July 30.—The German government has agreed to permit the import of Dutch bulbs to a value of 1,500,000 marks, on condition that buyers shall make their remittances to a German bank, and that the sellers shall not draw the cash until six months after the raising of the state of siege in Germany. The bulb-growing industry is in a very unenviable position, for an absolute import prohibition has been put in force by Great Britain and Austria, two other good customers.

FOOL TAXATION, "SOFT DRINK."

Free American Commonwealths Repeating the Fatal Economic Errors of Feudal Autocracies.

BY H. E. BARNARD,
State Food Commissioner of Indiana.

UNLESS the legislators of the numerous commonwealths now classed, and in the future to be classed as "dry" States happen, by some auspicious combination of good fortune and good judgment, to experience a radical change of heart in the matter of taxation, this free democracy appears to be fated to pass through a repetition of the fatal economic errors which were the favorite diversion of feudal systems in Europe whenever they needed money.

The instinct of every individual endowed with powers of taxation is to load the taxes on those necessities which are most commonly in use, with disregard of the attendant circumstance that the commonest necessity is demonstrated by that very fact to be the necessity most nearly indispensable. So France laid its salt gabelle, in ignorance of the fundamental need of humanity for salt ad lib, if the blood supply is to remain lively and limpid. The hideous excesses of the French revolution, in large measure, were tortured humanity's revenge upon its bloodsuckers. So continental Europe taxed God's sunlight by charging people according to the number of their windows, and tuberculosis took return tolls in death.

We have now twenty-six "bone-dry" States, and after 1918 there will be several more. All of the "dry" States have felt keenly the loss of revenue occasioned by the closing of their breweries and saloons. In many of these commonwealths, especially in the South, it has been the practice of the legislatures to attempt to keep the State treasury solvent by imposing heavy license taxes on the soft-drink "parlors," so that today it is not possible to obtain in many parts of the country a glass of grape juice or a lemon soda without paying, at least indirectly, a substantial tax to State or municipality.

Obviously there is no more logical reason for this form of taxation than there would be for imposing a tax on the milkman or baker. The sole shadow of precedent is that, previously, the State asserted the right to tax one thing invested in liquid form and now taxes another. The sole warrantee of right it advances is the ancient and purely feudal allegation that it needs the money.

The fundamental error made by all these rule-of-thumb legislators is identical with that made by the salt and window taxers of ignorant Europe; they do not comprehend in the least that the universal craving for "soft drinks" augurs an equally universal need, a need comparable to man's need of sunlight and salt.

"Soft drinks" satisfy a genuine need in that they supply food to the human economy in palatable form. The familiar bottle of soda contains a certain quantity of sugar, which is a most valuable food. It constitutes a mild yet definitely stimulating factor. There is every reason for a man to betake himself to the soda fountain when he feels "played out"—every need for him to do so when the thermometer lingers around 100 degrees—and refresh himself with grape juice or any other mild beverage that appeals to his palate.

There is now a national duty of recognizing the great value of sugar as a stimulant, and of realizing that it makes no difference to the human organism whether the sugar is taken in the lump form, as a chocolate drop, or in a bottle of soda water. We need only look abroad, to the battlefields of Europe, to see sugar holding a place of honor with all armies for restoration of the soldiery under the most exhausting strains.

Science does not urge, in connection with the soda fountain, the economic error of paying 5 or 10 cents for 1 cent's worth of sugar. But there is, in connection with the nutrition furnished—and the popular willingness to pay the price demonstrates it—a thirst-quenching property inherent in these "soft drinks" which has a distinct value for the human economy. In England the people have indulged extensively in fruit juices, such as raspberry shrub, for years, while England's bottled beverages on the order of ginger ale have an international reputation.

Here, with the passing of alcoholic beverages, the use of the expressed, natural fruit juices and of other nonalcoholic drinks is increasing very rapidly. The old-fashioned cider, pressed at the neighboring mill and stored in barrels, has been succeeded by apple juice made from sound fruit, carbonated, bottled under pressure, and pasteurized. Such cider has all the properties of freshly expressed apple juice, and, in addition, the effervescent quality of champagne.

Already many breweries are bottling apple cider with profits as great for themselves and with satisfaction for the consumer as ample as attended the brewing of beer. One Spokane brewer, whose plant was closed for two years, told me he made 400,000 gallons of the cidar last year and intends to double that output this year. The proprietor of what was formerly a brewery in Indiana states that he is making larger General.

There are three important incients mentioned in this fine record, hich took place during Gen. Otis's erm of service, in two wars, show-ng his intense patriotism and love or country.
First, he enlisted at the commencement of the war, as a private n the Twelfth Regiment, Ohio Volnteers Infantry, and served hroughout the entire war as private, ergeant, second lieutenant, first ieutenant and captain. He was twice revetted by the President, major nd lieutenant - colonel, for gallant nd meritorious services during the ar.
Second, the most remarkable vent during his term of service was his—that on June 23, 1861, he enisted as a private, was promoted to ergeant, and did not receive his irst commission as second lieuten-nt until November 12, 1862—hav-ng served in the ranks of his regient, carrying his musket on the iring line, one year, four months nd twenty days. It was in the front, n this same firing line, that Sergt.
Otis was wounded in the most loody single day's battle of the war
—Antietam, September 17, 1862.
Third, thirty-three years after he War of the Rebellion had losed, our country was again at ar, this time with Spain in 1898.
lthough Gen. Otis had passed the ge of three score years, he ten-ered his services to his country and hey were accepted. He was made rigadier-general of volunteers on ay 27, 1898, and brevetted majoreneral of volunteers on March 25,
899, for meritorious conduct at the Battle of Caloocan, Philippine slands, and honorably discharged n July 2, 1899.
This grand record of Gen. Harri-on Gray Otis, as a soldier, I know annot be duplicated in the Hisorical Register and Dictionary of he United States Army.
The following editorial is taken rom the New York Herald, August
, 1917:
"Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, whose eath in Los Angeles is announced, as known throughout the United States as an editor of great force nd originality, qualities which ere reflected in every column of his newspaper, The Times, one of he best in the United States. But this great journalist and political ighter was also a real warrior, and it is a question whether his fame as soldier was not as great as his fame as an editor."
I will answer this. His fame was great in both. In the War of the Rebellion and our war with Spain, as soldier he fought fearlessly and ell against his enemies, who were arriors, like himself.
In times of comparative peace, as n editor he fought better, harder, t great odds and still greater risks, gainst his enemies who were con-
pirators and assassins.
My tribute to him, my dear friend nd companion in arms, of the Ninth Army Corps, Army of the Po-omac, I give in but a score of ords, no more, no less:
His dominating spirit for justice, atriotism and love for country won or him imperishable fame by hon-here are exceptions to the rule; ut, generally speaking, farmers do ot store the food commodities hich they have grown, but send hem to mrket as soon as they ave harvested and sell at the pre-ailing price.

It is this rush to the markets of oods, following the harvests, that ives the food speculator his chance o buy and store for the rise in price hat is practically certain to come ater. Last winter city consumers ere obliged to pay more for a half eck of potatoes than the farmer ollected for a bushel of potatoes n 1915. Other nonperishable food roducts were advanced in retail rice proportionately. The farmer ad sold out—the food speculator ad the goods and doled out supplies t an advance based upon what he consumer would bear, and the onsumer was just obliged to bear ny price which the food holders

Soon there is going to be shunted

GRAND DUKE TELLS THE INSIDE HISTORY OF THE CZAR'S FALL.

Nobleman Relates How He Himself Became a Revolutionist and Plotted Against the Dynasty and the Control of the Czarina, who was Swayed by "Spirits," Including That of the Slain Rasputin.

BY GRAND DUKE PAUL ALEXANDROVITCH,
Son of Czar Alexander II and Uncle of Czar Nicholas II.

I HAVE steadfastly refused to comply with the wishes of my near and dear friends to relate the events leading to the revolution and after. The story awakens in me very unpleasant memories — memories that I shall carry to my grave with a heavy heart. For how can a patriot son of the fatherland remember the prerevolution days without becoming sick at heart? And who can tell the story of the Russian revolution without mentioning that beast who went under the name of Rasputin? However, I must mention his name, for who can write the story of the Russian revolution without alluding to him?

For years I have been the patient recipient of many insults at the hands of my royal relatives and their satellites, who were mostly men and women of social degeneracy. My nephew, Czar Nicholas II, was one of the principal persecutors of myself and my family. My marriage to my present wife, the Countess of Paeli, was a sin that my royal brother was unwilling to forgive. I had inured myself to the royal insults when another misfortune visited me.

Rasputin was murdered at the palace of Yussufov on the 17th day of December, 1916, and two days later, on the 19th, my son Dmitri was arrested in his own palace as one of the murderers. My son's arrest was not ordered by ny nephew, the Czar; it was ordered after a court meeting in which Protopopov and the Czarina took part. My son Dmitri was prohibited from communicating the news of his arrest to my wife, but, nevertheless, succeeded in getting into telephonic communication with her. The time was stolen and his words over the telephone were few. "I am under arrest for the murder of Rasputin. I swear to you on my honor, mother, that I am innocent of the murder!"

DOORKEEPER GENERALS.

Early the following morning, the 20th, I reached Petrograd and at once went to the royal palace and demanded to see the Czar. One can imagine the degree of my resentment when one of the doorkeeper court generals made a serious attempt to stop me from seeing him. I, the son of Alexander the Second, blocked from seeing my nephew, and by a man who was only yesterday imported from the Courtland Province, and who can hardly speak the language of the fatherland! He informed me with supreme arrogance that no one could be admitted to the palace without a special "permit" from Protopopov. I was never so resentful in my life. I was about to give way to my anger, but in the last second I succeeded in mastering myself. I produced my loaded revolver, and, assuming almost the role of an actor, I said to him:

"My dear 'Herr,' this is the only 'permit' I have on my person."

If that doorkeeper court general was not shot dead through the heart it was not because of the fact that I was the more prudent.

At every corridor entrance I encountered such doorkeeper court generals, until I reached the large divan room, where I found my nephew with the Czarina. The Czarina greeted me with an angry glance that almost gave words to her thoughts. I felt that I heard her say: "How did you get here? My guards shall be punished for having disregarded my orders and allowing you to enter the royal palace." My nephew stood up and greeted me with kindness due to his royal uncle. The Czarina, however, maintained a sullen and insulting attitude. Once more I nearly lost my temper, and again producing my loaded revolver, I bowed with exaggerated courtesy.

"Madame, truly your servants are faithful, but a loaded revolver is like a bewitching feminine beauty; it has great powers of persuasion."

SCORNED BY CZARINA.

The Czarina became full of resentment at this obvious insult; she got up deliberately, cast at me several studiously hateful glances and left the room, holding her head erect and taking slow steps. The Czar watched her with apparent concern, but as soon as she disappeared, addressing me with a smile on his lips, he said:

"Now that the little theatrical is ended, what are the wishes of friend Paul?"

"You must tell me why Dmitri was arrested," I said. I was amazed when he told me coolly that my son, his own favorite cousin, was arrested for the murder of Rasputin.

I grabbed him by the shoulders and, shaking him like a 10-year-old child, I almost shouted at him: "He is innocent; I wear to you by my honor, Dmitri is innocent of murder. You shall liberate him at once."

"Very well, friend Paul, I shall order his release at once; you shall have Dmitri with you tomorrow," he said nervously.

The Czar had scarcely finished these words, which were addressed to me almost in a whisper, when the Czarina re-entered the room. She no doubt had heard my demands addressed to my nephew regarding the immediate release of my son, but she had not heard the Czar's answer.

I was about to take leave of my nephew—I had bowed to the Czarina silently—when she addressed me sharply.

"Uncle Paul, your recent intimate relationship with a certain element at Petrograd and elsewhere has repeatedly been called to my attention. Your hospitality to the elements who are plotting against our dynasty indicates ill of you—."

I could not understand such an impudent speech from a foreign princess. I was almost wild.

"Halt, madame!" I shouted so loudly that the Czarina stopped in the middle of her sentence. I then bowed to my nephew, and addressing her I said with a cutting tone: "The son of Alexander the Second was taught to regard the fatherland more sacred than the dynasty."

The Czar was displeased with my remarks addressed to the Czarina. He knew that these words were really meant for him. He was about to say something when I again said to the Czarina: "Alexandra Feodorovna, somewhere in the Old Testament there is an incident in which allusion is made to a certain handwriting on the wall. I have grave concern for the fatherland, but little thought of the safety of the dynasty."

CZAR AFFECTED.

These words had an obvious affect on my nephew, the Czar. He dropped in his chair and murmured some words which I was unable to distinguish. As I left the royal presence the Czarina fell in a raving fit. She was wringing her hands, walking back and forth and saying between her tightly-closed teeth: "Treason, treason, treason!"

On the following morning I received this letter from the Czar:

"My dear friend Paul: The investigation of the murder is not yet completed. For that reason I am unable to order Dmitri's release. I have already given explicit orders that the investigations regarding the murder be hurried up and that Dmitri be accorded special instructions. All these are sad events, but you must admit, dear friend Paul, that he himself should be blamed for having mixed up in such a venture with such companions. I pray to God that Dmitri will be found honest and innocent of such a crime."

On receiving the Czar's letter I decided to make a personal investigation leading to the circumstances of the murder. My son Vladimer, who is a close friend of Yussupov—in whose house Rasputin was murdered—and several other persons who had witnessed the killing of the imposter, informed me that the council that propounded sentence of execution had met in the ambulance train at Pureschkevitch, and the execution took place soon afterwards. I also learned that my son Dmitri had taken part in the deliberations of the council, but he had nothing to do with the actual murder of Rasputin.

On the 22nd day of December my son Dmitri sought an interview with the Czar, but was refused an audience. On the 23rd he telephoned again, in his stolen moments, and his voice came to my anxious ears. He said: "Father, Gen. Maximovitch was just here to inform me that this very evening I am to start for Persia. Come and meet me at the station."

I felt as though a huge hammer had struck me on the head with a terrible blow. It is only those who understand the father's affection toward a son who can truly understand my heavy grief. How helpless and grief-laden I felt! I was half-crazed. I started for the palace without my hat and fur coat. At the palace gate I encountered a group of the Czar's own bodyguards. I was promptly informed that the Czar had given special orders not to allow me to his presence, and not even to the interior of the palace. I was turned away like a beggar. They treated me like a criminal and spoke to me as though I were a court fool. And on that very night, within three or four hours, my son Dmitri was exiled to Persia. He would be murdered on the way! They would provoke him to desperation. They would shoot him for attempting to escape! How these thoughts tortured my mind.

DMITRI TO EXILE.

I met him at the station. He was without a fur coat. They had taken away his regimental stripes. They were treating him like a criminal who was tried and found guilty. Mme. Derfelder, the daughter of my wife, was among those who had come to bid him farewell. My tears were frozen on my eyeglasses. I removed them, and was wiping my eyes when Dmitri said to me, "Father, I am really ashamed of your conduct. Remember, these exile scenes are Russian. Many others have gone before me. Why should we complain when Dmitri's turn comes?"

I gathered strength and courage from these words. His words still resound in my ears, and at the thought of them I shout every time: "Long live free Russia!"

"Father do not try to stop Dmitri from going into exile. Let us try to stop these exile scenes." These were the last words he uttered as he kissed my hands from the train window.

Until this hour and during the last three or four years I have had revolutionary inclinations, but from this moment I became a fanatical revolutionist.

I remember a few days afterwards when I announced at a meeting of radical friends in my house that in order to safeguard the fatherland the Romanoffs must go, my hearers looked at each other in dazed amazement. Had I lost my senses, or was I an agent provocateur? I fully understand now the spirit of the revolutionist fanatic. He first becomes a revolutionary. Then he becomes a revolutionist. He really forgets how it all came about. He becomes so excited and agitated that he does not remember the origin of his first transformation.

From that hour I forgot all thought of my Dmitri. And the stupid Protopopov regime did its best to make me a thorough revolutionist. They further persecuted me. The regime ordered a thorough search made of my house. Vulgar secret police ransacked everything in my house; searched every nook and corner, threw the contents of the closets belonging to my wife and daughter on the floor. And, angered at not finding anything that justified their rudely conducted search, they put my step-daughter under arrest. These things could no longer affect me. Like exile scenes, these domiciliary searches had long ago become a Russian institution.

RASPUTIN'S SPIRIT INVOKED.

Later I learned from an authoritive source that this search had been decided upon after a spiritualist meeting of the court circle, which had taken place under the auspices of the Czarina and Protopopov, in which the spirit of Rasputin was invoked for light, and directed that my house be searched and the floors be removed. The spirit had told the circle that such a search would uncover a deep-rooted plot to remove the Romanoffs from the throne forever. However, I must remark that the spirit was quite accurate in its prophesy this time, if it is true that he directed the regime to undertake such a search of my house. It was well known to the Czarina herself, to the Czar and also to the Protopopov regime that I was in full sympathy with ending the Romanoff dynasty. Men of well-known revolutionary faith were frequenting my house. Many Radical and Socialist members of the Duma had gathered under my roof, and these facts were well known to the royal circle and the regime. But what they wished to find was documentary evidence in order to exile me to the east. At first they could not obtain the Czar's consent to have my house searched and my step-daughter arrested. This they were able to do only through the spirit of Rasputin, in whose divinity the Czar believed inplicitly. Both my nephew and his wife, Alexandra Feodorovna, were devout believers in the saintliness of the impostor. But I know that Protopopov was not sincere in his belief, but used Rasputin for the purpose of influencing the royal couple to do his bidding.

After many attempts, I succeeded in inducing Protopopov to receive Mme. Derfelder, my step-daughter. My intention in securing this interview with Protopopov with my step-daughter was to learn to what extent he was interested in punishing those who were accused of Rasputin's murder, and the degree of his influence over the Czar and the Czarina. I had made valuable discoveries that made me firmly believe that the Protopopov regime was distinctly pro-German.

ACCUSED OF MURDER.

No sooner had my step-daughter entered the room when Protopopov heaped abuse on her, accusing her of being implicated in the murder of the imposter. He even accused her of plotting his own murder. He told her that the reason he so long refused to receive her was that he feared that she would shoot him at the first opportunity.

On the following morning I again succeeded in seeing the Czar. I sought him for the purpose of telling him that the country was dangerously restless and that the Rasputin influence in the court circle was being used throughout the empire to incite the unthinking people into violence against the very persons of the Czar and the Czarina. On this occasion I was with the Czar alone more than four hours, trying to prevail upon him to separate himself from the Czarina, as she had already become dangerously unpopular in the eyes of the people.

After these many hours of urgent attempts to pursuade the Czar to loosen himself from the spiritualistic fallacy of the court circle the Czar told me that he cared very little what the people thought. "I put my trust in God," he said sternly. I pitied him sincerely, not because he had put his trust in God, but for foolishly thinking that God would tolerate Rasputin and his kind.

Then the Czar held a reception to which I was not invited. I attended the reception nevertheless. I had become a revolutionist, and as to a revolutionist such a light disregard of court etiquette is a matter of small consideration. I found my nephew very amiable towards me. He told me that he was seriously considering to order Dmitri's return from Persia. I told him that neither Dmitri nor I any longer cared whether or not he is recalled from exile. I told him I had concern for other things that are more important than a dozen Dmitris. That night for the first time it came to my observation that the Czar had aged out of proportion to his years. He appeared unhappy. And, more than that, he looked friendless. All the grand dukes and other royal princes were aware of the swiftly approaching catastrophe. He had become a man deaf and blind to all signals. How I pitied him!

I was about to ask him for another audience at which I wished to urge to his attention the coming danger more forcefully, when M. Protopopov approached the Czar. On seeing his approach I was about to step aside in order to avoid him when the Czar touched my elbow and requested me to stay. After a few remarks by the Czar Protopopov said to him: "Your Majesty, yesterday I had a visit from a very pretty young woman. She had come for the purpose of murdering me. I at once divined her evil purpose. I reasoned with her, meanwhile showing such a good spirit that finally she broke down and confessed to me her original evil errand. And finally we parted as good friends. Can you imagine who that woman was—Madame Derfeldon."

Protopopov's false statement to the Czar right in my presence regarding my step-daughter was a direct insult, and the remark was made with that motive. Protopopov's purpose was to enrage me so that I would strike him in the presence of the Czar; that would have banished me from an audience with him forever!

PRIME MINISTER LIES.

I looked at Protopopov with a glance that he no doubt understood: "You have just related a great untruth."

I was about to depart once more when I heard the Czar say to his Minister, "May God, our great protector, grant you long and happy life in order that you may be useful to our dear country as you have in the past." As the Czar said these words he made the sign of the cross several times and bowed respectfully.

February 27, Russian time, February 14, the day set for the opening of the Duma, was the first day on which the higher court circle scented trouble in the air. The 28th made things much clearer. On the afternoon of February 28 the Czarina sent for me. On reaching the palace I was ushered into her presence hurriedly.

"Go at once to the front," she begged with tears in her eyes. "Try to bring the troops which are loyal to the dynasty to the capital. We must save the throne at whatever cost—the throne is in great danger."

I told her I was not at all interested in the welfare of the throne. To me the throne was worth as much as an old chair in the servants' apartments. I refused to call the troops, and told her in addition that it was useless to undertake such a thing, as those troops brought over from the front would at once join the revolution. I tried to explain to her that the revolution had already gone too far, and that the doom of the dynasty had been sealed. I admit that I did not have the courage to tell the Czarina then and there that, almost without exception, all the royal princes and grand dukes, also the Czar's own mother, were a party to the grand plot, and that the rough draft of the deposal of the Czar had our approval.

CZARINA BECOMES DESPERATE.

On the first day of March I was again called to the palace. This time I refused to go. In her desperation the Czarina sent me a messenger ordering me to present myself at the palace. I wrote on the back of the message, "No reply." My telephone bell rung furiously, but my secretary was firm—I was not at home for any call from the palace. At that very moment at a meeting of the Duma committee held at my own palace the manifesto was being prepared, granting a truly progressive constitution to the people of Russia.

Those were truly exciting hours. In a future date I may write more fully about what took place in my residence on that first day of March. The manifesto was prepared and approved by me. I then secured Grand Dukes Cyril's and Michael's signature to the sacred instrument that was to liberate the long-oppressed Russian people, and, after signing it myself, I took it to the Duma and handed it to Milyuko against his receipt.

I then had a copy of the manifesto struck, and at once took it to the royal palace to hand it to the Czarina personally. On seeing me the first question she asked of me was: "What must I do to appease the angry spirits?" I told her that the spirits must be left strictly alone when found angry. I admit my remark was rather cruel and unchivalrous, but I was feeling like a young child with a new toy. I was so happy that I could only be serious in my wonderment when I found others were not as happy as I was.

The Czarina then asked me: "Where is my husband? Is he alive?" I told her to sit down and calm herself and read the new constitution, which I handed to her. I told her that I had the assurance of the Czar's secretary that he, the Czar, would sign the instrument. The Czarina did not see anything objectionable in the constitution. She fully approved of it, and assured me that she would urge her husband to sign it. I left the copy with her and left the palace.

On the 3rd day of March (Russian time) I was again summoned to the royal palace by the Czarina. I had just finished reading in a newspaper the manifesto of abdication which was drafted earlier in the day also in my residence. It had been offered to the Czar for his signature. I took the newspaper along with me and went to the palace. When the Czarina entered the room I at once began to read it aloud for her hearing. I had scarcely finished the reading, when the Empress exclaimed in anger and with tears in her eyes: "Not one word of it do I believe. These are the inventions of vulgar newspapers. I do not believe it. I fear them not. I put my trust in God and in the army."

A PATHETIC EMPRESS.

It was pathetic. To me she was no longer the Czarina. Neither was she my powerful antagonist; not even the person who exiled my dear Dmitri to far-away Persia. She was a poor, defenseless woman. She was in despair and agony, and when she declared that she believed only in God and the army she said exactly what she did believe. Therefore, it was my duty to persuade her to the belief that both God and the army had great grievances of old against the House of Romanovs.

However, she would not be convinced. Wringing her hands, and in a temper mixed with fear and anger, she walked up and down the length of the room, crying like a helpless child, and pitifully begging me to rush to the front. Then accusing me of being one of the prime conspirators against the dynasty for the purpose of seizing the throne, either for myself or one of my sons, she worked herself into a swoon. For about ten or fifteen minutes not one word was exchanged between us. I watched her with a feeling akin to pity and a secret remorse. For a few seconds I was overcome with a feeling that is really impossible to explain. I, the son of Czar Alexander the Second, was in the strange role of conspirator to dethrone his grandson and my own nephew, Nicholas the Second! But just as suddenly I came out of this strange trance. The fatherland was in grave danger and my nephew had become a political imbecile. His wife, the Czarina, Alexandra Feodorovna, was ruling the empire just as though it was her own private nursery. The future Grand Duke and Grand Duchesses were also being tutored in the dread faith of a peculiarly fatalistic spiritualism that was at once vile, livid and degenerating. The Czar was in the sure clutches of this base court circle, from which his nearest and dearest blood relations were unsuccessful in separating him. His royal relatives had, during the last few months, repeatedly begged him to send the Czarina away, surround himself with responsible, sane and patriotic ministers, and rule the empire as became a strong constitutional ruler, but our urgent solicitations fell on deaf ears. Therefore, the day was inevitable. Yes, his own mother had fixed her approving signature to the manifesto of the Czar's abdication.

INVOKES THE SPIRITS.

The Czarina suddenly fell on her knees and invoked the spirits in a vocabulary that was not intelligent to me. At last, rising to her feet, she again importuned me to go to the front and bring back the royal troops. "Our army is faithful to us, the people are loyal to us; it is only a few murderers in the capital who are making all this trouble," she exclaimed again and again. The poor creature, she did not know what was going on, and what had been going on in the streets of Petrograd during the last few weeks and months!

I considered that she had to be disillusioned. I told her that I had been reliably informed that all the generals at the front had joined the revolution. The army would not return to the capital, and if it should return it would at once make a common cause with the revolutionaries. I also informed her that the abdication manifesto had the full approval of even the royal family. Then I appealed to her to be calm and for the good of the fatherland submit to the dictates of the people peacefully.

"Even if the army has deserted us I still believe and trust in God; He is on our side, He will safeguard the throne," she exclaimed again. I could not help admiring her sublime faith in God, but I was fully convinced that she should be disillusioned at once. I said:

"But, Madame, God has also joined the revolution!" I said this very seriously, for I sincerely believed that the Great God was on the side of the revolution, for the cause of the revolution was just, and God is always a party to any just cause. My last words induced her to become more submissive. But knowing her as I did I felt somewhat apprehensive of what she might attempt to do, and in doing it she might perhaps make blood run flowing through the streets of every Russian city. I suddenly decided to be cruel to her. I assumed an accusing attitude, and for nearly twenty minutes without interruption by her, I enumerated the thousand and one sins committed by her and her regime under the once sacred roof of the Romanovs. I reminded her that it was she and her unspeakably vile surroundings that had brought the fatherland to such dire straits. Then I asked her in a voice that could not be mistaken or misunderstood: "Then, madame, what God would stoop so low as to take sides with such a regime, yea, with such a court of dynasty?" After hearing these words she became subdued. As I left her I bade her farewell, but she made no reply.

Wherever possible the Rome government is urging the application of hydro-electric power to all industrial plants, it was explained. The electrification of railroads has been limited particularly to the commercial and industrial centers and to sections of flat country, the change being effected at such places at a reasonable cost. Coal is still used for moving trains in the mountainous areas. The utilization of water power for driving energy is being carried on throughout all Italy.

the German maneuvers with the same very object; but anyone who in them, and had the glimmer of the general idea maneuvers, must have been a if he credited that theory. 1908 to 1913, Germany was practising an offensive began with the embarkation and ended by the landing on a strange and hostile training of German navy men, admirals down to able seamen, to the end of an attack foreign country. Every of them has served in the marine for years, and it of every ship's company in the world has secrets certain to be some man who knows the entrance to as well as the way down the street in which his wife lives.

This is especially the case with the ports of Great Britain. The men of the German navy have been entering them all on merchant ships for years and years; they have been merchant sailors for an ultimate purpose, and to that purpose they have been ready to sacrifice anything and everything.

That is why we always used to smile when the Kaiser, or Von Koester, or Tirpitz spoke of the German navy as a necessary weapon of defense. The German sailor's idea of defense was to go out after the other fellow, and for long years he perfected himself in the knowledge of the best way to go.

I have myself been engaged in maneuvers when, from the general orders received beforehand, and the special duties allotted to certain men, we could make an accurate and unanimous guess at the portion of the British coast that was aimed at in theory.

BRITISH NAVY'S LESSON.

I mention these things because they bear very importantly on the hundreds of English invasion arguments I have heard. The pessimists would say, "We cannot invade England. The British navy has tested the possibilities, and always found them very remote. They know the difficulties from actual experience, for they covered the wonderful landing on Gallipoli."

It is worth remarking here that the German navy man has the highest admiration for the British navy man; and that experts set down the work of the British navy at Gallipoli as among its finest feats, whether at the landings or the evacuations.

The arguments of those who believe an invasion could be carried out are based on the fact that before the war the British army was not capable of testing any scheme, whether for defensive or offensive, and that the knowledge gained from such maneuvers is negligible.

"They were only undertaken to buck the British public," I have heard a man say, "and to make them believe that the British navy was quite sufficient to insure England against invasion. But we have tested our plans every way and spent years and hundreds of millions of marks in perfecting them. We ought to know."

As for the actual schemes of German invasion, I may recall the fact that the first one, which depended on the execution of the Kaiser's "six weeks to Paris" time table, was that of bridging the narrows.

Calais was to fall into the hands of Germany and a landing was to be forced under cover of the great guns, with a twenty-mile range, which were lying, all ready for the purpose, at Krupp's when the war began.

That cherished plan was tested at Stralsund in May, 1914, and I myself took part in the test. U-21, among a number of submarines and other small craft, was supposed to be resisting an attempt made to transport troops across to the Island of Rugan, under cover of enormously powerful guns.

The distance, the conditions and the idea were exactly what the Kaiser fondly hoped would result from the overrunning of France.

OLD SCHEME HOPELESS.

The French at the battle of the Marne, and the British at the two battles of Ypres, stood successfully between the Kaiser and Calais; and his twenty-mile guns are still waiting in Belgium.

Occasionally they turned upon Nieuport, but the time has gone by when any hope of their fulfilling the purpose for which they were cast can remain to the German Emperor.

The plan was a feasible one, all the same. We learned enough at Stralsund, in 1914, to declare that neither the British grand fleet, nor all the British submarines and mosquito fleet, could be certain of preventing a fleet of transports landing a German army in Kent under cover of the great guns at Calais.

When Calais became remote we at Kiel at once discerned all the signs of a reversion to an invasion plan tested at the naval maneuvers in September, 1911. Those tests also took place in the Baltic, where the fleet was more secure from observation than in the North Sea, and where the fiction of defensive trials of invasion plans could better be maintained.

An outline of these maneuvers is worth giving. The whole fleet of 200 war vessels took part, and over half a million of soldiers as well. The navy bases were the two ports of Travimunde and Swinemunde. The exact division of forces was, of course, hidden from all concerned; but the result could not be hidden from the navy.

In brief, an army of at least 200,000 men was embarked on transports, which operated from ports roughly corresponding to Emdem, Wilhelmshaven, Cuxhaven and Kiel.

As the British did at Gallipoli, the first landing force was conveyed to the landing points in the warships themselves. In the face of superior defending forces the landing was made, and, by the clever use of covering troops from the transport, was actually established.

TRIPS TO BRITISH COAST.

It was in the spring of 1915 that the idle merchant ships lying in the deserted harbor of Hamburg and Bremen were one by one fitted out as transports and slipped quietly away.

From that time forward the strangest movements of merchant ships in ballast began to be whispered; many of the stories told and some of the things I witnessed can only be explained under the assumption that the German high command was deliberately seeking to throw dust in the eyes of their own people.

Then began the dashes of sections of the German fleet for the British coast, and the hurried bombardments of places such at Yarmouth and Scarborough, which seemed to have annoyed the British people so much.

They were, of course, only trial trips, made with the object of seeing what naval forces could be drawn off by such skirmishing demonstrations. In the end, as will be remembered, the Germans were caught on one of these experimental dashes and made to pay dearly for their enterprise.

In the meantime the steady rehearsal of troops in the business of embarking and disembarking from transports was going forward on the Baltic coast.

In September, 1915, all was ready for a real trial, and I know that twice in that month a force of 70,000 men was embarked from the four ports I have mentioned—Kiel, Wilhelmshaven, Cuxhaven and Emden—and an invasion of England was actually attempted.

In each instance the flotillas of transports turned back before they had left the shelter of the Helgoland mine fields. Whether they found the British fleet too vigilant, or whether these expeditions were only in the nature of dress rehearsal, I am unable to decide. I only know that the whole German navy was tremendously excited by the trials, which were taken most seriously by all concerned in them.

In November of the same year a third and more serious start appears to have been made. In this case the advance guard of one section of transports at least must have come into contact with some hostile warships, for I have the very best authority for saying that merchant ships, fitted as transports, and rather severely damaged by the shell fire of what may have been the guns of torpedo craft, were fitting and repairing in Wilhelmshaven docks early in 1916.

Unless I am very much mistaken, several of this squadron of transports were sunk, and most of those aboard were lost, in the attempt to cross the North Sea with troops.

The mystery observed in connection with this affair was heightened by the appearance of a whole swarm of secret service agents in the German naval bases at the end of 1915.

These pests encouraged sailors to talk about the affair, and a number of men received summary punishment merely for repeating the tales that were current at the time.

They had a very difficult task in making the navy men who really took part in the affair open their mouths; for no German sailor is likely to unburden himself of even the most commonplace news when any person strange to him happens to be present.

My own information has all been derived from hints and allusions, dropped in my bar when a few cronies were talking in assured privacy; and even then, it is very little that any of them would say before me, except two or three of the submarine men who had served with me for years.

The expeditions I have mentioned, however, cannot be set down as deliberate attempts to invade England, any more than a two minutes' bombardment of Yarmouth can be called a challenge to the British fleet, or the appearance of one or even ten airplanes over London a real attempt to wreck the capital from the air.

It is safe to say that troops have been embarked for an invasion, just as airplanes have been sent to London for a bombardment. In both cases the adventure was an experiment, a foretaste of what will come if German plans can be put into execution.

Because airplanes do reach England and the transports with troops have not succeeded in doing so, it is obvious that the areial defenses of the country are not so strong as the naval defenses, and that most danger is to be apprehended from an aerial attack.

None the less, the whole German navy implicitly believes that a fixed plan exists for the invasion of Great Britain, and that it will be put into execution before the final die is cast in this great war.

The evidence of the maneuvers of a decade and of the war-time experiments goes to show that the plan involves probably the sacrifice of every capital ship Germany possesses, and the fixed intention of the navy is to exact as heavy a price as possible for every ship.

It must be supposed that a period of reckless mine laying will precede the great attempt, and in this connection it should be noted that the construction of mine-laying submarines has been one of the features of Germany's shipbuilding in recent times.

A great air raid upon every accessible point of the English coast will no doubt be organized for the same night.

WHEN FLEET COMES OUT.

At the same time the German fleet will sally boldly out and engage the Grand Fleet of Great Britain in a running fight, making a desperate endeavor to draw every possible ship away to the north as far as possible.

From Zeebrugge whole hosts of torpedo craft and small submarines will put out, attacking chosen points on the English coast, and attacking the patrols from all directions to the defense.

In the midst of all the confusion the transports, with their convoys of cruisers, submarines and torpedo craft, will make boldly for the British coast, through water lanes protected with mines, as far as the submarine mine layers can make that possible.

They will carry from 70,000 to 80,000 picked men, of the sort who are now being selected as "shock troops" on the western front. Their mission will be to land upon the British coast, or perish in the attempt.

Such is a rough sketch of the German navy man's idea of the invasion of England, in which every ship and every man is grimly determined to play an allotted part, though it involves extinction.

If you point out that it is a desperate plan, they say that it will not be executed until Germany is in a desperate position; and into such a position they can see the Fatherland is fast drifting.

Attacks at a dozen places at once, and confusion and panic in all directions are expected.

In the midst of all this disorganization and confusion the invaders will set about their work ferociously and ruthlessly. With all possibility of retreat cut off from behind them, they must strike for a quick and sensational success.

"They will capture London and bring the accursed English to their knees," is the invariable conclusion of this German dream. It is a dream, as the Spanish Armada was a dream; but it is a dream which the dangerous madmen of German high control will attempt to make a reality.

Germany has other sea plans, too; plans which involve America and are based upon the experiences of the U-53 off the American coast. She has naval plans for the Pacific, and even for the Far East.

Out of a Book.

A WONDERFUL GIRL.

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," the Nicest Child in all American Literature, is Portrayed by Mary Pickford at Clune's Auditorium.

The coming of Mary Pickford to Clune's Auditorium next week in a picturization of Kate Douglas Wiggin's famous story, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," reveals the fact that this popular story of American childhood in a quaint New England village was one of the most sought-after plays for motion-picture production in the history of the industry.

The story first appeared in book form in October, 1903. Its sale was so rapid that the early editions were exhausted faster than new ones could be printed. Within seven years the story attained the extraordinary sale of 537,000 copies, and this quite without the aid of sensational advertising.

Five years later, when the stage production of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" was made with Edith Taliaferro as Rebecca, the play was hailed as an appealing and compelling presentation of child life and young womanhood, and it was one of the biggest successes of its season on the New York stage.

This was just about the time that a beautiful little girl with long golden curls was beginning to attract the attention of the American public by her wonderful portrayal of child parts in motion pictures—her name was Mary Pickford. This little girl, who has now become the world's most popular star of the screen, attended a stage performance of "Rebecca" and fell so in love with the character and the story that she prevailed on her producers (the old Biograph company) to obtain the rights of the story for pictures. The author, Kate Douglas Wiggin, would not consent to a picturization of her story then regardless of the fabulous sum offered her for the rights. But Miss Pickford determined to get this story for pictures, and for the past nine years has kept after the author each time with an increase in purchase price, and finally succeeded a few months ago, when the author was convinced that Mary was the ideal person to immortalize the little girl of the New England village on the screen.

The story was adapted for the screen by Frances Marion and under the direction of Marshall Neilan, the production in pictures is considered by Miss Pickford to be her best work to date, inasmuch as in the character of Rebecca Mary is just herself—so natural as the little girl in short dresses and curls she so much wanted to be.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich said of the story: "Delightful from beginning to end; Rebecca is just the nicest child in American literature. In her hold upon the hearts of young and old, 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm' takes rank with the girls of Louise M. Alcott's famous 'Little Women.'"

HAVE A PEEP AT THIS ROOM.

Gladys Brockwell's Mother Owns Some Collection.

The "Gladys" room at the Brockwell home in Hollywood was designed and arranged by Gladys's mother, Billie. Gladys objected to having it on the ground that it seemed conceited; but Mrs. Brockwell insisted that it was only proper pride. And, as is usually the case, Mrs. Brockwell won.

The "Gladys" room is at the back of the second floor, and is used as a morning parlor. It is papered in velvety white, against which have been fixed innumerable cut-out portraits of Gladys in all her various roles, and dozens of "straight" photographs of her. Seven hundred and eighty-three different pictures of the noted star have thus far been affixed to the walls and ceiling, and the number is constantly growing.

For instance, when Gladys finished her part in the new William Fox production, "The Soul of Satan," which is to be shown at the Alhambra Theater beginning today, all the "stills" of the photoplay were classified, and the best and most diverse bits of characterization were selected by Mrs. Brockwell to adorn the walls of the "Gladys" room. These were cut out and pasted along one side of the papering which has not yet been completely filled.

The furniture in Mrs. Brockwell's "Gladys" room is a mixture of pieces which have been used in her daughter's most famous Fox pictures. The draperies of the room have been fashioned from some of the most beautiful gowns worn by Gladys in her pictures.

Shades over the electric lamps have been painted with portraits of Gladys by the best-known artists of Southern California. On the tables rest enormous books of press clippings about Gladys's work, on both the stage and in pictures.

"There's only one thing needed to make the room complete," says Gladys herself. "You should fill the vases with gladiolas."

REVERENCE OUR FLAG.

Homage Paid it by the Children of France.

[The Outlook:] When our troops marched through the streets of Paris on Independence Day they were pelted with flowers and were greeted with shouts by the crowds. So were the envoys of France hailed and applauded by the throngs in American cities. But there was one thing that happened in Paris that did not happen here. That is told in a cable dispatch in a single sentence: "The Americans were greatly surprised to see a number of children kneel in the streets as the flag was carried by."

Early in the war Rostand wrote a poem about the American flag. He told of a German reaching up and cutting out the stars, hoping thereby that he might destroy the idealism for which our nation has stood. Then Rostand told how the night wind came, and the desecrated flag, lifting its folds in the breeze, showed through its torn field the very stars in the heavens.

For some of the people of France the flag of the United States may have such symbolism, but not for the little French children that knelt in the street. For them it meant only succor and a helping hand in the dark. And the children of France, as they kneel in the presence of our flag, are nearer the heart of the truth than even the French poet, for there is no true idealism possible to those who refuse to give help to men, women and little children suffering in the defense of ideals.

There is now a new glory in the flag, and those who are bearing it and will bear it on the battlefield of Europe will find no greater tribute than that paid to them by the kneeling children of Paris. Our soldiers will have rendered their country the highest service, in as much as they have done it unto the least of these.

THE RELIGIOUS RAMBLER.

Merger of a Million Lutherans Memorial of Luther Anniversary. Three Bodies Joined to Celebrate Quadricentennial of Reformation Effecting a Union—Divided for 50 Years—General Synod Has Ratified Draft of Constitution—Others Will Act This Fall.

IT APPEARS extremely probable that the permanent monument in commemoration of the 400th anniversary of the Reformation under Martin Luther will be the United Lutheran Church of America.

Divided for fifty years, three important branches of the church are now speeding toward a merger which will unite nearly 1,000,000 communicant members into one body.

Although the trend of the church for ten years has been toward this union, it is the quadricentennial of the Reformation, which, happily and appropriately, is bringing it to pass. United to honor Luther, the church is endeavoring to cement the bond permanently.

Of the three divisions involved in the merger, the General Synod has already ratified a constitution drafted for the proposed church. The General Council, which is now on record in favor of the proposal through the action of an important committee, will likely follow with its official indorsement at a meeting in Philadelphia in October. The United Synod of the south has called a special meeting in November at Salisbury, S.D., for the presentation of the plan.

By November, 1918, less than two years from the beginning of the movement toward union, leaders expect that the United Lutheran Church of America will be a reality.

There is dramatic interest in the first steps toward this merger, a chapter in church history with the narrative of a story book.

UNITES LEADERS.

To arrange for the observance of the anniversary, the three Lutheran bodies appointed a Joint Lutheran Committee for the Celebration of the Quadricentennial of the Reformation. The celebration is taking place this year, the anniversary being dated from October 31, 1517, when Luther nailed his famous ninety-five theses on the door of the church at Wittenberg. Presidents of the three divisions of the church, leading clergymen and laymen were named on this committee.

The leaven of union, planted in this committee by a common desire to honor the birth of their church, worked marvels. Members of the committee began wondering why the church had ever separated, and why it should remain separated. The differences in forms of worship which had split the denomination a half-century ago seemed insignificant in the light of Luther's struggles in the early days of the Reformation.

The climax, sudden and yet merely a step in a gradual evolution, came at a meeting of this committee in Philadelphia last April 18. Called together to discuss the celebration, the committee gave the entire day to a consideration of the possibilities of uniting the church. Clergymen and laymen were unanimous in support of the plan.

Although lacking the official power to consummate the merger, the committee could at least act authoritatively. At the meeting were the presidents of the three bodies which were to be united. The clerical leaders and prominent laymen were urging the proposition. The result was a resolution requesting the three presidents to name a committee to draw up a constitution for the United Lutheran Church of America.

It is a coincidence that the memorable meeting of this committee was held on the 336th anniversary of Luther's heroic stand before the church leaders at Worms.

Events moved rapidly after that meeting of the celebration committee. Requests were sent immediately to the various church boards of the three bodies to submit plans for uniting their activities.

ON CONSOLIDATION.

The consolidation of denominational boards has often proved a stumbling block to church mergers. Boards and bureaus mean jobs, sometimes jealously guarded. Lutherans forgot their individual boards in their hope and interest in the welfare of the united church.

Each of the three bodies has boards for home missions, foreign missions, inner missions (which is the equivalent of the social service activities in other denominations. Yet by the time the committee on constitution met in Harrisburg in May these boards had agreed on plans for uniting their organizations and their activities. The consolidation plans were legally drawn and submitted to the committee. The boards went further and gave their own approval of the proposed merger.

Its task thus simplified, the committee drafted a constitution "for the proposed United Lutheran Church in America," setting forth the demand for union in this preamble:

"We, members of the Evangelical Lutheran congregations in America, associated in Evangelical Lutheran Synods, recognizing our duty as people of God to make the inner unity which we have with one another manifest in the common confession, defense and maintenance of our faith, and in united efforts for the extension of the kingdom of God at home and abroad; realizing the vastness of the field that God has assigned us for our labors in this western world, and the greatness of the resources within our beloved church which are only feebly employed for this purpose; conscious of our need of mutual assistance and encouragement; and relying upon the promise of the divine word and He who hath begun this work will perfect it until the day of Christ Jesus, hereby unite, and now invite and until such end be attained continue to invite all Evangelical Lutheran congregations and synods in America, one with us in the faith, to unite with us, upon the terms of this constitution, in one general organization, to be known as the United Lutheran Church in America."

SYNOD RATIFIES DRAFT.

At the meeting of the General Synod in Chicago in June the constitution was formally adopted by this body, with 469,721 baptized members. The general council at its jubilee anniversary meeting in Philadelphia in October is expected to take similar action, representing 800,891 baptized members. In November, at a special meeting in Salisbury, N. C., the United Synod of the South will act on behalf of 72,462 baptized members, making the total strength of the united church, 1,343,075 baptized members.

The number of communicant members in the three bodies is 933,342. Their church property is valued at $61,739,005, with eleven theological seminaries, twenty-one colleges, twenty-one orphans' homes, fifteen homes for the aged, five homes for defectives, five deaconess' mother houses, eighteen hospitals, twelve hospices for young men and young women, six immigrant and seamen's missions and six publishing houses.

Forecasting the probable action of the General Council in October, a committee appointed two years ago by this body to frame a new constitution met in Atlantic City in July, and instead of writing a constitution for its own body, adjourned with a recommendation of the proposed United Church.

Norwegian Lutherans in the United States have caught the merger spirit. At a meeting in St. Paul in June, three Norwegian-speaking bodies united as the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America, with a combined communicant membership of 294,026.

The next step in the organization of the United Lutheran Church of America, following the ratification of the constitution by the three general bodies, is the submission of the plan to the separate synods for their indorsement. It is expected that these synods will complete the ratification in time for the first meeting of the united church in November 1918.

The three-part division of the denomination occurred in the Civil War period. The United Synod of the South broke away over the issues involved in the war and the slavery question. The General Council separated from the mother church, the General Synod, over differences of opinion on church discipline and forms of worship—differences long since forgotten in joint efforts for the spread of the kingdom and now happily buried in the common desire to celebrate the anniversary of the Reformation.

ATLANTIC COAST IS SINKING.

Subsidence of Two Feet Per Century Observable on Both Sides.

[Douglas W. Johnson in Scientific American Supplement:] More than half a century ago Prof. George H. Cook, then State Geologist of New Jersey, presented striking and apparently convincing evidence that the Atlantic Coast of North America was gradually subsiding at the rate of two feet per century. Farm lands under cultivation fifty years before were, at the time of his investigation, covered with salt marsh grasses; old corduroy roads were encountered several feet below the surfaces of salt marshes at many points along the shore; and, within the memory of men then living, the ocean waters had risen so high upon the wheels of tidal mills that their operation had become difficult or impossible.

The scientific manner in which Prof. Cook presented his arguments gained for him not only the respect of geologists in all parts of the world, but a very general acceptance of his interesting conclusions.

Independent investigation of the shores of England, Southern Scandinavia, the Netherlands and France convinced many geologists in those countries that the Atlantic Coast of Europe was suffering a subsidence similar to that of the North American coast. On both sides of the North Atlantic, therefore, there has long existed a conviction that the land is slowly but surely sinking beneath the ocean waters. In America in particular it has been accepted as a well established fact that a subsidence of from one to two feet per century is still in progress.

Specifications of New Nebula.

[Indianapolis News:] A spectrogram of Hubble's variable nebula N. G. C. 2261, which has as its nucleus the variable star R. Monocerotis, shows the nucleus and the nebula to have the same peculiar spectrum consisting of bright lines or bands—not those typical of gaseous nebulae—and a continuous spectrum. This observation suggests that the nebula shines by reflected light of the pulsating nucleus, and that the flow of the light pulses over the nebula causes its variation and could give its distance. From the material now available, it is difficult to give any trustworthy value for the apparent displacement. It may be as great as fifteen seconds of arc. Taking this value and the simplest case of displacement perpendicular to the line of sight, which would give a maximum value for the distance and would generally overstate it, the parallax would be about 0.00027 or the distance some 12,000 light-years.

Barbarism.

SERB DESCRIBES WAR HORRORS.

Hideous Crimes are Charged to Bulgarians.

Thousands of Children are Sent to Turkey.

Prisoners Tortured Before Being Killed.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, Aug. 8.—There has come into the possession of the Serbian authorities recently a letter, written by a Serbian patriot, who barely escaped hanging by the Bulgarians. He describes in some detail the insurrections in Serbia in April last, the fate that they met, and unspeakable cruelties visited upon the insurrectionists by the Bulgarians.

His letter—the original is at present in the Serbian archives, but can be seen at any time—is written with his own blood from his hiding place in the Serbian mountains, and is addressed to his friend, a Serbian captain, serving with the Saloniki forces. The captain fell into captivity not long after receipt of the missive, but succeeded in smuggling it out by means of a Serbian sentry.

The letter frankly advises all Serbians to kill themselves rather than submit to capture; it tells of the forcible deportation of thousands of children to Constantinople; of the frightful tortures inflicted upon prisoners before they are executed by the Bulgarians, such as hanging by the tongue; of gibbets erected everywhere to dispose of Serbian prisoners of war, especially of insurrectionists.

The names of both sender and recipient have been suppressed for obvious reasons, but both are on file with the original of the letter, which runs as follows:

"Here I am in a mountain which is, actually, my sad residence. I escaped on April 25 from the Bulgarian prison where I was incarcerated with twenty comrades after having been surrounded and captured in the revolt near —. There had been 25,000 of us insurgents; we had, moreover, fought with a German division that defeated us and drove us to flight. Then we had been attacked by two Bulgarian divisions armed with cannon and machine guns. I was taken, put in prison and condemned to be hanged, but during the night, my friend —— arrived with a band in Prokouplie, killed the sentinels and rescued me. In consequence I was able to reach the mountain. There are more than 5000 of us insurgents. Nearly all of the other mountains are filled with insurgents.

TURKS GET CHILDREN.

"The Bulgarians had summoned all the male population between the ages of 16 and 65 in order to incorporate them in the army and send them immediately to the front. At the same time they had gathered together all the young people between 13 and 16 and had sent them to Constantinople. It was this vandal process of these monstrous Mongols that provoked the revolt. The unfortunate mothers, exasperated by the cries of their children as they were carried off by force, attacked the Bulgarians with stones. This was a genuine revolt, to which the Bulgarians replied with gibbets to which they hanged women and children. Finally, the people, exhausted and revolting, threw themselves upon the Bulgarian despots. Men and women carried off arms and ammunition, first to Prokouplie, then to Leskovatz, Lebane, Vrania, Vlassotintze, Zayetchar, Kniagevatz, Pojarevatz and the villages.

"It was agreed that the insurgents of Zayetchar and its suburbs should march on Nish; that the rest of us, from Prokouplie, Leskovatz and Vrania, should do the same, and, reunited, should take possession of the city. Unfortunately, those from Zayetchar were late; we got ahead of them and had, alone to withstand an attack from a German division. We beat them and took away two batteries and 800 soldiers. The battle took place near Gitoradja. From there we carried Lebane, Leskovatz and Prokouplie, of which we made ourselves masters. Then we attacked Nish, carrying the depots and half of the city.

"Meanwhile two Bulgarian divisions arrived, and a bloody battle developed; we should have been able to defeat the Bulgarians as we had defeated the Germans if they had not used a cowardly strategy to prevent us from attacking them; they forced the women and the children to march in front of their ranks. Unable to fire upon our own people, we withdraw as far as Korvingrad, where a new battle began and where the Hungarians attacked us from behind. We made an opening and took refuge in the mountains. Since I was dead from fatigue I was taken prisoner and with a dozen other insurgents was condemned to be hanged. Waiting while the gibbet was prepared, we were incarcerated in the prison of Prokouplie, but one of our bands killed the garrison and rescued us.

EXTERMINATING NATION.

"So here I am in the mountain of ——. It may be that when you read these lines I shall no longer be among the living, but the insurrection cannot be snuffed out so easily, for the Bulgarians are proceeding systematically to exterminate our nation. One the 25th of April they placed aboard trains at Belotintze 8000 children between the ages of 12 and 15, bound for Constantinople. Many of the children jumped from the cars along the way, and found death in that manner.

"The Bulgarians gathered the entire population for the purpose of vaccinating everyone. But, instead of injecting serum against cholera or smallpox they inoculated them with contagious diseases. One of the doctors admitted that to those who had fled to the mountains with their children.

"The Bulgarians have raised gibbets on the bridge of Leskovatz, at Belotintze, Vlasotintze, Lebare, Nish Kniajevatz and at other places, and on them have hanged people, women and children, compelling the others to help them in their terrible tortures."

One of the notable Serbs who was hanged, the writer states, was a certain Jordan, registrar of municipality, who, he asserts, was hanged by the tongue. The writer continued:

"I have neither time nor space to describe my misfortune but I can tell you briefly that if you do not come by the month of September it will not be worth while coming at all. It will be too late.

"The hanging of twelve Serbian soldiers made prisoner on the Saloniki front was a sad sight. Their sentence was read to them, including the words: 'Because you have abandoned your flag and your Bulgarian brothers you cannot longer be loyal Bulgarian subjects.' So it should be told our soldiers who are fighting on the Saloniki front that they had best kill themselves rather than let themselves be taken prisoner, for these savages hang their prisoners of war, after having tortured them.

"There, my dear ——, is a faint picture of all that is going on in our unfortunate Serbia. No power could ever stifle the Serbian insurrection, which is spreading about the entire country. There are even among us Bulgarians who have fled from their own army."

AN IMPUDENT BOOK.

BY TOM FITCH.

Many Germans who do not accept the "Me und Gott" classification of Mr. Hohenzollern of his relations with the Almighty, are asking: "What kind of a God is it whose first prophet is the Kaiser and his hereditary successor, the furniture-stealing Crown Prince?"

Prof. Sombart of Berlin published a pamphlet in which he takes the view that the long peace which terminated in 1914 corrupted and degraded the German people. He draws a most gloomy picture of the state of Germany before the war, through the spread of commercialism. All the evils of peace are summed up in the statement that "important elements of English culture had begun to make themselves widely felt." Hopeless attempts were made at salvation. The salvation of religion was tried (not by many) and it was found stale. The salvation of socialism was tried and it was found unprofitable. "We had," says the professor, "before the war succumbed to a complete culture — pessimism. We had become firmly convinced that mankind was at an end, and that the remainder of its existence on earth would be an entirely unpleasant condition of vulgarization of life in an ant heap, that the huckster spirit was everywhere on the point of making itself felt."

From this deplorable condition of a mixture of material wealth with spiritual poverty, the war awoke Prof. Sombart, and he awoke like a suddenly-aroused mustang with his tail over the lines and his hind heels banging against the dashboard. Then he began to preach heroism and to tell the German people what they must do. He said:

> We want to be idealists, but not dreamers in the clouds. We wish to stand firm on earth and take as much of the sea and of the earth as we need for our existence and for our natural increase. We do not want anything more than this, but also we do not want anything less. Our kingdom is of this world. If we desire to remain a strong state we must conquer. A great victory will make it possible not to trouble any more about those who are around us. When the German stands leaning on his mighty sword, clad in steel from his sole to his head, whatsoever will may, down below, dance around his feet, and the intellectuals and the learned men of England, France and Russia, and Italy may rail at him and throw mud. But in his lofty repose he will not allow himself to be disturbed, and he will only reflect in the sense of his old ancestors in Europe: "Oderint dum metuant" (Let them hate so long as they fear.)

Sombart's book is accepted by "Me und Gott" and his followers as the new Bible of Germany. The main idea is that Germany needs nothing whatever from other nations: She is altogether superior in every part of national life and in any exchange gives more than she receives.

The self-sufficient Sombart—who as an egotist is a world-beater—says:

"All economic international relations are a necessary evil which we should endeavor to restrict as far as possible. The most pressing task after the war will be to secure for Germany the maximum of economic independence."

The Professor graciously allows that international law has in the past achieved much good "and in future it may be allowed to develop undisturbed"—that is, after the war, but during the war, international law does not exist so far as imposing any restraint on German action.

There remains cultural or spiritual internationalism, that is the relations between nations on the scientific, artistic and social field and Sombart says:

"Fortunately we Germans do not require anybody in matters of spirit or of culture. No nation in the world can give us anything worth mentioning in the field of science or technology, art or literature."

Sombart admits that German superiority imposes some obligations on "me und Gott." He says:

> The idea that we are the chosen people imposes on us heavy duties. Above all, we must maintain ourselves as a strong nation. We are not out to conquer the world. . . . what should we do with such indigestible bits in our stomach? We do not desire to conquer peoples half civilized or in a state of nature in order to fill them with the German spirit. Such a Germanization is not possible. . . . The great talent for civilization which is praised in the English is nothing but an expression of spiritual poverty. Who could undertake the task of implanting German culture in other nations? You cannot lay heroism like gas mains in any part of the world you choose. We Germans will always thus be—and rightly so—bad colonizers.

The gas of heroism is difficult to lay on even in the trenches and then only with a suitable mind.

But it will not do for the eighteen nations now at war with Germany to rely too much on the contempt of the German Colossus. The professor says:

> Should it be necessary to increase our territory we will take as much land as appears necessary. We shall also take all the strategical points that seem good enough, in order to maintain our impregnable strength. If it is of any use to our position of strength in the world we will establish stations for our fleet for example in Dover, Malta, Suez. Beyond this we will do nothing.

"The main idea of Sombart's book," writes Professor Nicholson of Edinburgh University, "is to show that the opposition between the English and the German ideals — commercialism and heroism—is irreconcilable. The handling of what purports to be an account of English culture—its literature, history, philosophy, and every department of activity past and present—displays either an appalling lack of knowledge or an appalling lack of truth. The distortion is not even amusing. The praise of the Germans on the other hand, apart from the blasphemy as may be seen from the sample quoted already, would seem distinctly comic but for the horrible practical sequel to the German madness. It is to be hoped that in time this madness of Germany may pass as the madness of revolutionary France passed; but until it does we can only say with Prof. Sombart that 'it may be hoped there will now be an end of all talk of the community of these two kindred nations—the English and the German. There is nothing more silly than this.' Nothing."

GLIMPSES OF WASHINGTON, LIVELIEST WAR CAPITAL

There World Celebrities Meet on the Street Corners and Adventure Lurks in the Byways, While the New Food Administration Fills the City's Broad Area.

BY VAN.

WASHINGTON is one of the most interesting places in the world these days. A member of the French mission, a chubby colonel, whom the writer met the other day in front of the Treasury, observed that he had been in every capital of the Allies since the war began. Washington, was his comment, is by far the most interesting and stimulating of them all. You can fairly feel the throb of the American war machine as it is being hammered into shape, although there is a vast amount of hammering and shaping yet to be done.

The American capital has become one of the main offices in the great understanding which is conducting the business management of the world. And such a diversity of people from every nation and clime throng its streets and buildings! Is it the tall, gentle, scholarly English Balfour, who, before he has been an hour in Washington, is seen in Rock Creek Park, searching for arbutus? Or the fine, soldierly figure of "Papa" Joffre gravely rising in his seat in the automobile to salute the enormous tricolor flying from the staff of the District Building, while he smiles serenely on the high-school girl, who ventures a timid "Vive la France!" Is it, perhaps, the distinguished Marconi, who is expected daily to bring out some marvelous invention which will do away with the wicked submarine, or Bakmetieff, the genial Ambassador of republican Russia, at the sight of whom the poor Jew peddler weeps with joy, because he sees hope for his race in the land of his father? Again it may be the soldierly forms of the members of the Belgian mission whom everyone cheers at sight, or, perhaps, the eminently likable "Tay Pay" O'Connor disappointing the Sinn Feiners and pro-Germans by his stout defense of Britain's course in the war.

CELEBRITIES MEET.

Adventure waits you just around every corner in Washington these days. If you had been on F street, near the New Ebbitt Hotel the other morning, you might have seen two thickset, chunky men exchanging what were evidently very decided opinions. All the world which reads the illustrated newspapers would know them at once: Hoover of Belgium and Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal. Beg their pardon, Hoover, food administrator of the United States in war time, and Goethals, who is to "engineer" the American advance in France.

"Good morning, Mr. Speaker!" cheerily calls out Gen. Goethals, as a tall, spare figure with white "whiskers" passes, cigar at the telltale angle that says Uncle Joe Cannon. Can any other city in the world, or at any rate in these United States of America, beat that for one street corner on one morning?

The food administration—that is Hoover—is perhaps the most nearly all-pervasive one fact in Washington. It sprawls over a wide area of the city in odd corners and unlikely buildings. Each day it sends out almost literally millions of circulars, pledge cards, window cards and other forms of hints, direction and council to the housewives of the nation, who are already mobilized with the market basket and the spoon to help Uncle Sam win the war. Almost the entire equipment of one large printing establishment is kept busy all the time getting out its work. You can see on the streets constantly increasing numbers of women in the striking costume recommended by Hoover to show that they have joined the army that has for its slogan, "Lick the plate and lick the Kaiser."

Meanwhile unofficial, human Washington cheers the President over his victory in getting from Congress a real one-man food administration and not a cumbersome board.

WHAT'S A MAWSH?

Perhaps the readers of The Times have never heard the expression, or rather term, mawsh applied to a member of Congress. What do you suppose it means? You can see a mawsh statesman and recognize him easily on the streets soon after the opening of a new term. It is a term said to be used by new and rather disheartened Senators and Representatives who find all their dreams of reforming the world are illusions—that is, if they are going to get anything for the home district. And it means Might As Well Stay At Home.

Washington—that is, the District of Columbia—is proud of its record in the drafting of Uncle Sam's new national army. Number 258, you will remember, was the first to be chosen all over the country. Well, Washington's boy 258, Harry Chapman Gilbert, was the first new army man in the whole United States; that is, he was the first man to pass the test of the examiners and be drafted into the Federal service. He is the son of a policeman at the White House who has already gone into active service. President Wilson has written young Gilbert a personal letter congratulating him on his opportunity to serve his country.

Washington also has a regular commission studying the reasons for H.C.L. Some of the prominent merchants are now devising a scheme by which they will give a discount to those of their customers who carry home their own parcels and thus lighten the burden of the seller in providing delivery wagons.

AT THE PRESS CLUB.

One of the real institutions of Washington is the National Press Club, unique among press clubs the world over. It is one of the most practical, active, live clubs in the world. Its more than 1000 members actually use it all the time. They eat in its comfortable dining-room, read in its cosy library and put to constant service its writing desks, typewriters, telephones and other conveniences. Its facilities are always actually used. And it is the rendezvous for all sorts and conditions of men coming in at all times from every country and clime, situated, as it is, in the very heart of the business part of the city, just across the famous Pennsylvania avenue from the Treasury. Most of the national notables are members—President Wilson, ex-President Taft, Cabinet secretaries and Senators, Congressmen and permanent workers in the departments without number. Distinguished foreigners drop in from time to time—singers and other musicians, producers with new film plays, explorers, scientists, litterateurs and all the visiting missions, they come to the National Press Club. Only a little while ago Ambassador Jusserand, the genial representative of France, whom everybody loves, not only for his country, but for himself, made a neat little speech there introducing the immortal Bernhardt. Of course, every single, solitary returning newspaper correspondent from the battlefields of the Old World pauses to tell the Press Club of what he has seen. The other day the writer sat at a foursome table at the club, his seat mates being Secretary Lane, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley and Capt. "Bob" Bartlett, who took Peary to the north pole. The Secretary and Dr. Wiley talked, the navigator, who is a very reticent man, said nothing, and the writer listened, much to his profit.

ABOUT JOE CANNON.

Speaking of the National Press Club and Uncle Joe Cannon, who has been mentioned before in the course of this veracious chronicle, there is a story, a good one, current about this statesman, who is a faithful member of the club. Uncle Joe says this story is thirty years old. Therefore, when, the other day, a new member of the lower house told it again, Mr. Cannon insisted upon giving the fully orthodox version. So he said:

"It happened at the old Willard Hotel, when it used to be run on the American plan, with three meals a day. I am a light eater, but I am powerfully fond of green corn. One day I had a neighbor in from Danville, who took dinner with me. I had three orders of green corn.

" 'Joe,' says he to me, 'how much board do you pay at this tavern?' I told him. He looked at the stack of corn cobs, ruminated a moment and then remarked: 'Don't you think it would be cheaper for you to board at a livery stable?' "

One of the most popular summer "shows" in Washington has just been closed by order of the police. It is doubtful whether any of the motion-picture houses or other places of entertainment furnished half as much amusement to pedestrian Washington as the daily battles between the suffrage pickets and the general populace. For some months the "suffs'" sentinels have been standing with their banners in front of the White House. So long as the legends on these banners were no more incendiary than, "How long, Mr. President, must women wait for liberty?" or, "We do not ask favors, only justice," no harm was done. When, however, the bold ladies began to carry such legends as "Kaiser Wilson" and (this especially for the special benefit of the new Russian Ambassador and his retinue,) "President Wilson is deceiving you; this is not a democracy but an autocracy," then the long-suffering populace aroused itself and the street element waited every day at Lafayette Square, across Pennsylvania avenue from the White House, until noontime, then to sally forth, pluck the banners from the hands of the valiant ladies, rend them to shreds and apply unkind, nonparliamentary language to the pickets. Finally, patient Maj. Pullman, the Chief of Police, decided that it had to be stopped, in the interest not only of public order, but of the women themselves. Of course, there are differences of opinion, and it may long remain a moot question whether these ladies were martyrs to a great cause or simply disturbers of the peace.

PORTO RICO WILL HAVE TRAINING CAMP.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN JUAN (Porto Rico) Aug. 15.—The Porto Rican training camp of the Officers' Reserve Corps to develop officers to command the brigade of Porto Rican troops will be held at Henry Barracks, Cayey, beginning August 27. Orders were sent out today to the accepted candidates to be at Cayey early on the morning of the 27th and prepared to undergo three-months' training.

The contingent of 245 men ordered to report at the camp will include forty-five noncommissioned officers of the Porto Rican regiment who will enter the camp to prepare for commissions. Two lieutenants from the Porto Rican regiment have been detailed as instructors at the camp while other officer instructors, who will later take command of the brigade, are expected to arrive from the United States a few days before the camp opens.

Officers to man the Porto Rican brigade are to be trained here instead of in the training camps in the States partly at their own request and partly because of the special requirements necessary for them to officer the local troops. A thorough knowledge of both Spanish and English is required of all student officers entering the training camp.

No site has yet been selected as a camp for the brigade which is to be drafted as soon as the student officers have completed their training.

ENGLAND TO USE OLD GERMAN SHIPS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Commander Monteiro of the Portugese navy has been sent to London as the representative of the Portugese government to arrange details connected with the working of the former German ships which have been placed at the disposal of Great Britain for use in either merchant or war traffic.

A Mother's Bravery.

[Washington Star:. He was as straight a young corporal as you ever saw in khaki. And he was telling the woman who sat next in the car that he wished the war could be over in time to cut and shock the corn.

"My father is a good farmer, but he is nearly sixty and that's too old for a man to be working when he has a son to do for him. And my mother is so little she can walk under my outstretched arm, but—here's what I keep studying over up here—dad cried and begged me to come home the first chance I got, but mother said: 'Bub, you know how I hate to have you go, but you are fighting our fight for us, and though it is only a day's ride from here to Washington city I want you to come back by way of France' ——"

There was nothing to it, of course, except for the comfort it gave the youngster to talk of his mother's bravery and his father's corn.

And comfort means a whole heap.

A new business for women! And for women untrained in business!

Could any news be more welcome? There is scarcely a week that I am not asked to find something for an inexperienced woman to do to earn a living. It is pitiful, how many are thrown upon their own resources and how hopelessly inadequate those resources are. For it takes training to do almost anything well. How few understand this!

But here is a vocation which takes little or no experience. A wholesale perfumer is advertising for flower petals of all the sweet-smelling kinds for making California sachets. This sweet undertaking does not require the sacrifice of fruits which result from blossoming trees or shrubs, as the petals of oranges, lemons or other sweet-blooming trees may be shaken off and the fruit will mature as usual. The petals must be kept clean, of course, and dried in a rack or tray in the sunshine. The fragrant fruit blossoms are not the only ones demanded; but the rose, violet, sweet pea, lemon verbena, patchouly and lavender are even more in requisition. Rose geranium leaves are also wished for. There is little danger that the market will be overstocked with these perfume materials, since it takes 1100 pounds of violet petals to make one ounce of violet oil, and from 8000 to 12,000 pounds of rose petals to create an ounce of attar of roses. However, it is not so much for this expensive production that the flower petals are wanted as to make a flower sachet from the petals finely ground.

And, by the way, this California industry which has quietly grown up is quite extensive. I saw letters ordering and reordering perfumes and sachets from every part of the United States.

Are You a Little Shaver?

Now, don't be angry! Even if you're a woman it may be that you shave. Many do at present—I mean, for decollette. And whether you are masculine or feminine, that new shaving cream may be of interest.

You use no soap, but simply apply the thick, soft cream to the area which needs shaving, allowing it to remain for a few moments, and then begin to mow. The one who told me of it happened to be a man and he declared it to be magical. Since he first discovered it he has used no soap—I mean, for shaving.

"Those Intimacies of Fashion."

It is thus that an advertising writer speaks of lingerie. Is that not delicate? As unreservedly reserved and as daintily expressed as are the fabrications anent which the remark is made. Translaated by means of crepe de chine, pliant flesh-tinted satin and snowy muslins, the reference applies to camisoles and negligees, to envelope chemises and to boudoir robes and slumber gowns, all newly in bloom with those magic touches which bespeak the tracery of Dame Fashion's busy fingers.

New Attachments.

If you are fond of jellies—and what housekeeper is not?—you will welcome that attachment which makes jelly-making easier. A metallic arm for holding the jelly bag in dripping suspense above the kettle while your own arm and hand are busy elswhere. Not only time is saved, but you are secured from being burned by that redhot fruit juice. And — still more welcome news—the bag and its attachment are on sale at saving prices at that big Broadway store.

Rare Dahlias.

If you visit Exposition Park on Sunday next allow your eyes to feast upon those gardens across on Flower street, where 2000 rare dahlias are in bloom! The very home color, this spot seems just now to be.

Newest Millinery.

That milliner who seems somehow to steal marches even upon the New York market, obtaining, by some magic all her own, the very latest syllable from the Parisians, has just returned, bringing with her the most exclusive millinery modes. Black! Black! Always first comes black! At least, she so expresses it. And among her treasures black is certain to be first, if one may judge by foreglimpses of the most delightful hats. One tall, close turban, in black satin of heavy weave and lustrous surface, is banded simply —"simply," did I say? Not so simply, when you know about that band. It is kolinsky, which is the Parisian craze, and it bristles with strands of burnt ostrich, which was threaded in a needle and carefully sewed through the fur. This is the newest wrinkle in the millinery world. And there are others—but some secrets must be kept for a little later.

One-delivery Plan.

The request is national that the retail stores request their patrons to assist in solving the delivery problem, thereby helping to keep down prices. Our local drygoods stores are starting in to do their bit by the announcement—at least some are doing so—that they will make deliveries but once a day. Shoppers are asked to carry home small articles and thus to do their share in eliminating waste.

HEATHENS THE BEST FOLK IN MARY WEBB'S NEW NOVEL.

"Gone to Earth" a Really Fine Story with a Wayward Gypsy Girl for a Heroine—Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick in "Salt of the Earth" Shows that the Germans are Kinsmen of the Devil—Hallie Ermine Rives Takes the Laurels for a Sensational Plot in "The Long Lane's Turning"—Patience Worth, the Psychic Mystery, Establishes Her Right to Literary Fame of a High and Unique Order with "The Sorry Tale."

"Gone to Earth."

A FEW weeks ago, or maybe months, we commented upon a new novel by a new author, "The Golden Arrow," by Mary Webb, and so far forgot our natural disposition as to try to be pleasant and convey the impression that "The Golden Arrow" as nearly approximated the worth-while novel as any book that had come our way in long, long time.

Mary Webb offers now a new novel, "Gone to Earth" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) It is a book to delight the mind and wring the heart. It has the perfection of a crystal with what to us appears as the slightly-flawed area in which Miss Webb, a little too palpably iconoclastic, is carried a little out of the way of her artistry in dogmatically driving home a personal contempt for the smugness of the righteous—an effort that is far from enhancing the masterly tragedy, which, as narrative, does that very thing. To make use of the current criticism phrases one must, we suppose, call "Gone to the Earth" realism. Of the many books that get themselves pigeon-holed under that handy word, this has more poetry and beauty in it than a sack full of

We disclaim any aversion to religious people, or even to the righteous, but for some reason for which we certainly not to blame the written and best constructed books of these times seem to ignore the decalogue. Perhaps it is the critic's duty to declare that such books are of themselves bad, no matter what merits of narrative, beauty or tragedy they have; for the Index expugatorius is, and long has been, a chief instrument among good people, so much so that Samuel Butler was constrained to remark that we should remember that only one side of the story has been told and therefore not judge the devil too harshly.

"Gone to Earth" is frankly on the side of the devil. Mary Webb's art gives admiration for the minister who deserts and scorns his God, and arouses the strongest dislike for the pious Misses Clomber, and positive hatred for Squire Reddin, who is regarded as a pillar of the church, while the sanctimonious delegation that waits on the minister fills one's heart with the satanic desire to strangle each of the rolling-eyed members.

Mary Webb herself is more than pagan—she is a heathen. Pagans have an intricate and refined mythic, venerate statuary best symbolized by a hard-boiled egg, and cultured shepherdesses talking to Radcliffe graduates to naked on the mountainside. Heathens are children, happy and fearful, of earth's mysteries, sinners though wayward and, being untrained in psycho-analysis, struggle blindly in the rip tide of emotions.

Hazel Woodus, upon whom Miss Webb has lavished art and love, child of a gypsy mother and cursed with a fatal slimness and beauty, is a heathen. In a remote mountain community of the English Hazel's beauty is inevitably dangerous; and she is caught in... in a strong, but childish devotion for Edward, the minister, whom she marries, and in a smoldering sex passion for Reddin, the hard-riding squire, whom she hates and fears, but to whom she yields repeatedly.

The tragedy is determined early in the story when Hazel's good aunt will not let her stay the night in the house, but turns her out to make the long walk home. On the way she is picked up by Reddin, but escapes from him, and is on the eve of marrying the minister when he finds her again. Reddin's passion for her will not be denied, and by that anomalous—but attraction by repulsion, she cannot escape him.

Hazel, half gypsy, is full of wild superstitions; and also of agonizing tenderness. She cannot endure cruelty, releases rabbits from traps, frees wild bees, finds a home for dogs and stray cats; but probably her dearest pet is a tame fox. Her chief superstitious dread is the legendary Black Huntsman and his pack of enormous hounds with fire for eyes. The fox furnishes a key, if not the key, to the underlying sympathy that the author has not only for Hazel, but for all wayward folk. Foxy kills fowls and steals meat, and when she is stormed at as a "bad dog," Hazel indignantly and persistently insists that Foxy is not a bad dog, but a good fox.

The story's tragedy, prescience of which runs like a motif from the opening chapter, comes swift to its inevitable climax. It could not well be otherwise, though Hazel herself, is such a strange exquisite creature, that the real tragedy is not that she misses happiness in a life she loved so intensely, but that so rare a character is blotted out.

Mary Webb, with, so far as we know, but two books to her name, is already entitled to a foremost place among the novelists of the day. Beside her, England's women, including Sheila Kaye-Smith, are a weak lot of scribblers; and if Thomas Hardy be, as wise critics who know all about such things insist, England's greatest living novelist, then he must move over a little and let Mary Webb get into the photograph, for his Tess is a less endearing and no more striking figure than Miss Webb's Hazel.

"The Sorry Tale."

It is impertinence to preface a review of "The Sorry Tale" with remarks on the ouija board; but we are becoming everlastingly bored by these novels that spirits write, excepting the inimitable Patience Worth, who, good as she is, has set the bad fashion. A few days ago a letter came belatedly to tell us that "Cleomenes," reviewed months ago, was an inspired spirit-written book like Patience Worth; and now upon our toes has fallen "Jap Herron," taken down by Emily Grant Hutchings on the ouija board with no less a personage than Mark Twain dictating—a singularly deteriorated Mark Twain, but it must be he, for there are two score pages of preface explaining how it came about. Elsa Barker may not use an ouija, but she plays amanuensis for fervid and poetical ghosts to the great wastage of note paper.

All of these stenographers for the heavenly host may be acting in good faith, but we doubt it; and we are quite sure that mortal output of fiction, poems and preachments is profuse enough without letting voices from across the grave contribute. We have read, or looked at long enough to lose the desire for reading, practically everything of any importance contributed by ghosts, and of it all nothing has appeared superior to the work of a third-rate live one excepting such messages as have come to Mrs. John H. Curran of St. Louis.

The story of Patience Worth has already been told in a book by that name published a year or so ago by Casper S. Yost, editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Now comes "The Sorry Tale" (Henry Holt & Co.) a story of great length, a novel, transmitted in the same manner, perfectly astounding as to style and even more remarkable as to construction, for there are at least four score characters handled with a grace and dexterity that would tax the most competent author; but more than all that is the great dignity of the narrative, which carries two parallel, but antithetical themes, that converge on Golgotha.

The night that Jesus is born within the walls of Bethlehem, outside of the wall the outcast mistress of Tiberius Caesar gives birth to a son whom she calls Hatte (Hate.) Through life they travel much the same roads, one bitter and burning with passion against the world as he has been schooled to be by his implacable mother, and the other spreading the gospel of love as recorded in the four books of the New Testament.

The book is at first extremely difficult to read. But in time the charm of the style takes hold and one is carried forward with every feeling of reading a contemporaneous record; though we are inclined to feel that if it had other than this fascinating origin the style was slightly affected with its quaint old words and forms. But as was disclosed in "Patience Worth" this remarkable personality has never made use of a modern word, which makes it a phenomenon rather than an affectation.

From what storehouse Patience has gleamed her intimacy of old Judea and of ancient Rome is conjectural and nothing more; but she writes of them as though she had seen and knew them. Her variety of characters, members of all races and trades, are carried along with the same personal familiarity; and it is only in writing of the Christ that she seems to stand at a distance, a reverent distance, taking Him as a Holy One and not merely a superman, and whether in following the scriptural records or relating apochryphal incidents, she has with biblical loftiness preserved her narrative in all that pertains to Christ.

The plot is scarcely a plot as we novel readers have come to regard the thing. "The Sorry Tale" moves slowly in action; but it moves over courses obviously well defined in the creator's mind, reaching a climax exceedingly dramatic when Hatte—son of the Roman Emperor—becomes one of those crucified with Christ.

"The Sport of Kings."

Arthur Somers Roche's "The Sport of Kings" (Bobbs-Merrill Company) is less hectic than "Loot" and "Plunder," but is inevitably built on a wide-reaching conspiracy of crooks who, in this case, control bucket shops and fix horse races. The association rules off Sale Kernan, a gallant and honest trainer, who is then taken on by Miss Leland, races her thoroughbred but spoiled Vivandiere on an outlawed track in Florida. He aspires to Miss Leland's hand; and a very capable crook does the same. Kernan intends that his horse shall run in square races; and the crook is just as set upon queering the races as he is determined upon ruining Kernan; and the game of wit and courage is played between them dramatically at times.

The story depends, as most of Mr. Roche's stories do, for considerable of its motive power upon fortuitous coincidence, accidental meetings, words overheard, and all that sort of thing with which those who aspire to sensational fiction take short cuts in developing the action.

"Salt of the Earth."

Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick has ironically applied her title, "Salt of the Earth" (W. J. Watt & Co.) to the Germans. That the Germans are kinsmen of the devil has been very well established by the novelists; and there are many who have used almost her identical theme—an English girl married to a Prussian officer—but her effort compares favorably with the best. She writes with a sense of intimacy that is intensified by a pleasing narrative ability tinctured with irony.

Brenda, the daughter of an Anglocised German family, who is herself English in everything but name, marries a German officer and at once finds herself disliked, insulted, and harassed by members of her husband's family and his friends. Lothar is the sort of Prussian officer regarded as typical; and it is the typical Germany that is represented — efficient, bullying, boastful.

There is little to the plot. Brenda is not asked in marriage by the one man she wants and goes to the officer, who wants her money. Before the war he studies London at night, and after the war directs Zeps, though he sees enough of the Belgian campaign to assist in the atrocities. But in the writing of her story Mrs. Sidgwick has been sober and objective considering the feverish urge of these times to abuse the enemy.

"The Long Lane's Turning."

Hallie Ermine Rives seems to have written the 'Long Lane's Turning" (Dodd, Mead & Co.) with the needs of the camera in her mind's eye. A more sensational plot is not often encountered even in these days of hectic monstrosities, and it will no doubt be fascinating to large numbers of people who, like ourselves, ought to know better.

To ring up the curtain on the last act would be treachery; so let it suffice to say that Henry Sevier, a brilliant young southern lawyer, unfortunately given to drink, is thrown over by Echo Allen because Craig Cameron, a whisky capitalist, blackmails her into the marriage assent. Sevier gets drunk, wanders innocently in Cameron's house while two cracksmen are busy with the safe; and all three intruders are forced into concealment behind the portieres while Echo and Cameron make the marriage barter. Cameron is shot, Sevier snatches the precious letters from the safe, forces them into the girl's hands and she flees. He is caught and sent to prison, from whence he escapes without ever having been recognized. He is run for and elected Governor on the anti-whisky ticket; but Cameron knows his prison secret and digs a pit—the rest for the reader to discover as best he can.

OTHER BOOKS.

"Lake and Stream Game Fishing."

How excellent may be Dixie Carroll's advice on "Lake and Stream Game Fishing" (Steward & Kidd Co.) we do not know, for like most of the really successful followers of Mr. Walton, we catch our fish at the butcher shop; but this book is charming company, and as editor of the National Sportsman, fishing editor of the Chicago Herald, and president of the American Anglers' League, it goes without our saying so that he speaks with the full round voice of authority.

The book is written in the choicest, smoothest, breeziest style imaginable, somewhat slangy but without roughness, flowing free as blank verse and setting the lure of the open places before one's nose. All phases of lake and book fishing, all manner of casting and tackle are discussed, with a plenitude of snappy advice at every turn on the page, giving one the feeling that Mr. Carroll is less of an instructor than an artist. And if there be any book that will give the baffled amateur inspiration to laugh at the past and plow up-stream again it is surely "Lake and Stream Game Fishing;" for Mr. Carroll is a thorough sportsman and looks at the game all the way from the true sportsman's eyes.

"Towards the Goal."

The sequel of Mrs. Humphry Ward's "England's Effort," written to show Americans what her country is doing, comes in the form of letters to Theodore Roosevelt and is called "Toward the Goal" (Charles Scribner's Sons.) The colonel must have been thought singularly ignorant, and altogether abstemious of the stuff furnished in news columns, if Mrs. Ward considered herself to be supplying him with information. The best part of the book is the colonel's preface, for his vigor is undiminished and his trancendent ability to be sensational without being so very inaccurate is impressive as ever.

But these chapters in the form of letters are too obviously written for the innocent bystander; and mob psychology is such that most anything Mrs. Ward has to say is of some interest, but anything she has to say to our colonel is of gulping interest, though it be pretty much a sketch of the campaign of the early war days, with generous—quantitative—descriptions of German ruthlessness. Though when our colonel says prefatorially: "No other writer could describe England's effort with such knowledge, power and interest," he is talking in a voice five times larger than life. Other writers have already done so.

"The Rebirth of Russia."

A few days after the Czar was gently lifted from his throne and tucked away in prison for safe keeping, Isaac F. Marcosson reached Russia and began asking questions. Also he stayed on for some weeks and watched. What he heard and saw make up the contents of "The Rebirth of Russia" (John Lane Company.)

Mr. Marcosson verifies all that has been reported of the German cabal in the court circle, and reveals a rather larger amount of graft and treachery among those in authority than was generally credited. Among his most interesting disclosures is the fact that the bureaucrats deliberately planned for and incited the people of Petrograd to an uprising—but for the purpose of putting it down severely and discouraging the people so that they would not soon again forget to respect their masters. But the odd part of the revolution was that nobody seemed to think that there was to be a revolution. It just happened—chiefly because the army refused to clear the streets, and went over to the Duma before that body had really dared to seize the reins.

Mr. Marcosson says that it was as quiet and peaceable a revolution as could be imagined. There was no looting, no drunkenness, no butchery except of the police who had been stationed on the tops of buildings and fired at the people. But after the revolution was accomplished the reaction set in. The soldiers knew that they had brought about the upheaval and made the most of their "equality." Mr. Marcosson, pursuing the policy of extreme optimism, refers to the letdown in discipline as merely "one fly" in the ointment of all this "equality." A somewhat larger fly was the truculent equality of the laboring classes. In the shipyards and factories the workmen struck. All asked for advances of more than 50 per cent., while the average was from 100 to 150, in wage. "With the demand for increased wages came its full brother—a demand for decrease in the working time. In some factories the workmen went to the well-nigh incredible extent of asking for a six-hour day with a nine-hour wage. Some workers blankly refused to work more than four hours per day."

Self-seekers, German agents, crazy agitators, visionary Utopians were in their glory; but some strong men were in the Duma and Kerensky, a young and unknown attorney, came to the front. And though Mr. Marcosson, with journalistic facility, conveys the impression that Russian stability is not a thing to be longer doubted, he has with very graphic fidelity also shown why even the strong men of the new government may not for some time successfully put the quietus to the violently conflicting, and often unreasoning elements in the new republic.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

Study of Short Stories.

The Oxford University Press announces the approaching completion of "Today's Short Stories Analyzed," a technical study of twenty-five contemporary magazine stories to be issued as a companion volume to Prof. Robert W. Neal's "Short Stories in the Making." Earlier appearance of the new volume was delayed through Prof. Neal's detail for service with the Massachusetts Committee on Public Safety.

"In German Hands."

"In German Hands," which E. P. Dutton & Co. are just publishing, is the diary of a young Frenchman, Charles Hennebois, who volunteered in the army at the outbreak of the war, was severely wounded in his first battle, early in October, was taken by the Germans and remained in their hands until the next July. It makes one of the most interesting documents the war has produced, for M. Hennebois is a young man of education and intelligence who before the war had laid out for himself the career of a writer and therefore he was well equipped to make a valuable report of his sojourn in the hands of the enemy. Some of those with whom he came in contact were kind and sympathetic and treated their wounded prisoners with humanity. He dwells with gratitude upon these, but there were others in plenty whose hearts were filled with hate and who seemed to delight in cruelty. The prisoners were often visited by professors and others who tried to convince them of the righteousness of Germany's cause. Not the least impressive feature of the diary is the constant revelation of the author's courage, his high spirits, his love of France. There is an introduction by Leon Daudet, son of the famous French novelist, who says that "Among all the innumerable books inspired by the war I do not think there is any more moving than this."

"We Can't Have Everything."

Rupert Hughes's new novel, "We Can't Have Everything," just published by Harper & Bros., tells a story of metropolitan life, of a girl who had never had anything and of a man who had always had everything, and of the manner in which his richness and her poverty colored each other, and the lives of many other persons as well; of how the scales began to tip the other way so that her wishes started to come true and his to be thwarted. "We Can't Have Everything" presents in one of its principal characters, a small-town girl who goes to New York, the same spirit which was revealed as a new quality in Mr. Hughes's recent book, "In a Little Town," although it was in reality by no means an innovation in his work.

A Rattling Good Yarn.

Wellington's campaign in Portugal has not been worn to a frazzle by the novelist, but comes with a sense of novelty and freshness to the reader of Rafael Sabatini's "The Snare" (Lippincott's,) a story glowing with life and adventure, without a dull page in it. Sabatini is at home with both Latin and English character, for he is a blend of both; his mother was English, and his father a member of a well-known Italian family. His life has been divided between England and the south of Europe. He is now, however, a member of an English publishing house.

Mary Parkman on Biography.

Mary R. Parkman, whose "Heroes of Today" and "Heroines of Service" will appear in book form in September, tells how she came to write these biographies. "During all the years of my teaching," she writes, "my special interest has been children's literature, and the selection and adaptation of the great world stories for the use of the story-teller. I was dissatisfied with most of the versions that have been prepared for children. They seemed to me trivial and childish rather than simple and childlike, and hopelessly lacking in true literary feeling. I took particular delight in making my own versions of the stories that I told. When I began to work up biographical stories of the great men of our own time for children of the intermediate and grammar grades, I discovered that it was practically an untouched field. The stories of the heroes and heroines of today which I have been contributing to St. Nicholas are the direct outgrowth of that discovery. They have appealed to children, and to children of larger growth that we call 'grown-ups.' It is the hope of the writer that they may meet a need and find a welcome with the larger public whom the books may reach."

"Italy at War."

Herbert Vivian's "Italy at War," which E. P. Dutton & Co. are preparing to publish very soon, gives an intimate view, written very entertainingly, of conditions, people and opinions throughout Italy during the time when the nation was in the throes of deciding whether or not she should enter the war and on through the succeeding year or more. The author spent much time in the country during the first year or more of the war and his account of all manner of incidents gives a more vivid picture of the sentiments of the people than any other writer has done. A chapter devoted to the methods and achievements of German espionage in Italy is likely to leave the reader breathless with amazement. There are chapters on many phases of the war, accounts of travel, descriptions of people and places, discussions of manners and customs and national peculiarities, all written with so much illustrative incident as to make it almost like a continuous moving picture. The illustrations of soldiers doing their work among mountain peaks and on perpendicular mountain sides show against what disadvantage Italy carries on her share of the war.

More Jack Lait Stories.

Coincident with the announcement of the successful advent of Jack Lait's book, "Beef, Iron and Wine" in London, another Jack Lait book is promised his American readers in the early fall. It will bear the names of the leading characters for its title, "Gus the Bus, and Evelyn, The Exquisite Checker."

"The Heart of Her Highness."

"The Heart of Her Highness" is the title of a new book by Clara Laughlin, author of "Everybody's Lonesome," which the Putnams will publish in September. Count Frederick of Falkenhorst, dreamer of dreams, prayed in the Chapel of the Precious Blood at Bruges that life might be made for him brave and beautiful and, lifting his eyes, gazed into drooping eyes of brown and knew that his prayer was answered, knew, too, in some subtle way, that he was agitating the owner of those eyes only a little less than she was agitating him. All unconscious of her identity he wooed her in stolen moments, deeming her, as she represented herself to be, some lady of the household of Burgundy and not the Duchess of Burgundy herself, the fair daughter of Charles the Bold, who, thereby to stave off the perils foreign and internal that threatened her dukedom, was destined, so her courtiers had determined, to become Dauphiness of France or Queen of The Netherlands or Empress-elect of Germany, and that too without delay, under the urge of an imperious necessity. Miss Laughlin's constructive ability and gift for stirring fiction have rarely been so happily applied as in the writing of this romantic tale.

The "Battle Hymn" Story.

Florence Howe Hall, whose book, "The Story of the Battle Hymn of the Republic," tells a great deal about its author, Julia Ward Howe, and in this connection a recent letter from Mrs. Hall is interesting: "The reason of the international character of my mother's hymn is that she was the wife of a man of international activities and sympathies. Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe had taken part in three European revolutions. In the bloody struggle of the Greek revolution (1822-29) he had served as soldier, surgeon-in-chief of the Greek fleet and as almoner for the charities of America. Finding the people of Greece exhausted and starving, he had returned to this country and preached a crusade in their behalf. In the French revolution of 1830, the famous 'three days,' he made one of the small band who escorted Lafayette to the Hotel de Ville. He wrote: 'I could not help joining in and cheering on the revolution.' "

Mark Twain's Address.

In "The House of Harper," which tells of the story of Harper & Bros., whose centennial comes this year, is a new story of Mark Twain.

One evening a few years ago Brander Matthews and Francis Wilson were dining together at the Players' Club in New York when the former made the suggestion that they write a letter to Mark Twain. "But," objected Mr. Wilson, "we don't know where he is," for it was at a time when Mr. Clemens was always traveling somewhere. "Oh," said Prof. Matthews, "that does not make any difference. It is sure to find him. I think he is some place in Europe, so we had better put on a 5-cent stamp."

So the two sat down and composed a letter which they addressed to

MARK TWAIN,
God Knows Where.

In due time they received a reply from Mr. Clemens which said briefly, "He did." Then someone sent a letter addressed, "The Devil Knows Where," which also reached him.

The Man Who First Said "Hun."

It is Rudyard Kipling to whom is attributed the honor of making the only contribution from any poet to the current speech of the British people regarding the war. It was he who applied the word "Hun" to the German.

"The Woman in White."

"The Woman in White," by Wilkie Collins, first published over half a century ago, has taken its place among the fiction that has enduring importance. It is shortly to appear in a new edition over the Putnam imprint. Unerringly the author conducts the reader through the mazes of a complex plot, seeking the elucidation of a mystery that ever entices on, yet tantalizingly eludes the grasp. The strange Woman in White with her hints of wrongs that have scarred the soul, with her prophetic and accusing vision, is an appropriate figure to encounter in the opening pages of a story that reveals the sinister designs of a man actuated by greed and unscrupulous in attaining his ends.

Book Announcements.

The Thomas Y. Crowell Company announces for immediate publication: "The Moderns," by John Freeman. A criticism of Shaw, Wells, Hardy, Maeterlinck, James, Conrad, Patmore, Thomson and Bridges. "Women War Workers," by Gilbert Stone. Accounts contributed by representative workers of the work done by women in the more important branches of war employment; with a foreword by Lady Jellicoe. "Two Years Before the Mast," by R. H. Dana, Luxembourg edition, with seventeen illustrations from photographs.

"The Gift of the Magi" Dramatized.

A dramatization of the O. Henry story, "The Gift of the Magi," has been completed by Mrs. Adele S. Burleson of Washington, and been accepted by Klaw & Erlanger for production at an early date. The play is in one act.

"THINKING."

Is thinking a science, an art or a profession? Henry Hazlitt, author of the latest book on "Thinking," calls it a science and an art. George Dorsey, author of "Young Low"—that delightful anthropological novel of a modern, human boy—makes one of his fascinating scientist characters declare that thinking is a profession, "as is fishing, lying, preaching, banking, or engineering."

Very early in his Harvard career, "Young Low" makes the discovery that he has a "right to think," and it is Huxley, as it happens, who discovers for him or helps him to discover his intellectual franchise. Here is Mr. Dorsey's description of the emergence of his hero's boyish mind from its conventional trappings and bonds:

"That night, high up in Weld [one of the Harvard dormitories] in front of my fire, I tried to puzzle it out. Huxley dares think such things, and a reputable firm dares print them. Surely, I, poor, insignificant I, have a right to think.

"And I did think. I had never felt that way before. I had never realized that I dare to think about these things.

"I felt as if a load had been lifted from me. I had no idea where it would lead—nor for the time did I care—but I felt mentally free for the first time in my life. And deep within me I knew what Huxley meant when he said that to him the chiefest good was freedom to learn, to think, and to say what he pleased when he pleased! Until now I had not dared hope for such freedom. . . . That was a memorable rainy day; and I was grateful to Huxley. I might have to pay a price for doubting, but it would be paid by a free man, not a bondman."

WASTED EDUCATION.

According to Dr. David Snedden of Columbia University, between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000 is spent in the teaching of French and German in the high schools of the United States every year. Dr. Snedden declares that much of it falls into disuse, few of the students being able to read or speak a line of French or German after five or ten years. Dr. Snedden would not eliminate French and German from the curriculum, but believes that fewer pupils should study foreign languages.

The best solution of the difficulty would seem to be a less expensive and more "enduring" method, and it looks as if such a method had at last been unearthed. The trouble with the $8,000,000 and $9,000,000 kind of methods is that they don't teach the pupils the most vital and therefore most important kind of French and German—that is, oral. No wonder the pupils forget everything they've learned when the most important part of the instruction they should have received has been forgotten. It is by use that one learns to depend on a foreign language and how can one use a language which one cannot speak? Reading and writing French and German, that is what our children have been acquiring all these years and that is the French and German for which we have been paying millions of dollars. The real leaven of the loaf—a speaking knowledge—has been left out. That's where the trouble lies.

What looks like a really practical and simple oral French method is that of Mlle. Alice Blum. She calls it her "Oral French Method," and judging from the distinguished men who are backing her in her claims that her method actually does teach one to speak French, it must be pretty good.

The Disappearing Wooden Car.

[Spokane Spokesman-Review:] It ought to give travelers a snug feeling of safety to come across a government report which shows that in 1916 only three wooden passenger cars were built in the United States. To be sure, there is still a very fair chance that the passenger is riding in a wooden car, because more than 39,000 of them are in service in the United States, but the feeling of security must nevertheless be present, for it is self-evident that the end of the old coach that resolved itself into splinters in a collision, and subsequently caught fire, is close at hand.

The substitution of the steel passenger car for the wooden one was accomplished single-handed by the safety-first movement. Safety is the one and only motive of the steel car. It costs more to build and more to haul, and offers the railroads little or no corresponding return in revenue. It does, however, cut down appreciably the probable casualty list from accidents, and in this manner may affect favorably railroad finances.

Impetus was given steel car construction by the unprecedented railroad prosperity of 1916, when large net earnings made extra expenditures easy. In 1916, 2313 wooden cars were retired from service.

That the current year will continue 1916's record is indicated by the fact that at the beginning of the year only ten wooden coaches were under construction.

A Woman to be Mayor.

[Philadelphia Public Ledger:] Florida has crossed the Rubicon of woman suffrage. The population of Moore Haven has petitioned a Philadelphia society woman who has been farming a 2000-acre ranch in the famous Everglades to accept the Mayoralty of that city. She accepted after the two men candidates personally requested her to take the office. Mrs. George Quintard Horwitz, the new Mayor-to-be, the first woman to break through the stone suffrage wall on the solid South, is one of the most widely-known women in the North.

In Philadelphia she has taken the lead in social, philanthropic and relief movements. In Florida she has answered the call of the nation for foodstuffs. She gave up her winter home in Palm Beach and took up the development of her estate in the Everglades. As the result she shipped from her farm more than fifty carloads of potatoes.

She will ship from that same farm in a few months more than 30,000 bushels of corn, hundreds of hogs and many head of cattle. She is now preparing to plant hundreds of additional acres of foodstuffs.

Moore Haven was incorporated several months ago, and it is the only city in the State with equal franchise rights for men and women. At a mass meeting two men were nominated for the Mayoralty. The fight promised to be spirited before the election.

The next morning one of the candidates asked Mrs. Horwitz to serve. She answered that if the people wanted her she would accept. A petition signed by all qualified voters was handed her that night.

The Last Cargo of Slaves.

[Southern Workman:] Perhaps the most interesting colony of negroes in America today is to be found in the State of Alabama, about three miles from the heart of Mobile. Here in a little town called Plateau lives a group of nine weather-beaten, grizzled old men and women, the remnant of the last cargo of slaves brought to American soil from the coast of Africa. The youngest is entering his seventy-sixth year; the oldest is no less than 116, while just a few years ago one of their number died who had seen more than 140 years.

They were brought to America in the summer of 1859. In '65 their emancipation came. For the next few years they were buffeted about by changing fortunes without any settled home.

One among them, wiser than the rest, saw the dangers of their unsettled condition. Not owning their homes, they could be turned out at any time, and, hiring themselves to strange masters in search of laborers, they might some day be carried off again into slavery, perhaps to Cuba or Porto Rico, for they learned that slavery still existed there. With such incentive behind them, they selected a tract of land just outside Mobile, on Three Mile Creek, and began the purchase of homes.

As one goes over and about Plateau, he is struck with the appropriateness of the setting in which this African colony is to be found. About one-half the town is owned by negroes; and, of the property occupied by them, at least 75 per cent. is owned by their own people. The largest single holding of land among them is between fifty and sixty acres. Another negro landlord owns and rents about twenty houses. There are nine stores, of which seven are owned and operated by colored men. The largest of them all is one of these seven, and represents a volume of business amounting to more than $11,000 annually.

The Shinkiro in Japan.

The Shinkiro, or mirage, is best seen in Japan from the village of Namerikawa, or the town of Uwozu, some five miles eastward of Toyama. From April to June, the wonderful mirage is at ots best. It appears at first like a faint mist on the horizon, and then dissolves in forests, castles, palaces, bridges, and marching troops and horsemen spread out like a panorama, visible from any point along the shore. This year the mirage was seen in February, which was very unusual, the sight being specially fine at the village of Fushiki, some seven miles west of Toyama city.

In ancient times the mirage was supposed to be the dreams of a monster clam, or a reflection of the dragon's palace at the bottom of the sea. If one takes rooms at the Tokyoro or the Fujimotoro inns at Uwozu, one can witness the mirage comfortably. The town has a public aquarium always open to view.

Where the Coyotes Howl.

[Kansas City Star:] "Ah!" said the daughter of a hundred New England somebodies, "how I should love to visit the boundless West—it is boundless, isn't it?—and go to sleep listening to the coyotes howl! You can hear coyotes howl in Kansas City, cawn't you?"

"Not all the time," responded the young man from the mouth of the Kaw. "You see, where my tent is located there is often so much fuss being made by lynchers, cowboys, Indians, and stage robbers about the time I go to sleep that I cannot hear the coyotes. But just before I left I thought I heard one howling on top of a 'steen-story building. But it was only the millionaire owner of the edifice. Solicitors for the Red Cross had chased him to the roof, where he had barricaded himself, and was screaming in agony, for fear they would catch him and compel him to come clean."

Quite a Restful Place.

[Harry A. Franck in Century Magazine:] Every one appears to be entitled to three guesses on the population of Quito (capital of Ecuador.) The figures range from 50,000 to 80,000, with the truth somewhere near the 75,000 attributed to it in Stevenson's time. Though more in touch with the outside world than Bogota, it has much of the same atmosphere of a city apart, a peaceful, restful spot, with some of the principal modern conveniences of a crude, break-down-often sort, but with little of the complicated life of the great centers of modern days.

It is a splendid place to play at life, to lie fallow, and to catch up with oneself, with nothing more exciting to stir up existence than the evening concert in the plaza mayor, where few of the inhabitants do not come to stroll at least once a week. A score of carriages rattle over its cobbled streets. The rails of a stret car line had been already laid years before our arrival, but the requisite cars had not yet even been ordered.

We of more powerful nations hardly realize what it means to live in so small a country until it is brought home by some such incident as hearing the entire Congress of Ecuador debate two hours whether it shall or shall not order two new electric light bulbs put up in front of the government palace.

Then and Now.

[Kansas City Star:] Before the Wattleses were married, many happy hours were put in trying to teach Mrs. Wattles to swim. She didn't make much headway, but that only prolonged the fun. When she screamed and clutched him round the neck, he willingly took his ducking, for to him it was sweet femininity relying on the stronger sex for protection. They were out in the same old lake the other night. She screamed and clutched in the same old way. But Occy broke away, leaving her to find her footing as best she could. When she got enough water out of her ears to hear what he had to say, he said, "Whatta you doing? Trying to strangle me?"

Painting the Navy.

Our battleships literally eat paint. The initial color requirements for a new battleship cost about $25,000, which is the price of about 100 tons of the kind of paint the navy uses. In addition to this, according to the Popular Science Monthly for September, it is customary to repaint the different parts of a ship two or three times a year, so the annual upkeep probably exceeds this sum. This brings the annual outlay in paint for the entire fleet to $1,000,000. The most important coating a vessel receives is the paint applied to the submerged parts of the hull to protect it from corrosion or barnacles.

Indians Sharp Bargainers.

Most people consider the American aborigines to have been easy victims of the sharper-witted whites in matters of buying and selling. A book about "The Original John Jacob Astor," however, declares that "the Indian was a great bargainer," and says that Astor needed all his resources to get the better of the Indians in an exchange of commodities. He is said to have been the first fur dealer to become really proficient in the languages of the Mohawk, Seneca and Oneida tribes, and this ability to talk to the Indians in their own tongue gave him great prestige among them.

IN THE REALM OF ART.

From "Pippa Passes."

Day!
Faster and more fast,
O'er night's brim, day boils at last;
Boils, pure gold, o'er the cloud-cup's brim
Where spurting and suppressed it lay,
For not a froth-flake touched the rim
Of yonder gap in the solid gray
Of the eastern cloud, an hour away;
But forth one wavelet, then another, curled,
'Till the whole sunrise, not to be suppressed,
Rose, reddened, and its seething breast
Flickered in bounds, grew gold, then overflowed the world.

The Spanish Paintings.

One's first impression of the sixty or more Spanish paintings that are now being shown in the gallery at Exposition Park is that of gaiety, of lightness of heart, and of a frivolity that comes dangerously near to callousness. The pictures are all by contemporary painters, and one wonders if these interpreters of Spanish life are holding the mirror up to nature at the correct angle.

These women, beautiful, elegant and inane, whose gorgeous cloaks are flung over the rails of the boxes at a bullfight—these showy cigarette girls, smiling and swaggering like their notorious prototype, Carmen of the opera, the inevitable red rose behind one ear—these handsome, flirtatious youths, powdered, perfumed and bedizened—do they represent life as it is lived in Spain today? Are they not rather the picturesque figures of a romantic past, still irresistibly fascinating to the imagination of the Gallic temperament?

One's first impression, I said. The second impression, indeed, is not that of the first, but differs so widely from it, and withal is so poignant and penetrating, that light and laughter are almost fled from the walls of the gallery. Gonzalo Bilbao may blithely assure us that all Spain is en fete, but he is quietly and firmly contradicted by such serious men as Eliseo Meifren, whose brush points out that the landscape is more somber than sunny, and Ramon de Zubiaurre and his brother, Valentin, both of whom give us searching portraits of the fine and self-contained peasant.

But the sum of all the various parts or impressions that we call art gives us the complete picture of life, and it may be that Bilbao has discovered as much of the truth about Spain as Zubiaurre, and that we need them both for full comprehension. Modern Spain, then, is gay and sunny, or grave and somber, according to your mood or point of view. Spain has produced the saccharine prettiness of Murillo as well as the deep beauty of Velazquez, the lightsomeness of Fortuny as well as the grotesque impressiveness of Goya. Though we cling to any one of these master painters, let us not be guilty of the banality of denying all the others.

It is true, however, that racial characteristics show themselves in a nation's art, and it is also true that the Spaniards are gayer than the English—though, perhaps not more heartless, in spite of the apparent evidence of bullfights, the national sport. The English, be it remembered, have their annual slaughter of foxes and pheasants, though this amusement is hardly national in scope, being very expensive. English art is more uniformly cheerful than the Spanish, though never so gay and never so somber—never so strong in the contrasts that spring from temperament.

Contrasts are not of necessity contradictions, but may be merely the light and dark of the soul, an individual's or a nation's. The spirit of Spain is shown as truly in Gonzalo Bilbao's devil-may-care "Figaro" as in F. Cabera Canto's sadly serious "Head," an old woman in a black shawl, a subtle piece of painting that has none of the flare of Bilbao's clever work. Juan Baixas Carate's "Happy Children" is no more of Spain than Valentin Zubiaurre's "Peasant with Jug," though the one canvas is full of sunlight, the other darkly toned, though the one is a bit of realism, the other carefully constructed and "organized" art. In brief, Spanish life, like American life, is "a dome of many-colored glass," and Spanish art strives to reflect every hue.

The Spanish pictures now at Exposition Park were shown in San Francisco and in San Diego, one year in each city during the time of the great expositions, and are still under the control of the Spanish art commission. Presumably they have been chosen with the utmost care, and are as representative of the Spanish art of today as any collection could possibly be. Many of them, as I have intimated, deal with superficial aspects of human life and outdoor nature, though a few, as I have also intimated, delve deep into "the heart of things." Some of the painters have inspirational moments in the course of dull and unprofitable hours. Such a man is Antonio Fillol, whose posed and perfunctory nude, "The Blown Flower," and equally posed draped figure, "The Old Clothes Woman," do not compare with his "Uncle Tenecha," in which we find quality and character. Note the magnificent modeling in hands and face.

Quality and character are also found in the works of the two Zubiaurre brothers, more especially and more consistently in those of Ramon, whose "Viscayan Peasants" and "Types of Segovians" rank among the most notably fine pictures in the collection. The still-life accessories, fruits and peppers in shallow dishes, are painted in a masterly way. Even lower in tone than these pictures are those of Valentin, the "Peasant with Jug," which is admirable, duskily red and black, and in "Peasant Couple," which gives evidence of the labored effort toward the primitive in technique so much affected by the ultra-moderns. Valentin can draw, but he likes to appear "naif" and pretend that he can't.

When the King of Brobdingnag sent for cigars to Spain (if he ever did) they must have come in a box whose cover was emblazoned with a picture exactly similar in size, color and design to Francisco Galofre Oller's "Key to the Bull Pen," an immense canvas, which is as empty as it is big, though it is crowded with lovely women whose silks and satins are painted with a meticulous and meretricious correctness.

The Spanish collection will remain at Exposition Park through the month of September. I shall have more to say of it on another occasion.

Two weeks ago I mentioned the name of Randall Davey, calling your attention to the fact that thirteen of the pictures were then being shown at Exposition Park. I promised a more detailed account of these pictures after I had made further study of them. Straightway the man who runs the gallery snatched them from the walls, and I am left with no more notes than I had before. However, though not so numerous as the nails in a church door, they'll serve—and incidentally they'll compel me to a certain brevity.

Like most of the other "moderns," Randall Davey began rather better than he continued. At any rate, he drew better last year than he does today, and at that time his color was more harmonious, if not so brilliant at it is now. He had not yet become thoroughly inoculated with his present "system" of color, and he had not quite forgotten the training in construction that he had in the schools. He is no more original today than he was then, though he thinks he is. All the moderns think they are amazingly and delightfully original and "different," though all are as alike as a row of peas in a pod. They consider themselves emancipated from the rules of the schools—as undoubtedly they are—but they have welded for themselves a set of laws that are tighter than those of the Medes. They are the slaves of technique far more undeviating than the academicians ever were. They must paint thus and so, or be damned.

They say they are free, but they are bound hand and foot. They say that they express themselves, but they follow the behests of Cezanne or Matisse, or some other master, not realizing that they are little more than imitators. They announce their grand discovery that everything under the sun is new, yet they hark back to the primitives and the prehistorics for inspiration and guidance. The motorist, who is certainly modern enough, is wiser than they, for he does not consult Adam as to the best way of running his machine.

Randall Davey is a very gifted young painter. He shows his talent in three or four of the paintings he recently exhibited, and in others he also shows us his limitations, which belong to his cult rather than to him. Freed from these influences, I feel that he would become a very fine painter. He is fine, for instance, in his portrait called "Capt. Dan Stevens, Lighthouse Keeper." The head and burly figure are superbly modeled, there is quality in the flesh of face and hands, and you are convinced that the portrait is a genuine characterization. You are not so sure of "Belibina," whose eyes are like a doll's, nor of "Little Portuguese," a jolly red-faced boy in a red jumper placed against a background of peacock blue, nor of "Lobster Man," which has a spurious appearance of breadth, but which, on close study, is found to be in reality pinched and small. In the last three pictures mentioned the artist was too much obsessed with his method.

In landscape Mr. Davey is seldom happy, being without subtlety and deficient in beauty, though there are charming grays in "Fog." Sometimes, as in "The Town," his brush slips over his canvas until he gives his surface the texture of tin, but even here the bank of clouds on the horizon is noble and true. "Northwest Day," it seems to me, has almost nothing to redeem it.

News and Notes.

Ernest Browning Smith is making some excellent studies at Redondo Beach, whose hills contain eucalyptus trees that are among the finest in Southern California.

The School of Illustration and Painting, No. 342 North Main street, formerly conducted by John Rich and William Cahill, is now in charge of J. Francis Smith, whose "Smith's Academy" is one of the notable art schools of Chicago.

Preparatory to its fall opening, the art gallery conducted by Elizabeth Battey in Pasadena is being enlarged and improved. It will be much better lighted than before, and its walls will be of an agreeable neutral tint.

J. W. Theiss is contemplating giving an exhibition of water colors at Santa Rosa, where he lived some years ago. Only small pictures will be shown, but they will be among the artist's latest and best.

The studio of William Swift Dantell at Laguna Beach has been rented by Lillian Ferguson, the Hollywood arist, who will occupy it until the middle of October.

A general meeting of the California Art Club was held last night in the rooms of the club, Normal Hill Center, when interesting amendments providing for a sustaining membership were made.

Warren E. Rollins, who is now in Santa Fe, N. M., will hold an exhibition of his Indian figure subjects in New York next winter.

Mary B. Bemus has been painting in oils and water colors at Hermosa Beach this summer. She will spend the fall at Arch Beach.

Soldier's Superstitions.

[New York World:] Soldiers have a superstition that wearing the clothing or equipment of a fallen soldier will cause the death of the wearer. This superstition does not extend to the belongings of a foe.

It is considered unlucky to meet a crosseyed woman on the way to active service. Some soldiers firmly believe that in such a case they are almost certain never to return. Meeting a crosseyed man, however, is believed to have the opposite effect and to bring good luck.

It is considered unlucky for a soldier who is lying awake before bugle has sounded reveille to hear a dog bark. He is certain to meet with some mishap before the day is over, according to those who believe in "signs." On the other hand, if the sound heard should be the crowing of a rooster, the soldier is mightily pleased. All will be well with him that day.

There are many superstitions connected with the canteen. It is considered unlucky to refuse to drink with a stranger or to have a drink cheaper than that of the person who plays host. It is also unlucky to leave any of the drink in the glass or to finish off one drink without wishing for the next one. It is unlucky to sing, whistle or hum the tune of a hymn in the canteen, and it is very unlucky to whistle or hum anywhere the tune of the well-known dead march in "Saul."

One of the superstitions of the English "Tommy," born in the present great war, is that of lighting three cigarettes with one match. To do so, the soldiers say, means the speedy death of one, if not all three of the group.

There are many explanations of this superstition. Probably the most plausible is that of its being symbolic of the three candles placed at the coffin of the dead. Because it has been the custom to place two at the head of the coffin, and one at the foot, it has long been considered in England a bad omen to have three lights burning in a room. It is considered a "sign" that a death is soon to occur.

BITS OF VERSE.

Speaking of Congress.

Before the Congressional Record
Brought daily its message of joy,
We thought the disputes of those Senator coots
Where half of 'em bunk and half hoy.

Before we had read in its columns
The dope on the Musnud of Reps,
We'd heard their harangues would give sharp, shooting pangs
And the President Ought to take Steps.

But we state (now we get 'em firsthanded)
To those who think Congress pulls bunk—
You may censure 'em hard—it's all one to this bard—
But we think as we always have thunk.
—[Chicago Evening Post.

The World Needs Men!

The world needs men. The whirring wheels
Of the universe sound the call!
From the lowliest state to seats of the great,
From the bench to the lawmakers' hall!
The world needs men of brains and work
To do the things that the shirkers shirk.

Up, man, and build! The ground is cleared
And awaits but the master hand!
This thing shall be wrought by the Toiler's thought
While the Sluggard shall dig in sand!
The Loafer may lounge, but the thing for You
Is off with your coat, and up and Do!
—[Henry Edward Warner in Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Noon on the Coast of Maine.

Languid lapse of a wave,
Clouds in a filmy drift,
Light that mistily mutes the tint
Of ocean-sparkle and forest glint,
Gray rocks, weathered and grave,
Shadowed by ledge and rift.

Purplish-green of the pines,
Hazy blue of the sea—
Into one rich warm draught is blent
Sharp sea-tang and soft pine-scent,
And a single breath in my soul combines.
Earth and infinity.
—[Charles Wharton Stork in Boston Transcript.

Tossing a Drink.

I like to watch the soda clerk
Dispensing fizz,
A thorough artist at his work
He surely is.

He pours a drink to please the fair
Admiring buds
And makes a rainbow in the air
Of sparkling suds.

Sometimes he makes a blunder, though,
And then we grieve
To see a lot of soda go
Into his sleeve.
—[Louisville Courier-Journal.

No Compromise.

Unhappy he, who knows the right
Yet for it is afraid to fight,
Yet worse is he, who'll side with wrong
Because he thinks the foe is strong;
That man has little soul within His breast, who'll compromise with sin.
—[Detroit Free Press.

The Hunger of Today.

She was so waxen frail it seemed one might Have seen the red blood stir under the white
Transparent skin of her—
Had famine left there any blood to stir.
I wondered, I, the traveler, strong, well fed,
When she had tasted bread.
One thing was left her—light—
And sitting by her window there, she read.
"What is your book?" I said.
She showed the title, "Hunger."
"Truly told?"
She answered, "Maybe, sir, I do not know.
This hunger was a hundred years ago."
"But does he paint the hunger of today?"
The eyes she raised were infinitely old,
Round her drawn lips the shadow grew more gray,
And with a strange, thin smile that turned me cold
Silent, she shook her head.
—[Amelia Josephine Burr in the Bellman.

The Song of the Day.

Oh, come into the garden, Maud,
And pick the beans and peas;
Oh, shell them in your winsome way,
Then can them at your ease;
For you have joined the army, Maud,
Which must conserve the food,
And your endeavors to that end
Must all be to the good.

Oh, come into the garden, Maud,
Put off your garb so fine;
In overalls, pick luscious fruit
From the tomato vine,
And get your patent canner out
To put up many cans,
That 'twist the appetite and food
You may proclaim the banns.

Oh, come into the orchard, Maud,
And pick the precious peach,
Likewise the apple and the pear,
That plenty you may reach,
And so increase the food supply
For woman, child and man;
So get to work, dear Maud, and can
As many as you can.

The Origin of Philosophy.

The world is made of dirt and water.
Thus fraught with truth did Wisdom bud;
And then she grew a little fraughter,
And said these two make mud.
And from this mud at once there sprouted
The three schools of philosophy
By which mankind have ever pouted,
Or borne their destiny.
To keep out souls a little drier,
One school stands in the mud and blubbers,
The second set denies the mire,
The other gives us rubbers.
—[Chester Dennis in Century.

The Sun-kissed Flag.

The sun-kist flag,
The banner born to be
Our symbol of the light
That makes us free;
Day after day you fly
Above us in the street;
Day after day more high,
More beautiful and sweet,
More holy in your sign
To us of nobler things
And that the right divine
Dwells not with earthly kings,
But with that heaven alone
That gives us strength and might
To hurl 'gainst every throne
Our shards of light.
—[Folger McKinney in the Baltimore Sun.

HAPPY THOUGHT CLUB
SYMPOSIUM.

AT LAST accounts the Old Resident was trying to arrange an aerial Marathon in connection with the annual meeting or outing of the Happy Thought Club, which will be pulled off as a double-header for the Admission Day festivities. He wanted to have a flock of airships and proposed to give a purse of 2500 yellow beads to the aviator who could keep his feet off the ground the longest. But most of the heavenly explorers are signed up with Uncle Sam and it is hard to get up an independent crowd of them. The best the veteran could do was to get the use of a pair of full-fledged biplanes and if nothing else happens he is going to flutter one of them himself. The venerable scout has already made several trips as a passenger and he says derisively that any good pinochle player can run the thing. There are no traffic cops, rocky roads or speed limitations and after you are started there is nothing to it but the stop. For that he has a system. Just as he is about to strike the ground he jumps off and walks.

It is all very simple.

So he says.

One of his machines he calls Phoebus and t'other Pegasus. Both are named after high fliers. If the old man gets permanent possession he will soar Phoebus by day and work Pegasus on the night shift. If the harpies should happen to be flying at the same time they better watch out or they'll lose a wheel. Naturally the poets think highly of Pegasus and are staking their money on that mechanical bird.

After all it looks as if the outing of the club would have its feature and be something more than a hard-holding tournament.

The president of the club has not yet returned from the northern woods, whither he went to be measured for a wooden leg. This was his idea of preparedness in view of the fact that he expects to be drafted into his country's service some day. In his absence the chair was yesterday filled by Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes, the club custodian.

Prof. Hughes reported in connection with the forthcoming film production of the "Entanglements of Helen" that he had come across an ancient copy of the Troy Palladium, of which the venerable Michael Priam was editor and proprietor. It contains a full account of the fight between Ajax, who was known as the Greek battler, and Hector, the Troy terrier. The scrap went twenty rounds to a draw and people came all the way from Utica and Rome to see the match, which was for the welterweight title. Even the skirts were out in force and Helen sat in a box and wore Hector's colors—and he a married man! At that the fight was like a trip to the slaughterhouse and it was hardly a place for the ladies. From the sound of the gong the rival heroes sought to beat each other to a pulp and it was all that the referee could do to pry them apart at the end of each round.

Each man had an almost unbroken string of victories to his credit, so that it was a battle of champions. The Troy ring fans thought Hector had a shade the best of it, but the referee, who was none other than Bugs Homer, called it a draw and what he said went.

This scrap will be given in detail in the coming film production, but in the play the two warriors are supposed to be battling for the favors of Helen, whose richly upholstered flat will be opened to the survivor and who shrieks with joy when she sees that there are two of them.

Some liberties have been taken with history, but the playwright who doesn't take liberties with Clio is a sissy.

In connection with the mahogany bureau of marriage verse Bess Grady, the contralto cut-up, announced the wedding of Robert Edison Ward to Miss Dora Steele. When asked what she proposed to do about it she said that she had already made a faint wheeze out of the affair, which glided in this simple fashion:

"When Robert Ward wed Dora Steele,
One could not help the feeling
It savored of a crooked deal—
'Twas R. E. Ward for Steeleing."

John Godfrey Fortune, the Long Beach pelican, reported that a most curious combination had befallen in his neighborhood. He said that a young lady named May Swallow was engaged and about to be married to a man named Wright Foote. He asked that if the club did not think, from a humanitarian point of view, that the marriage should be broken? In any event, might it not be best for the bride to have her face stitched up a bit to avoid complications.

But, at that, there is plenty of chance for complications.

Bards who were busying themselves with the prospective union of Peter House and Etta Lott were grieved to learn that the engagement had been broken. There is still a vacant Lott in Hollywood and an empty House in Santa Monica.

Ben Goode Long, who learned to write verses while working in a barber shop at San Pedro, says he did not get his offering in the new advertising hymnbook, which was so suspiciously started at last week's symposium. He still had a fragment in his system, which began in this way:

"Oh, where shall rest be found—
Freedom from every care?
No use to hunt around,
Just try our morris chair."

It is really too bad that this revised hymnal cannot be completed in time for the Billy Sunday meetings.

Marcus Downe, the West Side exponent of advanced thought, made some comment on a lay sermon about Solomon in the Times Magazine, and intimated that Solly was a chip off the old block and that both he and his dad would be considered live wires if they were knocking around among the bright lights today. He summed up his fancy with this bit of verse:

The Wise Guys.

Kings Solomon and David
Led merry, merry lives,
With a host of merry sweethearts
And their many, many wives.

But when old age crept o'er them,
With its many quirks and qualms,
King Solly wrote the Proverbs,
While David wrote the Psalms.

Just before the symposium closed Gentleman George, the pink peach promoter of Lankershim, said that he had a wedding announcement from out his way that he thought the club might be interested in. The happy pair were Miss Dulcie Week and Mr. John W. Day. It affected him this way:

"A Week is lost; a Day is found,
But Time need not complain,
There'll soon be little Days enough
To make the week again."

Zebulon Schoolcraft Skidaway, the happy Hottentot of Hawthorne, expresses a desire to join the club. He thinks he could keep awake during the sessions and every now and then he is apt to break out into bright thoughts. He thinks that the optimists and pessimists should go together and that it would never do to have a world all made up of one kind. Likewise, he says that people are not always what they seem. In summing it up in a poem to the club custodian, he says:

Lines to a Horse.

The merry heart most sadly sings,
The grief-closed eye no teardrop flings,
If you are mad, why, we should worry.
Your anger only makes me purry.
The lilies toil not, neither spin,
And it's the class I think you're in.
The members of the Happy Thought
Bring fame and fortune—ach, mein Gott!
While you are snoring in your bed
I have to hustle for my bread.
Still, you're a pretty decent lad,
And never wicked when you're bad.
I'm sure when other folks would croak,
That death will pass you for a joke.

On his showing and promises, Bro. Skidaway will be permitted to wear the brass button of the first degree.

While the secretary, Marjorie Evelyn Heartsease, was working on her records the Old Resident took out his blue pencil and wrote in a bold hand on the back of a blotter:

"Believe me, dame, I'd be a doggone pup,
If for your sake I wouldn't drain Locusta's cup."

"There it is again," sobbed the secretary. "Always talking about rushing the growler."

But it was noticed that they left the symposium together.

Meanwhile, all club correspondence, applications for membership or offerings of marriage poetry or other verse, may be addressed to Eugene Brown, editorial rooms, The Times.

Another German Trick Fails.

[Springfield Republican:] It is like old times to hear of the closing of the University of Warsaw and the Polytechnic Institute because of demonstrations by the students. After the occupation the Germans made a great parade of their liberality in allowing lectures to be given in Polish by way of contrast with the severe repression exercised by the Czar's government. Unhappily, it was in contrast, too, with the treatment of Prussia's share of partitioned Poland, and if made permanent this lavish generosity to Russian Poles would have been likely to breed trouble in Posen and West Prussia. But of course it was only a trick to induce the Poles to fight Germany's battles, and whatever chance of success it might have had definitely failed when the Russian people deposed the Czar and declared in favor of full freedom for Poland. In any case, no people on earth, except possibly the Irish, would be less likely to get on with a Prussian military governor than the Poles, who are never more haughty than when prostrate and helpless. Gen. Von Beseler presumably did all that his Prussian training permitted in the way propitiation, since that was to Germany's interest, but the closing of Warsaw University merely marks one more failure of blandishments which are dictated by policy and do not come from the heart. In Flanders the failure seems to have been hardly less complete.

Save the Pigskin.

[Louisville Courier-Journal:] The great shortage of leather is a serious matter. Substitutes for sole leather, much advertised as superior, are in the experimental stage. Some of them, undoubtedly, are not as good as leather. Concealed in shoes, under leather, pasteboard and other almost wholly worthless substitutes for shoe leather are used. All leather products are selling at prices decidedly embarrassing to persons who must use them. In the meantime pigskin is being to a great extent neglected as a leather supply.

The general custom is to leave the skin upon the hog when it is butchered. The impression is or has been that it is necessary to retain the skin upon hams and bacon to cure the meat properly. In the stress of war and leather shortage means should be found to cure hams and bacon without the skin, which is not eaten and is wasted except in so far as it serves as a preservative of the meat for which it serves as a container during the curing process.

Pigskin is a highly valuable and durable leather. It is especially good for saddles, to judge from the values set upon saddles described as being made of pigskin. The number of hogs produced by modern feeding in a given length of time is greater than the number produced under old-fashioned methods, which allowed a longer period for the development of the hog to maturity. The big eight-months-old sold at or above 200 pounds is the aim of hog raisers, and is becoming much commoner in the markets than formerly. For the supply of the armies and the civilian population of the countries allied against Germany America must produce an unusual number of hogs from this time forward. Their breeding, the conservation of litters, the early finishing of hogs by scientific feeding methods, which make the eight or ten months' pig as large as the year-old or fifteen-months-old hog formerly was, will be stimulated by propaganda and by the prospect of profits at the farm. If a larger proportion of pigskin could be used as leather the price of serviceable leather stock might be kept much below the threatened levels during the war.

Surely meat can be cured without the hide being employed only to become waste when the meat comes to the table.

Economy.

[Kansas City Star:] With hogs at $20 a hundred, it certainly is up to the packers to make something more useful than phonograph records out of that squeal.

Lines set solid are counted strictly by the word. In paragraphed or lined-up matter set in caps, estimate five (5) average words to the line; if not set in caps, estimate five (5) words to the first line and eight (8) average words to each line following. In this kind of matter the actual number of words set will be counted, and eight (8) words added for each unfilled line.

On and after May 1, 1917, Classified Advertising CHARGED TO ACCOUNTS will be computed on the basis of 8 cents a line daily and 11 cents a line Sunday under classifications subject to the prepaid rates of 1 cent and 1½ cents per word; and 16 cents a line daily and 20 cents a line Sunday under classifications subject to the prepaid rates of 2 cents and 2½ cents a word. Minimum space 2 lines.

The Times reserves the right to classify all advertisements under appropriate headings.

The Times cannot guarantee accuracy or assume responsibility for errors of any kind occurring in telephoned advertisements.

The Times will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion of any advertisement ordered for more than one time.

Errors not the fault of the advertiser, which lessen the value of an advertisement, will be rectified only by republication without extra charge, on presentation of receipt within [illegible] days after insertion. No allowance will be made where the error does not materially affect the sense or purpose of the advertisement. No adjustment will be made for advertising not affected by an error or errors which occur in other items in the same advertisement.

Advertisers should retain receipts given by The Times for payment of "liners," as no mistake can be rectified without them.

The Times will not accept phone or verbal orders to discontinue or charge "till forbid" advertisements.

Advertisements ordered for insertion in Sunday Times cannot be discontinued or changed after 6 o'clock p.m. Saturday.

Telephone orders to discontinue advertising in The Times are numbered in the order of their receipt, and in each instance the number of the order is given to the advertiser, who should make a record thereof. In case of dispute no charge for advertising will be rebated unless the "stop order" number is presented to The Times by the advertiser.

The Sunday circulation of The Times exceeds [illegible] copies, and more "liners" are regularly printed in its columns than in the five other Los Angeles newspapers combined.

Telephone your want advertisements. Ring up "The Times," Main 8200; Home 10391, any hour of day or night, and secure prompt and careful attention.

The Times does not knowingly accept objectionable advertisements of any kind or character—medical, whisky, turf, lottery, "get-rich-quick," etc.—and it uses every reasonable precaution to keep its advertising columns clean and wholesome.

This is a guaranty of protection to its readers, as well as to its legitimate advertising patrons.

SPECIAL.

FORD SEDAN—The only reason the former owner of this car did not install more extra equipment, was because there was no more available space to hand it. Our space is limited, so here is a partial list: Electric lights and starter, shock absorbers, bumpers, clock, cut-out, speedometer, large tilting steering wheel, special radiator and interior finished in special gray Bedford cord. If you are looking for an inclosed car you had better investigate this one. The price is right.

The announcement we made in this paper three weeks ago today of our restyled, rebuilt Studebakers resulted in our disposing of all of them within a few days, and orders for five more. We have caught up with this demand and will have four more this week and expect the first one Monday. Of course we cannot prevent our competitors from copying our ads almost word for word, but they cannot hope to duplicate the value we give, so do not be misled, but get your order in early and get your choice of colors.

BUY A USED CAR FROM THIS COMPANY

EITHER FOR CASH OR ON TERMS, USE IT

SEVEN DAYS ON TRIAL AND IF IT IS NOT SATISFACTORY, TURN IT BACK TO US.

We know that this is an exceptional proposition, but we have unlimited faith in any used car that we rebuild and guarantee. We have tried to prove this to you in offering the liberal guarantee and service that we have done in the past. We have proved it to hundreds. Now we want to reach the most skeptical purchaser of a car, the type of man who would rather put up with a cheap new car in preference to a high-grade used one. His only reason being that he does not believe that he can get a real serviceable used car.

Anyone prefers a high-grade used car to a cheap new one, for it is the most economical investment from every viewpoint and there is a great deal more satisfaction derived from the possession of such a car. We will prove to you by this offer that we are willing to stand back of any car we offer for sale and, while no doubt other reputable dealers will follow our lead, it is up to you to remember that this is the first company to back up its convictions.

We have a select stock of used cars for your approval. You must not fail to look them over. We are not speculators in used cars. Our business is the sale of new Chandler Sixes, and this car has been so popular that we have been in a position to pick and choose the used cars we have accepted in trade on new ones. IF WE

CONSIDER A CAR GOOD ENOUGH TO ACCEPT

ON A NEW CAR WE ARE CERTAIN TO PUT IT

IN PERFECT CONDITION, AND, THEREFORE,

ARE WILLING TO GUARANTEE IT FULLY.

FOR SALE—
GERMAIN'S POULTRY COLUMN.

COULSON'S NO. 3 CONDITION POWDER—There is still time to get your hens in condition for winter laying. No. 3 Condition Powder is the best known tonic for toning up and regulating the digestive organs of hens and getting them in condition for increased egg production.

COULSON'S EGG FOOD—This excellent food contains all the necessary ingredients for egg production. Hens that are kept in a confined quarter must have a scientifically prepared food in order to produce eggs and Coulson's Egg Food is prepared to meet this necessity. For perfect results keep egg food before your hens all the time and give them an additional feed of Coulson's Scratch Food morning and evening.

PREMIUM DEVELOPING FOOD is prepared expressly for growing chicks by the Germain Seed & Plant Co. It is a perfect food for developing and insures a uniform growth and feathering.

DARLING'S MEAT CRISPS—This highly concentrated food contains a large per cent of protein and takes the place of meat. If your hens had a wide range they would be able to secure their own protein in the shape of worms, grubs, flies, etc., but when they are kept in pens and runs it is absolutely necessary that you feed them a highly concentrated protein food. Darling's Meat Crisps is the cheapest and most efficient protein food on the market.

CONKEY'S LICE LIQUID and LICE POWDER—Nothing cuts into the profits of chicken raising like lice and mites. Get rid of these troublesome pests with Conkey's Lice Liquid and Lice Powder. The liquid positively exterminates mites and the powder is a very effective lice eradicator.

PAINT WITH CARBOLA—Paint your coops, nests, roosts and outhouses with this sanitary disinfecting white paint. Get ready for the winter season when your flock will have to stay indoors a part of the time. Make your coops clean, sanitary and light. Will not flake, peel off nor warp.

MINING—

"THERE ARE OTHERS THINK SO, TOO, IT seems."

The "Times" of Aug. 13-17, on Page 7, Part II, commenting upon a certain oil well, makes this remark: "Though the best of geologists have condemned this property, there is one unanswerable truth, that cannot be denied, and that is: No one can see, or determine with certainty, what is underneath the surface of the ground, only by drilling the property."

This has been and is still our argument, so why waste time and money doing anything else?

FILM MAN CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT

ARRESTED ON COMPDAINT OF LOCAD ACTRESS.

She Says She Gave Him More than Four Thousand Dollars to Invest in the Business and that He Did not Give it Back—He Denies It.

Joseph K. Gorham, president of the Gorham Photoville Company, No. 1766 Allessandro street, a well-known motion-picture promoter, was arrested last night by Detectives Tom O'Brien, J. L. Kirby and Buck and booked at the Central Station on the charge of felony embezzlement.

The arrest was made on a warrant issued a few days ago by Judge J. W. Summerfield, on a complaint sworn to by Miss Marie Hansen, a motion-picture actress. He is charged, according to the police, with the embezzlement of $4100, which Miss Hanson is alleged to have given him for the purpose of securing an interest in a producing company in which Gorham is said to be interested. The arrest was made by the detectives when they recognized Gorham's automobile and traced him to his rooms at the La France apartments.

Detectives Burgess and Gamash, who have been handling the case, declare Gorham asserted his willingness to see that Miss Hanson's claims were satisfied. The prisoner was released when he furnished a $3000 cash bail. He denies the charge.

DISCOVER SCHOOL FOR SMUGGLERS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—An alleged school of instruction maintained at Hongkong by an international smuggling organization, operated through United States immigration officials, will be brought to the attention of the Federal grand jury as the result of a conference today between United States Attorney John W. Preston and Solicitor John B. Densmore of the Department of Labor, it was predicted.

The disbarment of Attorneys O. P. Stidger and Henry C. Kennan from practice in government immigration stations and before the Department of Labor several days ago has been followed by an investigation reported to have unearthed new evidence. It is alleged another attorney has been involved.

The operations of the alleged organization are reported to be the training of coolies in China for the smuggling of them into this country.

CONDUCTORS TO BE DIPLOMATS.

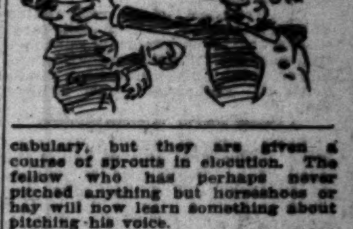
Pacific Electric Aspires to Chesterfield Standard.

Instructs in Art of "Thank You" and "Please."

And Even Leads 'Em to Font of Elocution Lore.

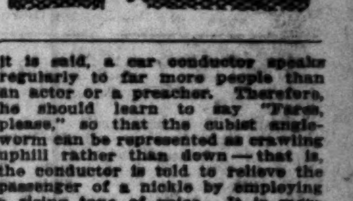
Every car conductor a Chesterfield—that is the ideal of the Pacific Electric. To help attain it, detailed instructions as to what to say and how to say it under varied circumstances are being issued to the men.

Not only are the conductors instructed to add "please," "thank you" and "I am sorry" to their everyday, rain-day and Sunday vocabulary, but they are given a course of sprouts in elocution. The fellow who has perhaps never pitched anything but horseshoes or hay will now learn something about pitching his voice.



All this instruction is being done through the medium of a magazine issued by the Pacific Electric to employees. Regularly in this publication appears a section devoted to "The Standard Code of Courtesy," to which every collector of fares is now expected to measure.

To assist in the more or less obscure business of pitching the voice the conductor is given a diagram in which he finds his tone represented by what might otherwise have been a cubist picture of an angleworm. Also he is reminded that actors and preachers have found it necessary to carefully cultivate tone and expression in order to "get over" what they say. But, it is said, a car conductor speaks regularly to far more people than an actor or a preacher. Therefore, he should learn to say "Fares, please," so that the cubist angleworm can be represented as crawling uphill rather than down—that is, the conductor is told to relieve the passenger of a nickle by employing a rising tone of voice. It is more pleasant than the opposite. "The voice with the smile wins."



DING! DING!
CONDUCTOR SPELL NOT TIME TONIGHT

The old business of the obsolete transfer—ruined, perhaps, by an attempt to stretch it all the way around a shopping tour—is to get some new treatment, according to "The Standard Code of Courtesy." Football tactics are taboo. In such a time-honored controversy the conductor may still need a gas mask, but not the passenger. "I am sorry I cannot accept it," the car man is to say, and carefully explain that, while his own feelings are lacerated because of the transfer's pitiable condition, the cruel company has rules that the conductor cannot possibly break.

Also the conductor will no longer intone: "Say you! This transfer's no good. Whadda ya have to tear it for?" No, indeed. He will say, instead: "I am sorry I cannot accept this transfer. It is mutilated."

THANK YOU—VERY—VERY—MUCH!

The essence of the code of courtesy is summed up in this paragraph addressed by the company to conductors:

"You are the salesman for the Pacific Electric. Some of the rest of us manufacture our product—transportation—and you sell it. Salesmanship requires study. The first thing a salesman has to do is to get in right with his customer. The P. E. Standard Courtesy Code for train operation will enable you to do just that. It gives us the right introduction. It supplies you with the right thing to say. It places the passenger who is unreasonable where he has no 'come back' and must win for you the sympathy of every fair-minded person on your car."

VALUATION GROWS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENTURA, Sept. 1.—For the first time in the history of this city the valuation has gone over $2,000,000. The figures prepared by City Assessor Isenace show a valuation of $2,037,345 for this year.

Experience.

OUR AVIATORS ABROAD TO AID OUR RECRUITS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Sept. 1.—American aviators serving in the French army, including the relatively small group forming the Lafayette Escadrille, have been canvassed by American officers as to whether they wished to leave their present service and join the American army. Seventy per cent. of the Americans immediately said they would like to go to the American army and aid in the formation of an experienced aerial corps.

Almost all the remaining 30 per cent. replied that they would join the American army conditionally. One condition often mentioned was the paragraph in the United States army regulations forbidding American soldiers from wearing foreign decorations. Many of these aviators have won by deeds of great courage some one or all of the French military orders, the Legion of Honor, the War Cross or the Military Medal. Under the French service regulations these decorations or ribbons representing them must be worn always on the uniform. The Americans are proud to have these distinctions and consider it would be lacking in respect for them to go into the American uniform and discard the French decorations.

It has been suggested that the American regulations might be changed by new legislation which might also include a provision for the bestowal of the American Medal of Honor upon foreign officers and soldiers for conspicuous gallantry.

Bizarre.

RUN WATER UPHILL IN TULARE LAKE COUNTRY.

Even Reservoir's Bottom Not Safe in Land of Twisted Precedence.

A STORAGE reservoir below the level of the lands to be irrigated, a canal system where all the waters are forced uphill, a lake whose bottom is so valuable for farming that men have tried to dry up its waters, a district where every known rule of a well-behaved irrigation and reclamation enterprise is reversed—that is the Tulare Lake region of California.

The magnitude of the acreage involved is tremendous. The fate and the control of Lake Tulare in one way and another involves 500,000 to 600,000 acres, an area as great as that of the reclaimed portion of Imperial Valley. The success of an additional reclamation project of 500,000 acres is also involved, while the city of Stockton, more than 200 miles to the north, has said that, before the final disposition of the lands and waters of the lake is made, its voice must be heard.

This freakiest of all reclamation enterprises is, in fact, of such magnitude that it is generally conceded that only the unlimited resources and power of the United States can finally settle it. Uncle Sam must in time step in.

ANGELENOS INTERESTED.

Los Angeles men have hold of the most unusual of the Tulake Lake enterprises. Because of the number of Southern Californians who own land or have money in the various undertakings, the district may really be called a part of Southern California, although it is equally distant from Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The "lay of the land," topography as the engineers call it, is responsible for all the oddities. To the average traveler the topography seems simple enough. To the east is the huge and wide mountain range of the Sierra Nevadas; to the west is the much lower Coast Range; in between is the well-known stretch of very level, very flat San Joaquin Valley, perhaps seventy-five miles wide and 300 miles long and generally believed to be very much like any other valley. But there are differences.

The fall of the valley from southeast to northwest is very slight, about one foot to the mile. Therefore the flow of the waters lengthwise of the valley toward the ocean is quite sluggish.

About midway between the mouth of the San Joaquin River in San Francisco Bay and the southernmost part of the valley there issues out of the Sierra Nevada Mountains the Kings River. This river has a very large and quite wet watershed high in the ranges, and its flow is therefore of great volume. The annual "run-off," meaning the total quantity of water that issues out of the mountains, has been carefully measured, and the engineers say it amounts to 2,000,000 acre-feet on the average annually. This means that it is a very respectable river, all the more so because about all the water comes down in seven or eight months. It is a silt-bearing river. This silt through the geologic ages has been deposited on the floor of the flat valley until a great fan-like dike, which now extends at right angles across the entire seventy-five miles of the valley's width, has been built up. The dike has practically cut the San Joaquin Valley in two parts.

RIVER IN DOUBT.

After building its dike the Kings River did not know exactly which way to flow, whether down the north side to the ocean or toward the south side. During the last sixty years, since the coming of the white man, it has about impartially divided its waters to either side of the dike. This dike, by the way, is not recognized as such by the naked eye, as it is so flat that only the direction of flowing waters or the transit of an engineer can recognize its existence. It seems as flat as the rest of the valley.

The part of the water that has flowed to the south formed Tulare Lake. Kings River therefore is the creator of Tulare Lake in two ways—first because the river built the retaining dike and second because it furnishes water to fill the lake.

The lake receives water from other sources. The Tule and Kaweah Rivers have about one-third the flow between them of the Kings. Deer Creek and the White River contribute during some seasons. Kern River, a stream rivaling Kings and the southernmost of the Sierra group, was a steady and heavy contributer until the Buena Vista Lake reservoir was formed and irrigation used up almost its entire supply. Now there is a surplus for Tulare Lake only in seasons of high flood.

WHEN THE WHITES CAME.

Geographies of the 60's, the Civil War decade, say Lake Tulare "is the largest body of fresh water west of the Mississippi, sixty miles long, thirty miles wide and of unknown depth." Its area was then known to vary between 600 and 1000 square miles. Its greatest recorded area was in 1867, when a survey showed it to cover 637,000 acres, or just a trifle less than 1000 square miles.

That enormous body of water in less than thirty years entirely disappeared. In 1896 the bed was dry and farmers sowed grain on its entire bottom.

It is questionable whether any other lake on the world's surface can show such a variation—from nothing to 1000 square miles.

The farmers were overjoyed at the lake's disappearance. The bottom soil was exceedingly fertile and during the years 1897-1898 the lake lands yielded an average of seventy bushels of wheat to the acre.

But the occupation of the lake bottom by man was shortlived. Kings and all the other rivers rose in great floods in the season of '99 and 1900 and drowned 300 square miles of grain. The lake went dry again in 1905, but the very next year the waters returned and ever since they have covered hundreds of square miles.

The first explorers, in the 50's and 60's, found one of the great "tule" fields of the world. The tule is a water growth. The field stretched more than 100 miles from Buena Vista Lake to and including Tulare Lake and was between three and ten miles wide. This jungle was so impenetrable that in those days men had to make a detour of more than 100 miles to get from the western to the eastern side of the valley.

The tule jungle has now almost entirely disappeared. The soil was good and as the water receded the tules was burned off and cultivation began.

MAN-MADE CHANGES.

The changes in Tulare Lake, in the San Joaquin Valley, and in the flows of the Kings, Kern and other rivers are a remarkable example of the changes men can make in the geography of a country. These changes are as spectacular as those in the Imperial Valley, and are even more important, although so gradual that they have not so much appealed to the popular imagination.

Tulare Lake has diminished in area and once or twice even became dry because the supply rivers have been used to irrigate the lands of Fresno, Kings, Tulare and Kern counties. Much of the water that made the 1000 square miles of Tulare Lake in the 60's is being spread on the thousands of square miles of vineyards, fig, oranges and deciduous fruit orchards and hay and grain lands of these growing counties—much of the water, but by no means all, for 150,000 acres of the lake bottom is today covered with water. Instead of Kings River throwing practically all its floods into the lake, as in the past, it now, largely through the instrumentality of men, is emptying northward along the northern slopes of its dike into the San Joaquin River. Irrigation and the diversion of the river are lessening the volume of the lake.

SEIZING THE LAKE.

When the lake went dry the second time, in 1905, the then State administration and the farmers and investors generally concluded that Tulare Lake was doomed, that irrigation and diversion would finally use up the rivers completely. The State began to sell off the land in the very bottom of the lake.

This was no small affair, as it involved between 200,000 and 250,000 acres, half of the present reclaimed area of the Imperial Valley.

The rivers rose again beyond the needs of irrigation and in 1906 came a real calamity. Hundreds of square miles of magnificent ripening grain were overwhelmed.

Then came the reclamation efforts.

When the lake went dry it gave up its final secret. It was discovered that the bottom was so miraculously flat that the first foot of water would cover the immense area of fifty-five square miles. Then each ensuing rise of one foot would throw the water back one mile. At its greatest possible height it could be only thirty-seven feet deep, when it would cover 1000 square miles.

Very low dikes, the farmers saw, would reclaim great areas, hold back the rising waters from many square miles of land. A dike ten feet high would hold back the waters from a strip ten miles wide. Why not dike?

It was not until the coming of Carroll W. Gates of Los Angeles that work began on a really large scale, although the first enterprise of the kind was that of D. W. Lewis of Stockton, who decided to reclaim 10,000 acres, and who took in a dredge in 1910 and began to build a dike right in the lake.

Mr. Gates had bought thousands of acres from the State as early as 1905, the year the lake last went dry. In 1913 he had farmed 7000 acres. He soon saw, with the rest, that if farming were to be done with any certainty, even in the outer edge of the lake, protective dikes had to be raised.

The El Rico Dredging Company was organized. Under various names, associated with various groups of land owners Mr. Gates is operating. He himself owned, and still owns, tens of thousands of acres adjoining many smaller holdings.

Now the dredgers in the southwest corner of the lake are at work reclaiming land to the 181½-foot level, meaning that height above sea level. When it is remembered that the highest high-water mark in the '60's was 216, it can be understood how extensive has been the area wrested from the lake. Below the 181½-foot level possibly 100,000 acres of lake still remain. About 500,000 acres have since the coming of man been therefore taken from the waters.

THE UNIQUE STEP.

Dry lake land can be as dry as any other land. As the waters receded the farmers soon made the discovery. With the waters of the rivers used up long before they reached the vicinity of Tulare Lake, these were not available for irrigation. The lake was below the land and unlikely to rise to its former maximum. The areas reclaimed from the lake were in actual danger of abandonment because of dryness.

The flatness of the land suggested a bold idea. If the lake water could be raised by pumps or in some other way an elevation of only ten feet it could be made to irrigate a strip of land ten miles wide and ten or more miles long—100 or more square miles, a really great irrigation enterprise in itself.

Los Angeles men took this unique and final step. C. W. Gates is the largest stockholder and C. F. DeWitt is the president of the Tulare Lake Water Company and both are residents of South Pasadena and do business in this city.

The Tulare Lake Water Company is organized to water 40,000 acres of land, and its physical aspects are such that the average irrigationist, beholding its methods, would feel as if he were looking at a moving picture of an irrigation enterprise run backwards.

Great canals, forty to sixty feet wide and eight feet deep, have been excavated by dredger or dry-land machinery. At the lake end, the water end, two enormous centrifugal pumps have been installed. These raise the water only four feet, into a great canal elevated four feet above the level of the surrounding land. This elevation carries the waters back four miles into the dry land. At that point a similar canal, again raised by its embankments to a level above the surrounding land, begins. This canal lies only two feet higher than the first, leading the water two miles farther away from the lake. Here a shrewd engineer discovered that a contrivance as old as Adam is the most economical and least troublesome way of raising the water, a great canalful at a time. He built a regular undershot water wheel, attached to it an electric motor and ran the wheel backwards. The primitive contrivance so operated, with very little power waste, has successfully raised several hundred second-feet of water a height of two feet. Two miles further another power wheel was put in the canal. The number will be increased as needed.

There are many angles and complexities to the great group of reclamation enterprises of the Southern Joaquin Valley. Conflicting interests are playing for huge stakes.

Irrigationists of the east side of the valley want more and more of the water of the rivers that feed Tulare Lake. If they take all of it, which is within the possibilities, there will be no lake. The land reclaimed from the lake will have become not only dry enough to raise crops, but will become entirely too dry and almost worthless.

If Kings River is forced to flow northward along its dike, so that no water reaches the lake—and each individual owner of land in the lake bottom wants it so—there will be no water for irrigation in the lake even if the river has water enough. This work of diversion has already gone a long way, and has roused the apprehension of the city of Stockton and of a great drainage enterprise of 500,000 acres in that neighborhood, because of possible floods. So runs the tangle.

Far-seeing men of Southern California believe no less a power than the United States government, through its Reclamation Service, will ultimately have to step in.

ENFORCE SERVICE OF NATURAL GAS.

COUNCIL PREPARES TO ENACT THE ORDINANCE.

City Officials Disappointed at Failure of State Railroad Commissioner to Attend Conference Which They Hoped Might Help to Solve Gas-rate Problem.

State Railroad Commissioner Edgerton, who was expected to arrive in the city yesterday for a conference with city officials in connection with the gas-rate problem, did not come. As a result, it was announced, the Council will go ahead with its programme to enact an ordinance compelling all gas companies to supply their patrons with natural gas.

City Attorney Stephens, President Lane of the Public Utilities Commission and Councilman Conway waited at the City Hall for Commissioner Edgerton until about noon, when they learned that he was in Corona and would not be able to keep the appointment.

It was the desire of the city officials to secure the assistance of Commissioner Edgerton in their appeal for a rehearing of the gas problem before the commission.

City officials are dissatisfied with the recent decision of the commission, which has been termed discriminatory, and they believe if the case were reopened that the matter could be adjusted.

GLENDALE FIRE TO GO TO GRAND JURY.

Considering the information and evidence in his hands of such importance as to call for an investigation by the grand jury, Dist.-Atty. Woolwine has notified that body to meet next Tuesday and take up the many threads of the clew which seem to point to the incendiary destruction of the home of Mrs. W. C. Shaw, at No. 1530 Vine street, Glendale. The residence was destroyed by fire May 29 last, at 1:18 a.m. At that time Mrs. Shaw was in New York. She had placed in charge of the house her housekeeper, Mrs. M. C. Burkes.

The latter, in a statement, said she did not care to sleep in the house because she had heard strange noises around the place at night. According to a local investigation, there was an explosion which blew out several window frames.

The District Attorney's investigators claim to have positive evidence that the fire was incendiary, and that they know who obtained the materials to cause the fire. To substantiate these claims witnesses will be summoned before the grand jury with the hope that the mystery of the fire will be solved.

The property was insured in the Continental Insurance Company for $14,750. Of this amount $10,000 was on the house, $4500 on furniture and the rest on the garage.

NEVADA FEARFUL OF ALIEN MINERS.

DANGER TO AMERICAN WOMEN IN CAMPS IS SCENTED.

Grave Results not Unlikely Should Their Husbands Leave for Front While Foreigners are Exempted—Enemy Control of Properties Possible.

Dr. J. L. McCarthy, Democratic National Committeeman from Nevada and chief examining officer of the exemption boards of that State, was in Los Angeles yesterday investigating the exemption methods here relating to aliens.

"In Nevada," Mr. McCarthy said, "there are 20,000 miners. Two-fifths of these are aliens which will cause a very serious situation if the majority of the American miners are called to the front.

"At present there is a distinctive line drawn between the American miner with ideals and those composed of the proletariat of Europe. With the women left in these mining towns alone with only foreigners, it would mean the wiping out of all social standards.

"There is another dangerous phase connected with the absence of the American miner. With aliens in charge there is no way to know just who are friendly and who are enemies. If the enemy should get control of the various mines of the State, there are many grave results to be feared.

"We are trying to work out some plan, whereby our vast mining interests will be protected for the benefit of our own country and so that the wives and daughters of American miners or the educated class of miner will be saved from a still graver danger."

Dr. McCarthy is one of the principal stock holders of the Jumbo Junior gold mine near Goldfield, where a rich strike was made a few days ago on the 800-foot level. While here he was a guest at the Hotel Clark.

MORE FOOD ASKED BY FRENCH DEPUTY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Aug. 15.—Deputy Thierry-Cazes yesterday addressed an urgent request to Maurice Violette, Minister of Subsistence, asking him to increase to 500 grams instead of 300 the daily amount of food to be allotted to the population. With the additional 200 grams allotment already provided for this will make a total of 900. The Deputy said the majority of peasants live in the open air and eat principally soup and bread, and they will regard it as an injustice if they are not allowed to eat their fill of grain they themselves raise.

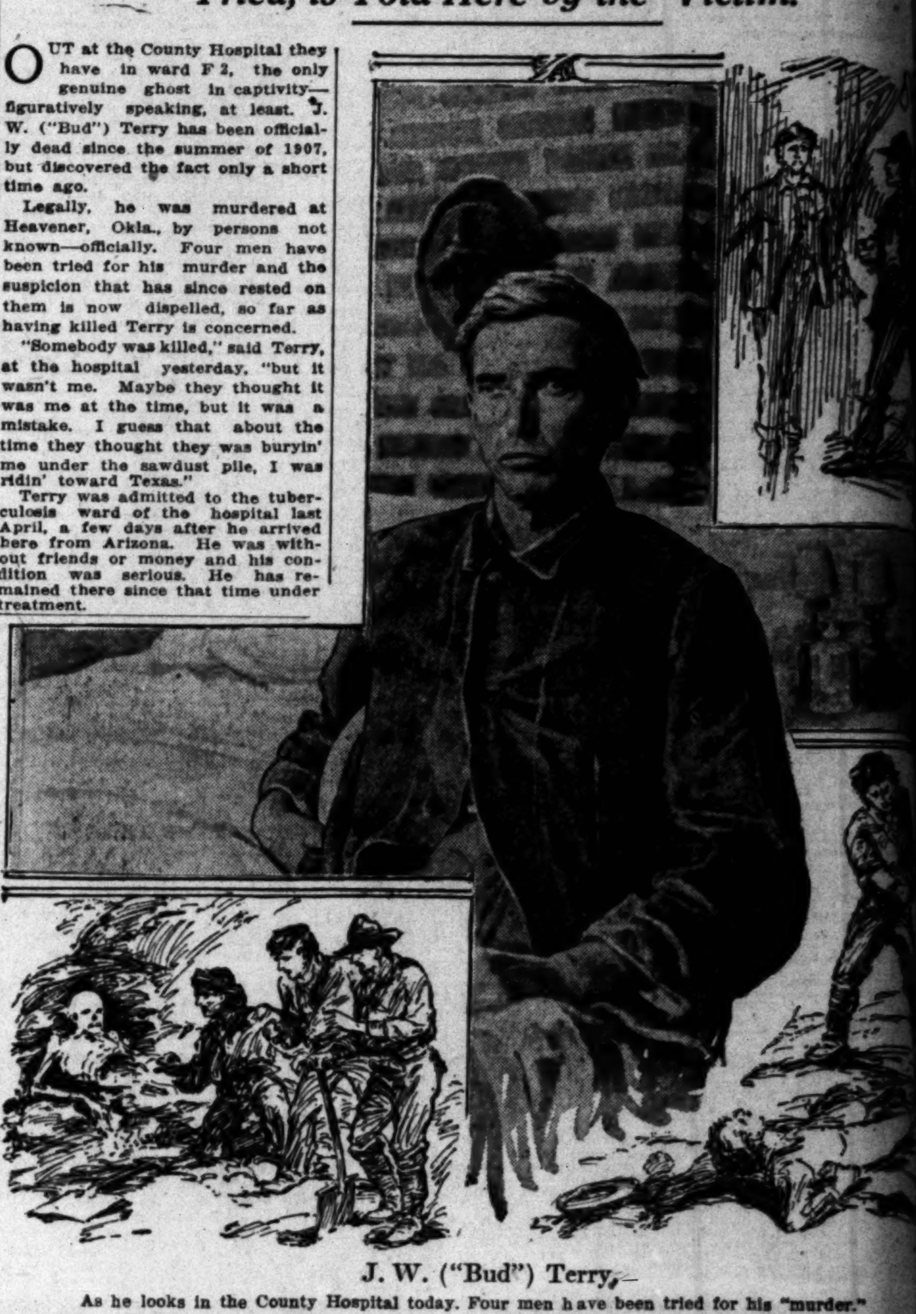
COUNTY HOSPITAL HAS ONLY GENUINE "GHOST" ON RECO

Remarkable Story of Murder Officially Committed Years Ago, and for Which Four Men were Tried, is Told Here by the "Victim."



J. W. ("Bud") Terry,—

As he looks in the County Hospital today. Four men have been tried for his "murder."

OUT at the County Hospital they have in ward F 2, the only genuine ghost in captivity—figuratively speaking, at least. J. W. ("Bud") Terry has been officially dead since the summer of 1907, but discovered the fact only a short time ago.

Legally, he was murdered at Heavener, Okla., by persons not known—officially. Four men have been tried for his murder and the suspicion that has since rested on them is now dispelled, so far as having killed Terry is concerned.

"Somebody was killed," said Terry, at the hospital yesterday, "but it wasn't me. Maybe they thought it was me at the time, but it was a mistake. I guess that about the time they thought they was buryin' me under the sawdust pile, I was ridin' toward Texas."

Terry was admitted to the tuberculosis ward of the hospital last April, a few days after he arrived here from Arizona. He was without friends or money and his condition was serious. He has remained there since that time under treatment.

A short time ago R. E. McClellan, whose former home town is Caulksville, Ark., but now lives in this city, met with an accident and was taken to the County Hospital for surgical treatment. While recovering from his injuries he roamed about the corridors. One day, while chatting with an attendant he suddenly became limp, turned pale and gasped.

VISION FROM GRAVE.

"What's the matter?" asked the surprised attendant. "You seem sick."

"I've got 'em," replied McClellan, "I'm seein' 'em."

"Seeing what?"

"Ghosts, there's a man that's been dead ten years!"

He had caught a glimpse of Terry, born in the same town and whose death had been reported many years before.

Explanations were then in order. Terry had no hesitancy in admitting that he was the man supposed to have been murdered, explaining, however, that he never had heard that he was officially dead. McClellan immediately sent a wire to his father, back in Ratcliff, Ark., and word was quickly transmitted to W. L. Bates, now living at Lincoln, Ark., where he has lived since he moved away from Heavener, Okla., to escape the daily contact with those who believed him guilty of the "slaying" of Terry. The others, tried with him, were Will Stiles, Millard Vaughn and Louis McKibben. The jury disagreed. Later Stiles was acquitted and the others discharged.

Friends of Bates, who have remained loyal, picked up the threads of the weird mystery and Terry received a letter yesterday from J. W. Patton of Heavener, begging Terry to send immediately a photograph of himself and information that would unquestionably identify him as the man thought to have died at the hand of Bates. Terry sent by the next mail a letter giving data, the names of associates, describing favorite saloons, etc. Today he will send a photograph, taken by a Times photographer at his request, in order to make the identification complete.

UNDOUBTEDLY SAME ONE.

Terry does not talk volubly of the affair nor does he volunteer information as to the probable identity of the man whose body was discovered beneath the sawdust pile at the Bates mill, near Heavener.

"Somebody was killed there, all right," he said, "because they found the bones of a man three years after I had gone away. A fellow named Jim Wyatt, a squatter that lived a mile or so from the mill, and Sam Swider, that I used to work with in Bates's mill, know about it if anybody does. They ought to know. Swider got into some trouble over some missing horses and was 'sent up' for it. They charged him with killing me, so I have been told, and he confessed, according to what they say, that Bates and I had a fight and that Bates killed me. I don't know anything about that. Whoever it was, they killed somebody.

"Did they think it was me?" Maybe. Anyway it wasn't me."

"My lungs were bothering me and I went to Texas. Went right through from Mena, Ark., to Galveston; stayed there a few days and then went West twenty miles to a little place called Alta Loma, where I worked in a ditch. Then I went to Rosenberg, a town about thirty-five miles west of Houston, and worked about three months in a livery stable. In January, 1908, I went to Savinal, where I got a job with the Southern Pacific as a pumper and stayed there up to February 20 of 1913. Then I got discharged and went to San Antonio, where I stayed for four years, doing odd jobs, but spending about two years in the tuberculosis camp there. Then I went to Arizona, but the altitude was too much for my lungs and I drifted into Los Angeles last April."

HAUNTS OF BANDITS.

Desperate riders made their raids in the small towns of Oklahoma, Southern Kansas, and the Indian Nation, in the days when Terry worked around Mena and Heavener. "Al" Jennings, the Dalton boys and other outlaw "gangs" infested that district. A human life had no special value in those days in Oklahoma. When asked if he knew any of the "riders" of that period, Terry said he had seen moving pictures of Jennings and of one of the Dalton brothers. He grinned when he said it.

In the letter from Heavener to Terry, invoking his immediate reply with identification, occurs this paragraph:

"All we are after here is to help clear Bates's record, as this trouble broke Bates up and caused him to lose all his friends, so if the man is innocent we want to know it for his sake and family."

"Bud" Terry sits every sunny day on the wide porch and has occasional spasms of coughing. There are crimson stains on his handkerchief at times. When asked if he expected to go back to his old home in Arkansas, he shook his head.

Same as Usual.

OLD RULES TO PREVAIL.

No Changes in Regulations as to the Registration of Men and Women at Stanford—Some Five Hundred of the Latter Expected.

Rumors circulating among Southern California alumni that Stanford University had extended the maximum attendance limit for women from the 500 to the 1000 mark are denied in a communication from J. E. McDowell, assistant registrar of the university, to L. S. Lyon, a Los Angeles member of the Stanford law school.

"There is nothing to the rumor that 1000 women may register," the latter says. "The facts are these: The university will open October 1, with no changes in the regulations governing registration of men and women. My own guess is that we will have a falling off of about 20 per cent. in the registration of men, and of course there will be the usual 500 women.

"If my guess is correct there will be 1000 to 1200 men, and of these, 350 to 400 will be new students. No special emphasis will be placed on military work this year. The regular course will be given, but no intensive training work.

"There is no danger of the troops disturbing the ordinary quiet of the campus, as it was understood by the government that the soldiers were not to trespass on the campus grounds, and this regulation will be strictly enforced by army authorities. The law department will be running in full force, with minor changes in the faculty."

FACT AND COMMENT.

Many property owners and residents of Northwest Los Angeles have written or phoned The Times in the last two weeks expressing interest and solicitude over a new agitation movement that has been launched to bring about the abandonment of the already long-delayed Silver Lake parkway project. The Fact and Comment man has received several communications on the subject in the past few days.

The Times, needless to say, has no brief for any particular public improvements. It has always seemed to the Fact and Comment man that the plan for converting the unsightly Bimini ravine into a parkway and adding the beautiful Silver Lake reservoir and its contiguous lands to the city's park area was a good one. The great majority of the people owning property in the district along and near the ravine have undoubtedly favored the parkway project from the beginning. The protesting minority, while active, has been small. Had the proceedings for the improvement not been cluttered by endless litigation, Silver Lake parkway would probably long since have been an accomplished fact. Barring the possibility of injunction proceedings designed to tie the scheme up still longer, there appears to be nothing to keep the parkway from going ahead without further delay.

The newest protest against the project comes at a time when to all intents and purposes the parkway is in embryo, at least, a reality. All the regular proceedings involved in the carrying out of improvement projects were long ago disposed of, and early in the present year the last of the litigation over condemnation values for the parkway lands was settled in court. The time limit for appeals has passed without either the city or any of the former litigants at interest having taken action to set aside the court findings. The condemnation was ordered years ago, the proceedings have been sustained, protests formally denied and the assessments spread. In the ordinary course of events the municipal officials in charge of the project would collect assessments at once, and the city would acquire title to the ravine lands within the next few weeks.

[illegible] Stand.

It is difficult, so far as that goes, to understand the position of those who at this last minute after the eleventh hour are trying to induce the City Council to abandon the Silver Lake parkway project. The Bimini ravine literally cuts Northwest Los Angeles in two, and has undoubtedly handicapped the development of this part of the city. Stretching diagonally north and northeast from Sixth street to Silver Lake reservoir, a half-mile north of Sunset boulevard, this miles-long strip of marsh lands has not only deterred people from building in its immediate vicinity, but has acted as a barrier against the extension of east-and-west streets and transportation lines linking Northwest Los Angeles into one great whole. It was not until the property owners west of the ravine finally concentrated on the building of north-and-south thoroughfares, giving them access to arteries far to the south and north of them, that this part of the city began to go ahead. A considerable area in the northwest can never be what it might and should be until the Bimini ravine has been either landscaped and bridged or filled in and made solid land of the same grade as surrounding lands.

The plan originated some seven years ago of draining the slough lands, planting them with thousands of trees and shrubs and extending a boulevard from end to end through the ravine, linking the Westlake-Wilshire district with the Silver Lake and Griffith Park districts, was not a mere happy thought. Boston, Kansas City, Washington and other large cities had previously reclaimed waste lands for parkway purposes on a far larger scale than that contemplated in Los Angeles, and had achieved wonderful results in adding beautiful units to their park systems and in reclaiming neglected areas for high-class residential development. The projectors of Silver Lake parkway believed that in transforming the ugly Bimini slough into a beautiful wooded ravine leading to Silver Lake they would not only be wiping out an eyesore and a barrier to development, but would be converting a community nuisance into a positive asset.

The Cost Question.

The question of cost, of course, has from the beginning figured in the opposition. In this connection, it appears, there has been some misunderstanding of the facts. The plan has been for the property owners in a large assessment district to pay the cost of the lands required for the carrying out of the scheme. The final figures bring the total to be paid under condemnation proceedings up to approximately $600,000, this cost to be apportioned against some 40,000 separate parcels of property. Many of the owners in the assessment district have been led to believe that they would later on have to pay for the landscaping of the ravine as a parkway. This, however, is not the case. It is the intention that the district shall pay for the land and turn it over to the city, the Park Commission then assuming charge of future operations. Plans for the treatment of the ground were worked out by the commission long ago. No part of the outlay for the actual development of the scheme will have to be borne by the assessment district.

The objection has been raised that Silver Lake Parkway, because planned as an integral part of the city's park and parkway system, ought to be paid for by the city at large. There is no getting away from this argument. The city ought to pay for the lands that go into its public parks. Nor can anyone carefully study the Silver Lake Parkway plan in its relation to the other parks of Los Angeles without realizing that the project would be a good investment for the municipality simply as a new park. There can be no question, either, that the completion of the parkway would result in enough upbuilding and general development to add greatly to the assessed valuation of Northwest Los Angeles real estate and that the city could afford to pay for the condemned lands on that basis also. Those who would hold up the parkway project on the plea that the city ought to carry the whole thing through would do well to remember, however, that the city has so many existing burdens of its own that it cannot begin to do all the things it might want to do, even when it is clearly apparent that these undertakings would eventually prove of great public advantage.

It has always seemed to the Fact and Comment man that the Silver Lake Parkway project, on the basis under which the proceedings have been carried through, was too good a thing for the property owners in the parkway assessment district to let slip. All the indications are that the burden will not fall very heavily on any one owner and it is certain that the benefits will reach much farther than the outermost boundaries of the assessment district. Visible evidence of what the parkway will mean to Northwest Los Angeles is already to be seen in the many buildings, including two fine private schools, several flats and numerous residences, large and small, that have already been built along the Bimini ravine, solely on the strength of the parkway project. Those who are striving to arouse new opposition to the parkway are, it would seem, working against their own best interests and will be lucky if they fail to accomplish their purpose.

UNIQUE FLATS TO FACE PARK.

NOTABLE IMPROVEMENT TO BE STARTED THIS WEEK.

Building Combining Features of Up-to-date Apartment-house and Modern Flat Projected by New York Couple in Westlake-Wilshire District.

A four-story brick building of the "apartment-flat" type so popular in the large cities of the East will be started this week in the close-in Westlake-Wilshire apartment-house district. The structure, which will be the first of its kind to be projected in Los Angeles, will be built by Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Dickinson, who have recently come to this city from New York to make their permanent home. Plans for the building have just been completed by the Milwaukee Building Company (Meyer & Holler) and this concern will also have charge of its construction.

The site of the improvement is on the east side of Benton boulevard, between Wilshire boulevard and West Seventh street, fronting Sunset Park. The lot is 75x123 feet in size. The total investment in the ground and building, it is understood, will be in the neighborhood of $100,000.

The building will be in the Italian renaissance style and will be set well back from the street, with a formal terrace treatment at the front. The walls will be plastered with white cement, the ornamental effects being carried out in stone. The windows are to be set off by iron grill balconies.

There will be eight flats in all, or two to the floor, the wings of the building being divided on the ground floor by a large entrance lobby and on the upper stories by central corridors. The apartment-house features will include elevator service and an efficient heating and ventilating system common to all the flats. In all other essentials the arrangement will be that found in the most up-to-date flats, each suite being a complete unit to itself.

Each flat will contain seven rooms, with two baths. The rooms will be of a size unusual in flat buildings, the living-rooms being 18x22 feet and the others in keeping. The living-room, dining-room and library in each suite will be connected by sliding doors, making it possible to throw them into one large open space when occasion requires.

There will be an attractive fireplace and mantel in each living-room. The baths throughout are to have tile floors and walls and will be equipped with built-in porcelain tubs and pedestal lavatories. The floors throughout the building will be of oak, and hardwoods will be used in the finish of all the principal rooms. Tile sink boards and built-in incinerators will be among the kitchen features. Each flat will have a maid's room and an entrance for trades people.

The contract calls for the completion of the building by December 1. The owners have announced that they intend to call the property the "John Alden Apartments."

BELVEDERE HEIGHTS.

Sale of lots and small bungalows in Belvedere Heights are reported by the Janss Investment Company as follows: To M. V. Heaffler, lot, $900; to E. A. Franger, lot, $300; to George Reynolds, two lots, $600; to G. E. Hicks, two lots, $500; to E. M. Lucas, two lots, $575; to W. G. Hamilton, lot, $900; to J. S. Keeter, two lots, $650; to Mrs. N. D. Conden, four-room bungalow, $1650; to E. A. Nelson, five-room bungalow, $2450.

THRESHING SMALL BEANS.

Threshing of small beans is proceeding briskly in many sections of Ventura county, and limas are being cut. So far returns from small beans have been somewhat smaller than was expected. On the Neel ranch, near Montalvo, where threshing was finished several days ago, the yield was between twenty and twenty-five sacks to the acre. Limas have filled well recently, however, and ranchers are pleased with crop prospects.

LEASES WHOLE FLOOR.

Billiard Parlor Concern Secures Space in Realty Board Building.

The W. Ross Campbell Company, through Richard C. Willis of its leasing department, has closed a deal whereby the entire second floor of the Realty Board Building, No. 631 South Spring street, has been leased to Wright's Billiard Parlor, at a given rental consideration of $30,000 for a term of years. Chip Wright, well-known professional billiardist, is president of the company and will personally have charge of the establishment, which will be one of the largest of its kind on the Coast. Architects are now working on plans for remodeling the premises, and J. T. Clark, vice-president of the company, has gone East to purchase tables and supplies. Space will be available for twenty-five tables.

Mr. Willis also reports the leasing of a warehouse at No. 2141 Sacramento street to Winter & Nicholson, contractors. Mr. Millard, with the Campbell company, has leased a store at No. 1113 South Hill street to the Los Angeles Mantel and Tile Company. The premises will be used by the lessee as a showroom and office.

HELPING GARDENERS.

With the view to instructing the residents of Walnut Park how to realize the greatest productiveness possible out of their vegetable plots, the Kleinberger & Edwards Company, which is developing that suburban subdivision, has established a "war garden" on the property. Here, under the supervision of an expert gardener, a plot of ground the size of a typical Walnut Park garden is being planted and cared for. Various crops are being tried out, as are also different arrangements of beds, the object being the development of a plan of gardening in which every square foot of ground shall count.

INCOME BUILDINGS.

Apartments for Sunset Place—Plans Completed for New Flats.

An apartment-house of forty rooms will be started within the next week or two by Franklin Harper on Sunset place near Hoover street. The building will be two stories and of brick construction, the street front being faced with tapestry brick. Plans have been completed.

A building permit was issued last week to C. L. Simmons for the construction of a twenty-room frame flat at No. 1724 McCadden place. Raymond Johnston has had plans prepared for a sixteen-room flat which he will build on Albany street near Pico.

MACHINE SHOP.

The Cochise Machine Company of this city has had plans drawn for a machine shop to be built in the new suburban community known as South Los Angeles, lying between the city proper and the harbor. The building will be constructed by the Nance Construction Company and will cost about $10,000. It will have brick and concrete walls and will be 100 feet square.

PLAN BATH-HOUSE.

A company known as the Hermosa Beach Bath-house Company, incorporated for the purpose of erecting a bathing pavilion at that place, has commissioned L. B. Pemberton, a Redondo Beach engineer, to draw plans for the contemplated structure. The building, it is understood, will cost about $45,000.

AT THE HARBOR.

Among the new improvements projected for the harbor district is a one-story brick store building to be erected by W. I. Hollingsworth & Co. at the corner of Belleport avenue and Two Hundred and Fifty-third street in Wilmington. Eisen & Son are drawing the plans.

BIG BUILDING FOR BROADWAY.

Modern Skyscraper Planned Below Ninth.

Structure will be Thirteen Stories High.

Construction may be Begun at Early Date.

Another building of the skyscraper type will be started on Broadway during the present year if negotiations now being carried on between a downtown property owner and prospective tenants are brought to a successful issue. The deal on which the project hinges has, it is understood, been under consideration for several months and confidence was expressed yesterday by those interested that everything would be worked out satisfactorily within the next few days.

The owner in question is A. B. Cohn and the site he proposes to improve is on the east side of Broadway between Ninth and Tenth, the lot being numbered 930 to 932½ South Broadway. The property has a frontage of fifty feet and extends back eighty-five feet to an alley. Mr. Cohn acquired the holding from Judge Leon F. Moss about six years ago.

Plans for the projected improvement are now being completed by W. S. Garrett and W. H. Bowman, the former having charge of the architectural details and the latter being engaged in working out the engineering features. The structure, as designed, will have a height of thirteen stories and will be of reinforced concrete construction.

The floors will be arranged for loft purposes at the beginning, but are so designed that it will be easy at any time to subdivide them into offices. The street front will be handsomely faced with glazed terra cotta. The owner plans to call the structure the "Syndicate Building."

The building will replace an old frame house that has long stood on the site and will contribute much to the metropolitan appearance of the lower Broadway skyline. The projector, in common with other owners in the vicinity, has been waiting for years for the opening of Broadway between Tenth and Eleventh as the signal to go ahead with modern improvements. Recent favorable court decisions indicating the probability of the early carrying out of this important work led him to open negotiations looking to the erection of a modern building. Whatever the outcome of the deal now shaping, it is Mr. Cohn's intention to improve his site with a building of the type now being planned for him at an early date.

YUCAIPA PEACHES.

J. Matthews, Yucaipa Valley farmer has on display at Yucaipa, six large peaches that were grown on a J. H. Hale tree this year. The tree is just one year old. The peaches are fully developed and of good color. Mr. Hale has just finished picking and sending to Los Angeles 900 boxes of peaches from 100 trees of the Red Bird Cling variety that are five years old, an average of nine boxes a tree. The growers of the section have shipped to Los Angeles and other markets 4000 boxes of fine peaches and have received high prices for the fruit.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OPPORTUNITY.

On beautiful Alvarado street, among high class surroundings; 80x155 to paved alley. Improved with a handsome 10-room residence which would cost $10,000 today to replace. This property is a lovely home and will ultimately bring a very high price per front foot. An unimproved lot 40x130 on Alvarado brought $500 per front foot last week. Am going East and must sell right away. Price only $12,500; $3000 cash will handle it; balance can run for a year. Strictly as an investment for future profit this can't be beat. House will easily rent for $100 a month. I refused $22,500 cash for this place five years ago and it's worth it today and will bring it again and more, as soon as conditions become normal. Address P, box 380, TIMES SPRING ST. BRANCH.

WAR A POWERFUL FACTOR IN STOCK EXCHANGE WEEK

Average of Prices Fell to Lowest Levels of Recent Months.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The enormous accretion of war expenditures, the tenor of Congressional debates on war profits and taxes, President Wilson's reply to the Pope's peace note and indubitable signs that monetary conditions are likely to work less advantageously to borrowers, were the principal features of the week in the stock market.

Shares of munitions and equipment companies experienced a setback of five to ten points. The balance of the list suffered correspondingly and the average of prices fell to lowest levels of recent months, while in some instances minimum quotations of the year were reached. An overwhelming proportion of the selling was professional, but the steady recession finally brought investment liquidation.

United States Steel's huge turnover for the week, which approximated 900,000 shares, to the accompaniment of a net decline of eight points, was the overshadowing feature. That stock not only failed to regain any of its 4 1-4 per cent. dividend but closed virtually at the lowest level.

The same causes that prompted the outpouring of steel presented themselves in other industrials.

Bethlehem Steel's reversal became more acute after publication of the terms of the company's new financing, which bear significantly upon their projects now under consideration.

Irrespective of forthcoming requirements by the government, it is believed the money market will become a powerful influence in the month now begun. Time funds show steady withdrawal by financial institutions and call loans probably will be made with greater regard for the collateral offered.

Demoralization in exchange rates on Petrograd, rubles falling to 17 1-4 and Russian government internal 5½ per cent. bonds at a discount of almost 50 per cent. from their price of a year ago, reflected recent military and political developments in that country.

The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $12,-307,900 reserve in excess of requirements. This is a decrease of $56,-469,020 from last week.

DAILY EASTERN CITRUS MARKET QUOTATIONS.

THE Pacific Fruit World, in its review of the California citrus market situation for the week ending August 31, says:

The capacity of the market to absorb the continued abnormally heavy offerings of Valencias has proved the astonishment of everyone. Measured by prevailing prices last season at this time Valencia prices are lower but comparisons with last season are not reasonable, considering the heavy increase in the Valencia crop over last year. The offerings in the larger markets, such as Boston, Philadelphia and New York, are heavier than last season and even the smaller markets are taking many more cars than formerly. When all this is taken into consideration, together with the fact that considerable complaint is heard regarding the quality of the Valencias, present market values are considered satisfactory. Average prices on last stock Valencias ranged from $3.50 for Orange county fruit down to $2.70 for fruit from the Riverside district that had been affected by either heat or cold.

The eastern markets that cater to resorts and summer boarding-houses report a falling off in the demand for Valencias owing to a poor season, but their proportion is seemingly absorbed by the smaller interior markets and in the sale of orange juice, which is rapidly taking the place of many other summer drinks.

The f.o.b. market is on a basis of $2.50 to $2.75 for fancy Valencias according to sizes and district.

Supplies of summer fruits continue heavy in eastern markets and are attracting the attention of buyers. The California grape movement is now well under way, a total of 1710 cars having been moved as against 550 cars to corresponding period last season. Rocky Ford cantaloupes have just begun to move, while 242 cars had been moved to date last season.

Lemons.

The market on lemons continues dull, although prices are satisfactory. There is very little trading being done and buyers are making purchases only when there is an opportunity for an immediate turnover of the stock. The cool weather found many dealers with high-priced lemons on their hands and the advent of warmer weather is necessary before this stock can be disposed of. Temperatures generally range around the 65-degree mark, which is not conducive to a good lemon movement.

What sales are being made are bringing good money, even stock showing heavy decay selling around $3.00 and better.

Under present conditions it is difficult to quote prices.

EASY TONE SHOWN BY CORN FUTURES.

HOLDERS OF ABUNDANT STOCKS MAKE OFFERINGS FREELY.

Light Offers of Cash Wheat and a Fair Demand, with Some Sales Above the Government Limit. Hog Receipts Small and Prices Advance.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Corn futures showed an easy tone today. Holders of abundant stocks offered freely and shorts seemed to have satisfied their wants. Pre-holiday dullness resulted in view of the two-days' closing over Labor Day. Frosts in the Northwest were generally ignored, though with cooler weather they were expected to be a factor. The buying was largely on resting orders. The close was weak, 3-8 to 1 1-8 lower, with December at 111⅛ to 111¼ and May at 107¾. Oats finished 1-8 to 3-4 lower. Provisions advanced with a firm undertone and a good shipping demand.

There were light offers of cash wheat and a fair demand, with some sales above the government price. The government will not be in the market buying and selling until Tuesday and sales to millers probably will begin September 10. Deliveries of wheat on September contracts were recorded today. They aggregated 25,000. Traders said they were waiting for the government buying and selling to begin. There was a slow cash demand for corn, but receipts were small and prices advanced somewhat, No. 2 yellow selling at 2.10.

Evening-up trades over the holidays were a feature in the oats market. Seaboard demand was light and offerings were plentiful. Country offerings increased somewhat in volume, though still very light. Cash sales aggregated 215,-000 bushels.

Packers were the principal buyers of provisions and produce prices were closing about the top. Strength of the hog market continued the controlling factor.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Unofficial estimates place the probable sock-eye salmon pack this year at 600,000 cases, against an expected pack of at least 3,000,000 cases. There is the deepest disappointment among canners of the Pacific Northwest. The cause of this situation is described in detail in advices recently received. It appears that the sockeye salmon catch this year has been a flat failure as compared with other big years in the cycle of four, and back of the failure is a great tragedy which has cost the lives of millions of fish. The building of the Canadian Northern Railway blocked the Fraser River just below the lakes, and this in turn broke up the spawning grounds with the resultont loss of millions of salmon. The pack of 600,000 cases is larger than last year, which not only was the light year of the cycle but was a bad failure otherwise.

In all normal years large quantities of fish are held over by packers and others from the big year to piece out the supply during the lean years. This cannot be done this year. So scarce did sockeyes become at the close of the run in Puget Sound that fishermen were getting 65 cents per fish for them. It requires an average of thirteen fish to pack a case of ones flat, which means that the actual price paid for fish alone by the canner amounted to $2.11 a dozen cans.

Based on advices from the north, it is likely that sockeye and red Alaska salmon will open considerably higher than the present spot prices. It was hoped that at least red Alaska could be retailed at 25 cents a can for ones, but this is hardly likely now. They will probably have to retail at 30 cents. Sockeyes flat will probably have to go on a 35-cent basis and halves at not less than 20 cents. Opening prices by packers will in all likelihood be named not later than September 4. Pinks alone seem to look favorable.

There were no sessions of the Produce Exchange yesterday and there will be none Monday. According to Secretary Hudson, the receipts comprised 107 cases of eggs, 70,800 pounds of butter, 9680 pounds of cheese, 5784 sacks of potatoes, 300 sacks of onions, 27 sacks of sweet potatoes and 2740 boxes of apples.

BUSINESS TALKS TO WOMEN.

BY ELLEN LANE SPENCER,
Author of "The Efficient Secretary."

When Opportunity is a Handicap.

Two men work for the same organization. The father of one of them is the president of that organization. The other young man has no connections in the place except those built up by his own efforts.

Years ago when these two young men started side by side to work, the president's son was expected to outstrip the other, because he had been exceptionally apt in his work at school and was considered clever. The other young man had no particular aptitude and his only reason for being there was the necessity of supporting himself.

The president liked this young man and pushed him ahead. He discussed things with him whenever the opportunity presented, and gave him the benefit of his counsel. This he was likewise willing to do for his own son in an even greater degree, but his own son was handicapped by the opportunity of seeing his father and talking with him whenever he wanted to, so he very seldom wanted to.

He did not have to make any particular effort in his work, for who would discharge the president's son? He had a wonderful opportunity, one that scores of young men in the same organization would have given a lot to have had, but he had not the incentive of necessity. He was protected and opportunities put in his way, which if he had to strive for he would have grasped.

People wonder that our greatest geniuses have been the children of humble parents. It is not a wonder; it is a reason that they succeeded simply that they had to take their opportunities as they came because they might not come again.

WYOMING SECOND STANDARD OIL CO.

Now in List of Oil and Gas Producers

Within the last week this company has taken over a majority of the stock of two other companies, one owning 217 acres of proven oil land and eight producing wells near Chanute, Kan., and one owning 120 acres and two producing oil wells near the town of Nowata, Okla., and two sections of choice land in the Salt Creek field of Wyoming, where deep drilling is to commence shortly. These recent acquisitions added to the more than 3600 acres of selected oil lands already owned by The Wyoming Second Standard Oil company and its two producing gas wells, give this company an earning power which the directors feel will justify them in declaring a dividend of

Valley Concrete Pipe Co.,
Van Nuys, California.

Gentlemen:-

The irrigation system installed by you on my property in the San Fernando Valley, in which your machine-made concrete pipe is employed explusively, has been eminently satisfactory in every respect.

The pipe has resisted the greatest pressure to which it is possible for me to subject it, the system gives me the maximum degree of irrigation at the minimum cost and with the least expenditure of labor, and it is one that I can unhesitatingly recommend to the landowners in the valley as being effective, profitable and durable.

Trusting that you will enjoy the success merited by the high character of your work, I am,

Very respectfully,

F. X. Pfaffinger

FXP.M

Eminently satisfactory—stands the pressure—maximum degree of irrigation—minimum cost—least expenditure of labor—effective—profitable—durable—

These are the things that impel Mr. Pfaffinger to "unhesitatingly recommend" our irrigation system to all San Fernando Valley landowners.

We use only the best valves, gates and hydrants — made by Kellar-Thomason Co., Los Angeles, irrigation experts who invented and made the pipe-making machine.

We guarantee every job we put in. If you have land in the valley you need our system. Phone or write for information.

HIGH WAGES, SCARCE MATERIALS AND THE DRAFT HIT INDUSTRY.

Flint, Michigan, However, Reports that Factories are Running Full Blast in Order to Meet These Difficulties. High-class Men Drafted from Big Factories

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FLINT (Mich.) Sept. 1.—War is hitting the manufacturers of automobiles from two directions. It is calling for a general speeding up to the top notch of production, in the face of the higher wage demands, difficulty in securing steel and other materials, and at the same time taking for military service some men who are badly needed in the automobile industry.

MANY CALLED.

The Buick Automobile Company, which employs more than 10,000 men, may be taken as a fair example for other concerns. From the [illegible] force 634 men have been summoned by the selective draft. The company managers went before the [illegible] appeal board and requested that six of these men be exempted, as they were badly neded, but exemptions were denied in every instance. Those whom the company tried to retain were assistant traffic manager, [illegible] track dispatcher, rate clerk, [illegible] cost clerk and the stock chaser, but the government argued that they would be of more value in the ranks. Highly trained men, dependable men who are experts in their lines, are extremely hard to find, and the automobile manufacturers say their output will be slowed down to a considerable extent by the absence of the experts.

FAST WORK.

Organization and equipment of the ambulance unit which was undertaken by the Flint Manufacturers' Association, was put through in record time under the skilled generalship of J. D. Dort, chairman of the committee appointed for the purpose by C. S. Mott, president of the Flint chapter of the Red Cross. Mr. Dort had the able and generous assistance of Dr. J. G. R. Manwaring, James S. Parker, H. H. Bassett and W. R. Hubbard.

The Red Cross fared well at the hands of Flint manufacturers. The General Motors Company, as its initial step, voted $10 to the Red Cross fund for every employee, which made the handsome total of $250,000. The Buick and Weston-Mott companies made as their first contribution the sum of $125,000. In addition to these cash donations, the companies have contributed cars, airplane engines and accessories worth thousands of dollars, besides furnishing a number of expert motor drivers and mechanicians.

FINAL FIGURES.

Final earning figures for the Chevrolet Motor Company for the half year indicate that on a basis of $70 per car profit operating net would be in the neighborhood of $4,500,000. To this may be added $2,700,000 received in dividends from its General Motors stock holdings. This is better than $22 a share on its 640,000 shares of stock.

Unable to secure box or even flat cars for shipment, the Buick company has adopted the "drive-away" system. Eighty new cars were sent to Milwaukee Tuesday. They are linked together, with a conductor and driver on the front car, a driver on every other car, and a conductor on the rear car. Trailing this "train" is another car carrying mechanics. Quite recently a train of 135 cars was sent out. These shipments are being made to points as far distant as St. Louis, Omaha and Buffalo.

IN ADDITION.

The Buick people now have agents in St. Louis closing negotiations for a big assembling plant to care for orders from the Middle West and the South.

The Chevrolet company is now taking possession of its new building created to take care of the increased demand for the "Four ninety" car. Six hundred cars of this model are being turned out daily. The Paterson Car Company has lost some of its most valuable men in the draft and through enlistment in the Red Cross and ambulance work. The Dort company makes the same complaint. Both concerns are overloaded with orders.

Herman's U.S. Army Shoe

A letter to "Outdoor Life"

"I sent for a pair of Herman's Army Shoes last year and from the hour I put them on could walk without a stretch, and never have had a tired or pinched foot, corn or any foot trouble. I shall never wear any other in everyday life as long as I can get a pair of them.—Dr. Chas. A. P. Garnsey, Surgeon Dentist, Evanston, Illinois.

Hunting Mountain Goat

Lieut. Col. Charles C. Foster, Brigade Surgeon, M.V.M., writes: "The shoes have been put through a severe test, including a month of hunting mountain sheep and goat in a country where the hillsides consisted chiefly of loose, sliding rock. My chum used up two pairs of much more expensive shoes, while my one pair are practically as good as ever. They are the best combination of lightness, durability and comfort I have ever found.

FORDS NOW USED FOR DRUNK CALLS.

TEN MACHINES PURCHASED FOR POLICE DEPARTMENT.

Each Flivver Takes the Place of a Motorcycle, a Patrol Wagon and Two Officers—Old Cars and Motorcycles Traded in for New Machines.

As told exclusively in the Pink section of The Times several weeks ago, the Los Angeles police department is rapidly being Fordized—Henry's peace ships being substituted for motorcycles for the use of officers called out to settle petty disputes, stop neighborhood rows and bring in plain drunks.

At that time no Fords were obtainable, and even if there had been a trainload for sale, the red tape incident to making city purchases required that bids be asked for. In due time, however, ten new Fords were purchased, and now you can see a bluecoat whizzing down the pike in a flivver, "hell bent for election," at all hours of the day and night.

The purchase of Fords was a wise move, from the standpoint of the taxpayers, for when the officers rode motorcycles the programme was something like this:

A ride to the point where the "drunk" was reported to be located. Then a search for a telephone and a call for the patrol wagon. The patrol wagon, in due time, would arrive, with a driver and another officer, the drunk would be loaded in and escorted to the city bastile. That process tied up a patrol wagon, a motorcycle and the services of three officers. With a Ford, the programme is like this:

An officer jumps into the machine, drives to the point the drunk has selected as a resting place, helps him into the car, gets in and drives back to the station.

This programme allows two officers and a patrol wagon to remain at the station for more important calls.

The department has just purchased ten Fords, five Studebaker seven-passenger machines and twenty-four motorcycles. As a part of the purchase price, ten old cars and thirty-seven motorcycles were traded in.

The Ford squad is now on the job.

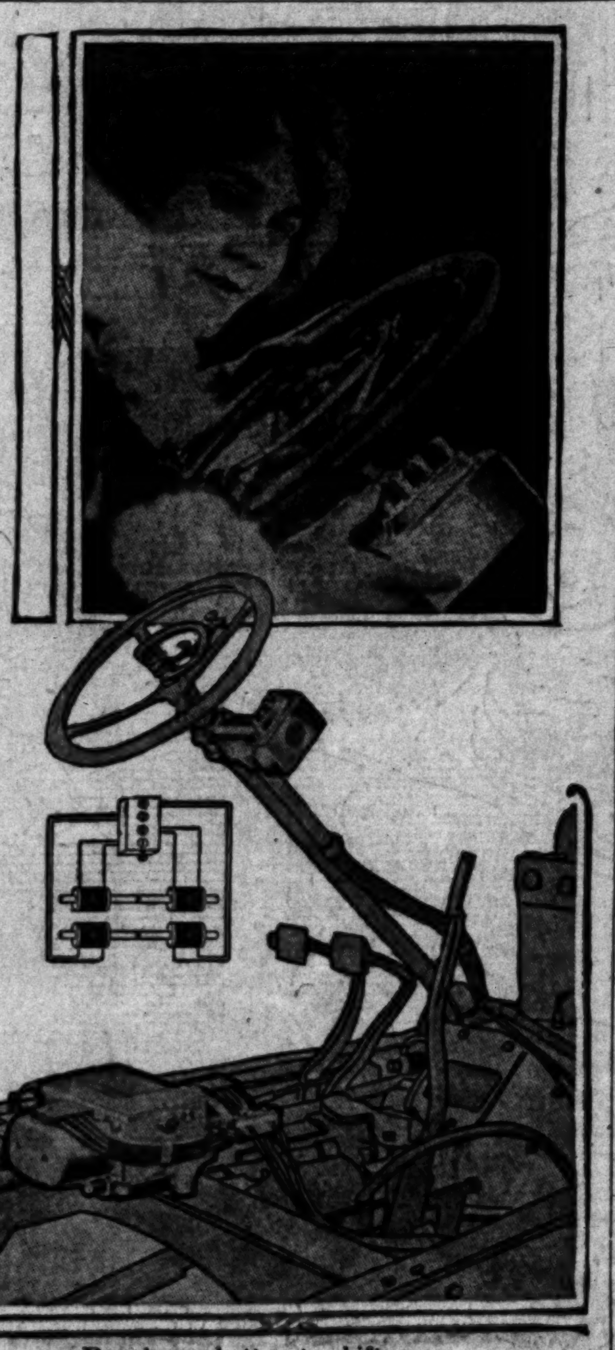
The Pike's Peak hill climb, which was scheduled to be run September 8, has been called off, officials announcing that motor car manufacturers and drivers are engaged in war work and are unable to participate in the meet. No more hill climbs will be run up Colorado's famous peak during the period of the war.

CARS BARRED IN IOWA? NOT NOW.

Eleven years ago Iowa, the home of motor car owners, was so hostile to motor cars that it wanted them kept from the public highways. Today there is one car for every ten persons in the State.

It was eleven years ago that residents of Denison, Iowa, met in solemn session and passed resolutions warning owners to keep their cars off the roads. An article printed in a Denison newspaper bore the following heading: "Autos 'In Bad' at Denison." The article relates that the seventy-five citizens in attendance were willing to give car owners a reasonable time within which to dispose of their cars. The meeting adopted the following resolutions:

"We the undersigned request that the owners of autos keep them off the public highways, as they are a detriment to both town and country and constantly endangering the lives of the public. It seems that the wish of many should be respected by the few."



Pressing a button to shift gears.

From the above pictures of a magnetic gear shifting device, you can get a fairly good idea of how gears can be controlled by "pressing a button." The buttons are labeled 1, 2, 3 and "R." By pressing No. 1, and pushing the clutch pedal all the way down, low gear is engaged. Pressing No. 2, in a similar manner, gives second gear, and No. 3 gives high gear. The button marked "R," gives reverse gear. By pressing any button desired, before it is needed, the only movement required thereafter to get into that gear is to push the clutch pedal all the way down. As an example, suppose you are driving in high gear, going up a steep hill, and you realize that sooner or later you will have to use second gear. By pressing button No. 2 (but without pushing the clutch pedal at all,) you continue in high until the instant you want to change to second gear. Then, by pushing the clutch pedal all the way down you will be in second without a second's delay.

Quite a Question.

IS THE GEAR-SHIFTING LEVER TO DISAPPEAR?

Several Cars will Use the Magnetic Method This Year.

WITHOUT stopping to give the problem due consideration, any one, it would seem, would prefer a magnetic gear-shifting car to one that requires manual labor—would prefer pressing a button to wrestling with a lever. But the fact that only a few cars have adopted the magnetic gear-shifting mechanism, opens up the subject for discussion.

A few years ago, you will remember, only a few cars had self-starters. That was because the first self-starter failed to work part of the time, and it was a case of use it when it felt like doing the work it was intended to do, and using the old crank at other times. In the past several cars have used the magnetic gear-shifting device, only to discard it, but today, it must be admitted, it seems to be coming into its own again. Several cars furnish this equipment if desired, and at least one car uses no other.

Furthermore, it seems likely that at least half a dozen cars will be so equipped by the time the auto show opens in New York this fall, and if New York fans approve of the magnetic gear shifter, every other part of the country will fall in line.

DESCRIPTION.

From a description of what many consider the most practical magnetic gear shift the following is taken, and by referring to the drawing and pictures which accompany this article, one can gain a good idea of the way it works:

Most automobiles are provided with three forward speeds, and one reverse speed, and in the C-H magnetic gear shift here are four solenoids arranged in two sets of two each, as shown in this illustration. If you press button No. 1 you close the circuit to solenoid No. 1, causing the shaft (A) to move to the left. If you press button No. 2 you energize solenoid No. 2, causing the shaft (A) to move to the right. If you press button No. 3 you energize solenoid No. 3, causing shaft (B) to move to the left, which will give you high speed, while if you press button R, energizing spool R, you bring the reverse gear into mesh with the engine shaft, causing the automobile to go backward. Pressing the "N" (neutral) button and throwing out the clutch, neutralizes the gears.

In this description we have supposed, for the sake of simplicity, that pressing the push button immediately energizes one of the four solenoids, but this is not quite what takes place. As a matter of fact, pressing a button does not energize one of the solenoids; it merely partially closes the circuit to a certain solenoid, but the circuit is not completely closed until you throw the clutch pedal down to the floor board by pressing it with your foot. The clutch pedal is so arranged that you can throw out the clutch in the usual manner by partially depressing the pedal, but if you push the pedal to the extreme position you bring two copper surfaces in contact for an instant and permit the electricity to flow to the particular solenoid which was selected when you pressed one of the push buttons. The push buttons are therefore known as "selector switches" because they do not actually close the circuit but select in advance the circuit that will be energized when you push the clutch pedal to the extreme position.

This selective feature is of great value in the operation of an automobile, since it enables you to choose in advance of the actual operation of the gear shift the speed into which you wish to go.

If you start to climb a hill on high speed and think it may be necessary to drop back to second speed before you reach the top of the hill you press button No. 2, which partially closes the circuit to solenoid No. 2. You are now ready to drop back to second speed the moment you push the clutch pedal to the extreme position, but you may find that you can reach the top of the hill on high gear, in which case you do not push the clutch pedal at all, but, having reached the top of the hill, you continue on at high speed without having shifted gears at all. If you like, you may continue on with button No. 2 depressed ready to drop back to second speed whenever the circumstances require it.

IN TRAFFIC.

A similar condition occurs when you are traversing a city street and see a congestion of traffic ahead of you. You push button No. 2 or No. 1, in order that you may instantly drop back to second speed or low speed as soon as you are close to the spot where there is a congestion of vehicles. But if a lane opens up for you before you reach this spot you can continue on at high speed, since the

NEW TRAP FOR AUTO THIEVES.

Standardized Report Favored by Local Club.

Chief Butler Approves Plan for Entire Coast.

National Co-operation to be Asked Later.

If all police departments and other authorities would standardize the reports filed of automobile thefts, the number of stolen cars recovered would be increased 50 per cent. throughout America.

In other words, a national standardization movement along this line would save motorists more than $1,000,000 a year in "lost" cars which are stolen and never recovered.

Having come to this realization, the directors of the Automobile Club of Southern California have authorized a coast-wide campaign to induce all police departments from Seattle to San Diego to adopt a standard form for automobile theft reports.

Leaving Los Angeles yesterday, a representative of the automobile club's theft bureau started on a coast tour, which will include all of the principal cities where the standard form as used by the automobile club, and adopted here by Chief of Police Butler, will be presented to each police commission, together with reasons for its general adoption.

BUTLER LIKES PLAN.

Automobile club officials have also asked Chief Butler to consider a plan for bringing the question up nationally before the police department throughout the country. Chief Butler is enthusiastic in his indorsement of the plan, and yesterday stated that the amount saved on the Pacific Coast by its adoption would reach tens of thousands of dollars annually.

Embodied in the standard form to be nationally adopted will be: make, type and year model of the car; color of body and gear; all manufacturers' numbers; make, type, size and serial number of tires; description of work done by owner on the car; dents and scratches on the car; extra equipment and manufacturer's number of same; contents of car when stolen and the company with which it was insured.

According to Detective John Powell of the theft bureau, who will represent the automobile club on the "educational tour," all such reports will be signed by the person reporting the theft. The reason for this is an important one.

SET A TRAP.

Several instances have been found where cars have been "stolen" by their owners with intent to defraud the company carrying the insurance. If such a theft is reported by the purported owner over the telephone and he is then "caught up" on the act by subsequent evidence, he can easily say that he was not the one who telephoned in the report. But when the report is officially signed and filed then there will be no escape for such offenders.

Most important of all, however, according to the club's theft bureau officials, is the elimination of confusion which now exists in the national exchange of identification evidence.

Eastern police departments in reporting a stolen car give nothing more definite than the make and motor number of the automobile, and with such slim evidence the local authorities have practically no chance to trace the stolen property.

CHANGE NUMBER.

It is pointed out that the thieves almost invariably change the motor number so that such identification is eliminated altogether. However, if the police departments all over the country would adopt a standard form, sufficient evidence could be transmitted from city to city to insure the eventual recovery of the stolen car.

Not a day passes, say the local police, but that a car with the motor number changed is found. Chief of Police Butler has already adopted the form used by the automobile club for Los Angeles, and thus has established this city as the first to inaugurate the move for national standardization.

To illustrate the efficacy of a complete report such as that recommended, it is pointed out that 122 stolen automobiles have been recovered by the automobile club since the first of the year, these totaling a valuation of $97,600.

Approximately 3000 automobiles are stolen in Pacific Coast cities every year. Of these, under the present indiscriminate system of reports, more than 500 are never recovered, representing a total loss of $400,000 to motorists. That this loss could be cut in half if each city would adopt the standard report is the contention of the automobile club officials.

San Francisco and Oakland will be two of the important centers which will be asked to aid in leading the campaign for universal report standardization as well as all Coast automobile organizations.

AUTO INDUSTRY IS TWENTY YEARS OLD.

The Winton Motor Company is making preparations for the twentieth "birthday" anniversary of the automobile industry in America. On April 1, 1898, the Winton company began delivery of the first regular output of American-made cars. The automobile is now such a tremendous factor in American life that a fitting celebration of its approach to voting age is certainly to be desired.

Alexander Winton, founder and president of the Winton company, is now visiting the Pacific Coast branches in Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles. At Portland he will supervise the installation of Winton oil engines in vessels built for trans-Pacific service.

SOLDIER BOYS TO BE AMUSED.

[DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 1.—Something new in the way of an entertainment feature for our new army has just sprung up in this city. The local motor car owners have joined hands and have agreed to furnish transportation for entertainers to the military camps on certain evenings of each week, and in order to do their "bit" the members of the amusement profession have in turn offered their services, the idea being to "start something" for the boys during their hours of leisure. It is possible that car owners and musicians in other sections may follow the lead established by their Washington brethren.

TIRE COST HITS THE PURSE HARD.

The largest expense to the motorist is the four tires, even when the car s gvng a tire milage of nearly 7500. Tires which are good for a figure in excess of 10,000 miles are an exception. This milage claims $1 of every four which the motorist puts down on the counter of the equipment retailer. It is estimated that the cost of inner casings is approximately one-eighth of the total tire expense.

Next in importance is the gasoline expenditure. Fuel costs 22 cents a gallon on annual average the country over and it was found that the nation-wide average takes 27 cents out of every dollar to keep the engine running. In the investigation which produced the figures given here it was nearly fifteen miles per gallon of fuel.

Weather has an important effect on the segments of the motorist's appropriation which the gasoline and tire outlays cover. In summer, the higher temperatures give conditions for almost perfect vaporization in well-cooled engines. The weight of demountable tops and the addition of tire chains in winter cut mileage one-fifth and fuel mileage one-third.

The motor car's repairs and replacements are third in importance. They amount to 8 per cent. of the season's bills with expense varying greatly with the skill of the individual driver. The money spent for motor car lubricants ordinarily amounts to 4 per cent of the total outlay over the year.

Going Down!

SPECULATION IN AUTO STOCKS.

Prices Drop as Sales Show Big Decrease.

Uncertainties of War are Given as Cause.

Several Companies are Cutting Their Dividends.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 1. — While reports from various parts of the country, and especially from Los Angeles and other Southern California points, indicate that the automobile business is in a much more flourishing condition than a short time ago, it would be somewhat of a shock to many to know the inside story of the game from the standpoint of speculators in automobile stocks.

When the war broke out the industry was going along boomingly, with full steam ahead; speculation was at fever heat; quotations went up out of sight; but in a few weeks the prices of stocks started falling off, and there have been some decidedly big drops from month to month ever since. The war fever had to experience its reaction. The pendulum had to swing back.

Uncertainty as to the amount of tax that would be levied on manufacturers and owners, uncertainty as to how long the war would last, uncertainty as to the ability of manufacturers to get raw material in sufficient quantities, and a long list of other uncertainties, has had much to do with the decline in the speculative prices of shares.

Buyers, in turn, have been slow to place orders, because of the uncertainties of the times. They have waited to see just who would be called to go to the front, they have been uncertain as to the cost of the necessities of life, and they also have been uncertain as to the future price of oil and gasoline. Then, too, the price of tires as well as the price of autos, has been steadily going higher, and taken as a whole the entire automobile business, from manufacturer to buyer, has been in, and still is in, an uncertain condition.

Some of the companies, and not all of them small companies, either, had to do some tall hustling to raise money between April and June. Raw material, ordered months before, was coming in, and as sales were dropping off, and the overhead e-

Grace accomplishes the thing with least outlay of energy.

That which we call "beauty of power" is motion with no power lost or misapplied.

And true efficiency is never gained until waste is eliminated.

To develop a motor that would make the utmost use of every particle of fuel it became necessary to lessen the size of the cylinders employed and multiply the number of explosions.

And the result? The powerful, economical twin-six motor, with its continuous torrent of power.

To this basic "beauty of performance" Packard beauty of free-flowing lines and graceful symmetry of contour are fitting accompaniments.

WILL "INCLINE" HIGHWAYS MAKE GAS UNNECESSARY?

EVERY motorist who has coasted down a long grade, and noted the lack of vibration, and the ease with which his car skimmed over the roadway, will be interested in the "dream" of a Los Angeles man who thinks it possible that some day motorists will coast all the way from Los Angeles to New York and back again.

Yes, sir! That's what he says—coast all the way to New York and back to the Southland, without using a drop of gasoline.

Wouldn't that make old John D. knit his shaggy eyebrows and tear his hair out by the roots! It certainly would, but the Los Angeles dreamer doesn't care a rap about the Standard Oil magnate.

Just listen to his dream:

"Every one will admit that it would be possible to erect a concrete and steel elevator shaft several hundred feet high, we will say, at Long Beach. Then, if an elevated roadway were built from the top of that shaft to Los Angeles, or any other point within a reasonable distance of the beach city, it would be possible to coast over it all the way. Another shaft at Los Angeles and an incline to the south, would allow motorists to coast to the beach.

NO VIBRATION.

"There would be no vibration, consequently the passengers would enjoy the trip more than if made over a level, or uphill, downhill roadway, where power would be required.

"There would be no expense, aside from the charge for hoisting the automobile to the top of the shaft, for gasoline would not be required until the machine left the incline.

"In the same way a series of inclines could be built across the United States, so one could coast all the way. In some places it would be possible to coast for 100 miles or more, if the incline were started from the top of a mountain.

"As there would be two roadways, or inclines, and traffic could go in but one direction, the danger of collisions would be eliminated, as would the dangerous railroad crossings.

"Laterals, branching to the left and right, both for the purpose of leaving the main incline, as well as for reaching it, could be built, until the entire country were served with the cheapest possible kind of motive power.

"To carry the plan a little farther why not have the incline highway enclosed, so that snow and rain and mud would be forever done away with? Then, when the resident of New York, or Maine, or any other cold and dismal State, felt the need of a vacation in Southern California, he could jump into his car, motor to the first elevator leading to the highway, and start for the paradise in the southwestern part of the United States.

"An example of the value of inclines can be seen on the Ridge route, as one reaches the grade going towards Bakersfield. A heavy machine can coast fifteen miles, and in case of a strong wind coming from the south, it is almost possible to coast all the way from the top of the grade to Bakersfield, a distance of thirty-two miles.

OTHER DREAMS.

"The incline plan is a dream, nothing more. So was the building of automobiles, telephone lines, the phonograph, the flying machine and every other invention of note.

"Possibly this dream will come true, as have the others. At any rate every motorist enjoys coasting, and never lets an opportunity slip to save gas and at the same time enjoy a vibrationless ride down a long hill.

"The cost of such a system of inclines would be enormous, of course, but it also would bring in millions of dollars a month. A small charge, say from 10 cents to $1, according to the distance one could coast, would be gladly paid, providing the motorist could save more than that amount in the cost of gasoline."

(The pipe is drawing fine. Please do not awaken the dreamer suddenly.)

"Then, after the pleasure vehicles had been provided for, incline railroads could be provided, so that a string of freight cars, heavily loaded, could be sent from New York to the Pacific Coast, in a few days, with only a few brakemen on board to regulate the speed.

"There is 100 times as much power going to waste in the streams of the United States as would be required to 'raise' all passenger and freight vehicles to the tops of these inclines, and once raised they would require no power to reach their destination."

A dream? Certainly. Only a dream, but why awaken the dreamer? Let him rave on, and some day, perhaps, his dream will come true. The incline, you know, is not exactly new, as it is brought into play in sending logs down the mountain side, for one, five or twenty miles, to the sawmill, and from that point conveyed in a similar manner to the railroad.

Five Gallons, Please!

GIRLS PREFER JOY RIDE TO BOX OF CHOCOLATES.

Father, Mother and the Whole Family Economize and Buy Gas.

MANY people will do without a whole lot of things in order to buy gasoline for the family car. Miss Genevieve still likes her chocolates and bonbons, but she would rather have a ride to San Diego than a five-pound box of candy. Her big brother likes dollar seats at the theater for his best girl and himself, but they both prefer a trip to Santa Barbara, and nine times out of ten if they cannot afford both they take the flying fliver out and burn up two dollars' worth of gasoline.

Even little Johnny and his sister Sue, "them two," prefer a ride to a visit to an ice cream stand, and as twenty cents worth of gas will go a long ways toward a trip to the beach and back, they vote for the Standard Oil mixture.

Father likes the motoring game, also, and he wields a safety razor, and even lets "mother" cut his hair in order to have more money for gas.

HITS 'EM ALL.

This auto craze, which started about twenty years ago, and got right down to business about ten years ago, hits 'em all. It takes a few shekels away from the ball game each day, has a tendency to make the theatrical man walk down the street talking to himself, and even invades the church and cuts down the size of the Sunday collection. Not Billy Sunday, you understand, for Billy gets his whether the ordinary pastor collects or fails to collect.

The price of a new hat, for instance, for Miss Maggie, is not less than ten or fifteen simoleons, a sum sufficient to buy out an oil station, almost, and when invested in gasoline at 20 cents per gallon it means a joy ride for five or six people of 1000 or 1500 miles.

And when it comes to getting along with an old gown, or suit of clothes, in order to enjoy the family car—oh, my! oh, my!—that means enough gas to circle the United States—almost. Ten cents' worth takes five people ten miles. A dollar's worth takes them 100 miles. Five dollars' worth means a 500-mile trip.

You can't beat that game, can you? Fishing trips, hunting trips, beach trips, picnics and joy rides.

Mother makes a dozen calls in an afternoon, with the aid of her car, where formerly it took all day to make half that number. And she visits the market, between calls, and lugs home enough groceries and provisions for a week.

Father jumps into the family runabout and spins a mile to get some tobacco. When he returns his daughter uses the same car to run down town and get a yard of ribbon. Then, if no one else needs the car for an hour or two, her brother hops in and takes his girl for a ride.

Popular? Why the family car is the most popular thing in the world, and right now, right here in Los Angeles, if it were a case of give up the home and keep the car, or the other way around, a large percentage of the owners would vote to let the house and lot slide.

Dealers are wise to all of this—just leave it to them—and they are harping on the many advantages of owing an automobile, morning, noon and night. The man who never owned one, merely longs for a chance to join the motorist throng, but the fellow who has been at the wheel of his own car—well, he simply can't keep house without a gas buggy.

Yes, business is still good on automobile row, thank you—and it's going to remain so, for the craze will never end.

RAILROAD CARRIES STONE FOR HIGHWAY.

The advisory commission of the Council of National Defense has assured the Kentucky Representative, A. B. Rouse, that freight cars in sufficient numbers to carry stone for an uncompleted section of the Dixie highway in Boone county will be supplied by the Queen and Crescent Railway.

The Dixie highway is to be used as a military road between the army post at Fort Thomas and Camp Taylor at Louisville.

PRICE MANIPULATORS, TAKE WARNING.

BY HARVEY E. WESTGATE.

Though bacon costs six bits a pound, and soon may cost a dollar,
Though bread is now a "bit" a loaf, you never hear me holler;
Though hen fruit sells for sixty cents, and may go even higher,
Though grocers gouge me every day, I'm still a cheerful buyer.
But mark my word, and mark it well, though I may seem serene,
I'll throw a fit if oil men boost the price of gasoline.

Though butter prices take a leap, and I must go without,
Though hot dogs cost a quarter each, you'll never hear me spout;
Though shoes and clothes become so scarce, that fig leaves must be worn,
Though Wall street boosts the price of stocks, and likewise wheat and corn;
I'll stand it all, and never kick, providing my machine
Can still go tearin' down the road on low-priced gasoline.

Though wages fall and prices soar, and hard must be my lot,
Though landlords raise the price of rent, and make me move my cot;
Though panics put me on the bum, and things go all to smash,
Though cafe men charge double for a doubtful plate of hash;
I'll smile and be an optimist, and drive my old machine,
As long as no one tinkers with the price of gasoline.

Speculation.

pense was piling up daily, it required quick figuring to get enough cash to meet the bills.

One big company is still in a ticklish position, arrangements having been made with creditors for a further extension of time in which to meet its payments. The company has many thousands of cars made up, and if they can be sold within a reasonable time, the company will weather the storm, but the 1917 profits will be meager indeed. Dividends have been cut by several concerns.

But sales of cars are now increasing; new models are being brought out; the country now knows just about what can be expected as a war programme; and it is freely predicted that the losses in speculative stocks recorded in the past few months will be partly recovered between now and January 1.

The following stock quotations show the high week of the month of August, the top figure for the year and the closing figure for August 30, in the New York stock market:

Magnetic Gear Shift

gears are not shifted when you press a button, but only when you push the clutch pedal with your foot treme position. All changes of speed are effected by these two operations pressing a push button with your finger and throwing the clutch pedal down to the floor board with your foot. To start the machine from a standstill you press button No. 1, push the clutch pedal with your foot and the car starts on low speed. Now press button No. 2 and push the clutch pedal and you slip instantly, silently and smoothly into second speed. Press button No. 3 and push the clutch pedal once more and you are in high speed. If you wish to back your car, press button "R," depress the clutch pedal with your foot and the gear shift brings the reverse gears into engagement with the engine shaft. To neutralize the gears the "N" button is pressed and the clutch pedal pushed out the same as in shifting.

CRUDE OIL PRICE SETS NEW RECORD.

The highest price in twenty years has just been reported in connection with Pennsylvania crude oil. South Pennsylvania, it is stated, recently made an abrupt change upward of 15 cents a barrel, bringing the cost for this grade up to $3.25 per barrel. A number of other grades advanced from 5 to 15 cents per barrel. It is predicted that this rise will mean an advance of 1 cent per gallon in the tank wagon cost of gasoline, and 4 or 5 cents per gallon in the cost of lubricating oil. The tank wagon price of gasoline in the East now is 24 cents.

Chalmers Power, Speed, and Endurance Is Proven!

Yet, in spite of this phenomenal performance, wresting 15 records from cars with greater piston displacements, the Chalmers is, today, the lowest priced car of high quality made in America.

This is terrific speed for a motor to maintain, steadily, while the hands of the clock travel twice around the dial. It is endurance that has never before been proven in any car.

It took nerve to start a car on such a run with so small a piston displacement as 224 cubic inches, against the record held by a car with 288 cubic inches.

It took genuine mechanical perfection to back the nerve and do the work. It took power in abundance, working harmony of parts and exceptional stability. The Chalmers has them all.

The Chalmers is the quality car. This has now been demonstrated officially and beyond the quibble or criticism of any competitor. It is an enviable record to hold,—that of being the most durable car in the official files of the American Automobile Association.

If you ever hesitated to purchase a Chalmers, do so no longer.

It absolutely refused to move on inch. We couldn't make head or tail out of the thing until we found that the man's name was Al K. Hall. Then we gradually realized why the boozeometer on the wheel had registered 100 per cent. alcohol. The thing meant well, but was too readily susceptible to influences that would have no bearing on its operation. I know I tried the machine myself when I wanted to take a four-ounce bottle of Jamaica ginger home to my suffering family. It honked so loudly for the police that the people roundabout though that the Von Hindenberg line had been extended to include our precinct.

I shudder to think of the disturbance that would have resulted had a truck equipped with a boozeometer essayed to deliver a consignment of Peruna at the corner drug store. It would make the battle of Verdun seem like the hour of prayer at the deaf and dumb asylum.

Henry's next experiment in stabilizing against John Barleycorn followed a suggestion of my own. We substituted a coffee mill for the regulation engine. Henry rather thought it might be an improvement anyhow and I had figured that Lizzie would run safer on coffe than Bronx cocktails. We could go rolling down to Rio and jaunting over Java.

But the idea didn't pan out as well as hoped for. There was always a grinding about the machine that seemed to call for a roast. Likewise, one of our tourists filled up on creme de Mocha—which is distilled from coffee—and tried to drive his road beetle through Central Park. This de Mocha stuff is powerful enough to open a burglar-proof vault and when a party soaks up a few libations of it he remains wild for the rest of the week. It is so stout that it makes rum seem like bilgewater, so that our cuffee-mill engine gave us practically no respite from the wiles of the demon.

But we have not abandoned hope. Some day we will come before you with a real water wagon—one that will refuse to turn a wheel when piloted by a slob whose wheeze is flavored with hops. In that day a waiting world—including Billy Sunday—will rise up and call us blessed.

Usually when a man's car has been lifted by a bandit he makes a roar that can be heard for two stations out on the railroad, but there are occasional instances wherein a party tries his best to lose his Lizzie and then can't make it. When Barmeister soured on his buzz wagon he insured it for all he could and then tried his blamedest to be rid of it. He left it in the most tempting places, but no one appeared to want it very badly. On a couple of occasions, when it was gone long enough for him to make complaint, somebody would telephone him that the thing was standing on the corner and all that it seemed to need was a little gasoline. He tried to burn it up, but at the critical moment somebody would be handy to save and prolong its useless life.

He even tried to steal it himself. He broke into his own garage one night, took out the dumb thing, and, after driving it some miles into the country, tried to push it off a cliff. But it hung to a stump at that, and two mornings after he found the machine in the middle of his lawn with a note to the effect that the owner had once done a kindness to the finder and the latter wished to reciprocate. He didn't care for the machine, anyhow. How it happened Barmeister never could understand.

It seemed that he could neither lose it, wreck it, or give it away.

Then one day he got one of these massive, burglar-proof, unbustable locks that are guaranteed to resist the stoutest efforts of the most desperate safe blowers. He fastened that to his machine, added a log chain for good measure, and left the outfit standing in front of the City Hall.

When he came back twenty minutes later the car was gone!

That was about a week ago.

Tomorrow he expects to report the loss.

When they banished the dice box from the open front tobacco shops the curbstone speculators voiced their wrath, but of course it didn't prevent them from burning incense to the goddess of chance. They can still pull straws or bet on the number of fox terriers or red-headed women that will pass in the next ten minutes. Some of them returned to the joyful and unexpected combinations of buzzwagon poker. In this the license numbers on passing motor cars take the place of the great American poker hand of song and story. For instance: We are standing on a corner; I take the number of the first car that passes. It is 32321. You call the second. It is 6425. In my combination I have a pair of treys and a pair of aces. You haven't even a dinky little pair, so you hand me your money, watch and family jewels. And so on. There are dozens of ways in which the game may be varied or made interesting and any number may participate. If the play is to be prolonged one man can take the high hand from the first ten jitneys that pass, while another can take his pick from cars driven by women.

Sylvester and Waldo have been playing the game off and on for some time and have tried it with very many variations. The lunch hour frequently finds both in the vicinity of the Broadway tunnel and a favorite sport is to gamble on the whizzers passing through that bore. They will hold the watch for an agreed time of five or ten minutes and Sylvester will have his pick from the numbers on cars going north while Waldo will rest his hand on the south-bound traffic. The party with the low hand buys the lunch and trimmings.

Yesterday they met as usual and started blithely on a five-minute schedule. In the first minute a north-bound car entered the tunnel wearing the license number 44424. This made four 4's and is usually good for the money in a rough and tumble game.

At any rate the figures looked good to Sylvester.

But two minutes later there came rumbling through the tunnel a machine carrying the sign of 166,666. That is not only a high hand but a high number. Five sixes will clean up the board when the bones are rattled and would start a riot in a poker game. Sylvester gave up—or at least offered to, but Waldo insisted that it would only be fair to wait the agreed limit. Just ten seconds before the time expired a car dashed up the road at a lively clip and plunged into the tunnel. The tailboard indicated a license number that made the speculators' eyes pop.

It was No. 111111!

Waldo says that if anybody had showed up in Goldfield when he first knew the town and had tried to put anything across with a background of six aces he would have been shot so full of holes he wouldn't hold a plug hat. But this being a peaceful and law-abiding town Sylvester was permitted to get away with it.

But it was certainly a good day for the high rollers.

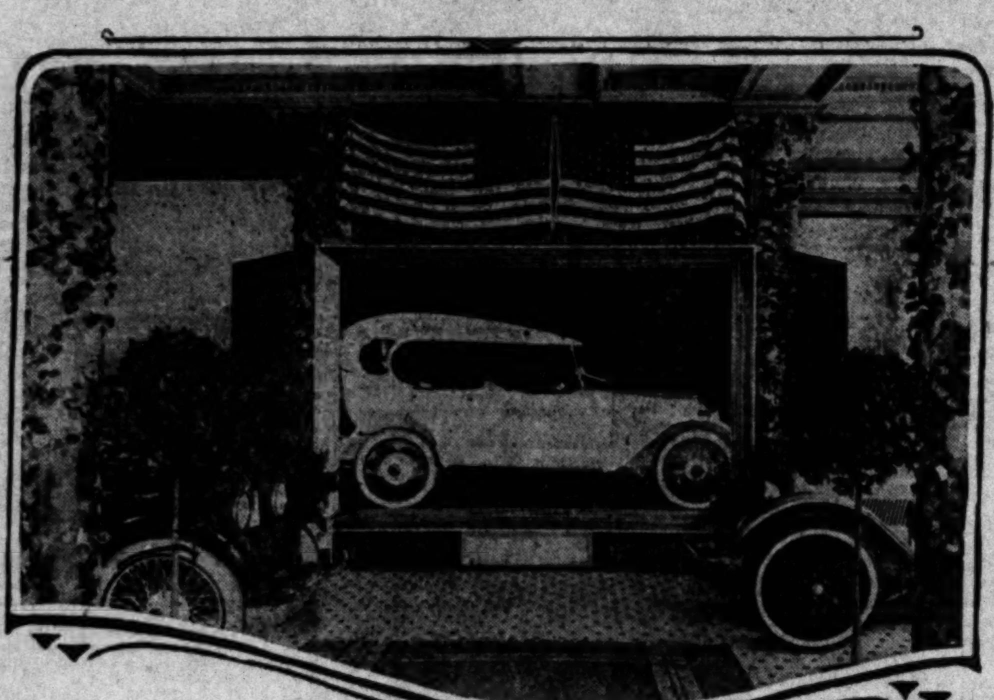
This column is for the outdoor folk. Amusing stories of the adventures and experiences of motorists and their ilk are welcomed and if found available will be compiled for publication. The purple ribbon of the Adventurers will be awarded for the best contribution each week. This time it goes by a narrow margin to Sylvester.

Contributions and applications for admission to the ranks of the Adventurers may be addressed to Eugene Brown, editorial rooms, The Times.

Under-inflation is the white plague of the pneumatic tire.

It's Just as Pretty as a Picture.



This isn't an oil painting, but a real car.

Even some of the other dealers have been kind enough to say that nothing has ever been attempted, in the way of a private "show," or exhibition, that compares with the one the Leach Motor Car Company put on at Fourth and Broadway. The Premier in the picture above is one of eight special body and top jobs turned out here in Los Angeles. Tens of thousands of people have seen and admired the cars. Set on a small stage, with a big frame surrounding it, this Premier certainly looks like a picture.

Lift the Hood

WHEN you lift the hood of a GRANT SIX you see a valve-in-head engine that is pretty nearly the best piece of engine building you'll ever have a chance to look at.

This GRANT SIX engine develops 35 horse power at 2400 R. P.M. and is one of the most powerful and efficient engines of its size ever built. Its economy is nationally famous—owners average 20 miles to a gallon of gasoline and 900 miles to a gallon of oil.

Other things you will note under the GRANT SIX hood are the Stewart vacuum feed, the Wagner starter with Bendix drive and the finest electrical equipment ever put on a popular priced car.

When you close the hood, stand off and take in the lines of the GRANT SIX. Then go around to the rear and look at the full floating rear axle, the big brake drums, the cantilever springs. Then step into the car and note the roominess, the high-grade upholstering, the springiness of the cushions.

And buy this car for only $985 f.o.b. Los Angeles. It's unmatchable at anywhere near the price.

The Easy Riding All-Family Hupmobile

We venture to suggest that greater riding comfort cannot be found in an automobile than you will experience in the Family Hupmobile, for seven people.

Seldom, if ever, will you find any car equipped with such long, resilient springs,—measuring 60 inches. They glide you along, over roads of every sort, as pleasantly as a Pullman coach.

The auxiliary seats are deeply upholstered in leather. They are not the skimpy, hard-riding benches usually found in the larger cars. And there's plenty of leg-room for the longest man.

The doors are very wide, permitting one to enter without squeezing; and they open full width.

Then, there's a dignity and grace about this Hupmobile for the family that gives it class along the road. The center cowl is broad and gives a litheness and long, slender, aristocratic bearing to this splendid motor car.

May we suggest that you permit us to demonstrate the wonderful riding quality of this Family Hupmobile for you. It is, easily, one of the most popular vehicles for vacations and extensive touring we have ever shown.

The Westcott Six

Can You Afford to Own a Cheaper Car?

THE COST of maintaining a motor car is of far greater importance than the list price. The Westcott, while comparing favorably with other high-grade automobiles in first cost, is incomparably less expensive to maintain.

Examine the details. Note that every unit represents the highest developments of engineering science as applied to its particular purpose. Note the liberal use of aluminum and chrome vanadium steel. Note the perfect lubrication of every moving part, and remember that imperfect lubrication is the most fruitful source of all motor car depreciation, breakage and expense.

The perfect balance of the Westcott Six, its low suspension, its spring construction, the final drive with all torque stresses relieved from axles and springs, the compensated action of springs and brakes, the vibrationless Continental Motor with cylinders 3½" bore by 5¼" stroke, the oversize dimensions of all essential parts,—these all make for daily economy and long life.

A thermostat controls the water circulation, maintaining the engine at maximum efficiency under all weather conditions, and reducing consumption of gasoline and oil to lowest terms. The Delco System of Starting, Lighting and Ignition is practical perfection. The upholstery is of the finest leather, dull finished, durable and beautiful. Painting and finishing are done with reference to permanent protection no less than to adornment.

The Westcott Six will give you more miles per dollar than any other car of its class.

Crosses Pass Twelve Thousand Feet High.

Topeka oil man makes long trip with family.

J. F. William Renker, a Topeka (Kan.) oil man, recently made a trip with his family, six in all, to Los Angeles. Then he headed the big sixteen-valve White towards New York. In two weeks' time he traveled 4000 miles. Berthal Pass, 12,000 feet high, was negotiated without any trouble, Mr. Renker said. The average mileage per gallon of gasoline, according to the Kansas man, was fourteen. At one place he had to pay 48 cents a gallon. On his way east Mr. Renker intends to visit the White factory.

SKIDDIN' AROUND ON AUTO ROW.

THE highest priced tire in the world, the Delion, is now sold in Los Angeles by Brockwell & Webb, No. 116 East Ninth street. The new Delion cord treads are built on the same principle as the old Roman roads, cord being substituted for wood, and the cords laid diagonally across the tire, instead of lengthwise or crosswise. The outer layer of rubber, the tread, carries numerous cords, but the wear is "on end of each cord," instead of on the side of each. It is also claimed by the makers, who guarantee it for 7500 miles, that the Delion is a non-skid tire, from the time it is put on until it is completely worn out, the exposed fabric cord, it is said, absolutely preventing skidding. In one instance, it is claimed, a set of these tires was driven 36,000 miles. The Los Angeles firm has the States of California, Arizona and Nevada.

Ki Yamashita, Japanese porter for Greer-Robbins Company, says he also broke a record last Sunday. He spent all night Saturday and all day Sunday on the Redondo pier and caught only twelve mackerel. "Too many clowd people," explained Ki.

There's a clever combination of color on a car displayed in a Flower-street window. The body is a vivid grass green and the trimmings are in a rich brown. The effect is a pleasing one, suggesting a California spring and fall in one scheme.

H. C. Turner of the Turner-Whitford Company, would like to see the government take a hand in the improvement of the Lincoln highway, and other transcontinental routes. He believes that if the war continues for any length of time it will be necessary to connect up the links of good roads, without waiting for the various States and counties to do the work piecemeal. Turner is daily looking for orders to report at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and enter the war college for an intensive course in the engineering department. He is a member of the American Association of Automobile Engineers.

The Smith Form-a-Tractor will be one of the farm cultivating devices to be exhibited at the annual demonstration of the Farm Implement and Vehicle Dealers' Association, September 18. This tractor is designed for use in connection with the chassis of a Ford automobile and does not destroy the utility of the car for other purposes.

F. G. Allor, a Detroit business man, arrived here a few days ago after driving a Franklin touring car containing six passengers through from the automobile city in nine days. Although the front tires contained only forty pounds of air pressure and the rear tires but fifty pounds, the entire trip of 3036 miles was made without a puncture.

Don Smith of Earl V. Armstrong, Inc., left Thursday for a hunting trip in Oregon. He is making the journey to his destination in his Chandler roadster, but will use pack horses to go into the game regions.

"Two Weeks in a Bathing Suit" is the title of a vacation that Lew Head is taking. Lew wrestles with the advertising and publicity problems that keep the Hupp and Chalmers before the public attention.

The innovation of rebuilding all Chandler cars before putting them on the used-car market, as is the present custom of Earl V. Armstrong, Inc., has been making a decidedly favorable impression with the motor-buying public, according to C. C. Gildner, who has charge of the used-car department for the Chandler distributors.

T. E. Jarrard, vice-president of the Apperson Bros. Automobile Company, has written Harris M. Hanshue, manager of the local branch, that he will leave the factory for Los Angeles September 15. This will be Mr. Jarrard's first visit to Los Angeles.

Careful use must be made of soapstone in conjunction with inner tubes. Too little will cause the tubes to stick to the casing, and too much will burn the tube, causing it to become porous. Never put a damp tube into a casing, says J. H. Forsythe of the Forsythe Tire Service Company, as the dampness will cause the talc to cake and damage the tube.

W. M. Wheeler, one of the oldest automobile salesmen in Los Angeles, until recently associated with the Chalmers department of Greer-Robbins Company, is now on the Buick sales force.

"Get out on the boulevards for an early-morning spin if you would get some idea of what the motor truck is doing for the rapid and economic distribution of food supplies," says D. F. Poyer of the Poyer Truck Company, agents for the Republic truck. In this work the truck has supplanted the horse, and as a result the produce reaches the markets in better condition, in a much shorter period of time and at less expense. The motor truck is certainly doing its "bit" toward keeping food prices down.

Tourist travel is greater this year than ever before, according to Charles H. Thompson, local distributor of Jackson and Hollier cars, who, personally, is a lover of the great outdoors. Last week, on the road between Los Angeles and Bakersfield, he passed two cars of these makes from the State of Washington, two from New York, one from Massachusetts, one from the Hawaiian Islands, two from Arizona and one each from Missouri, Michigan and Illinois. "Touring's Lookin' Up," says Thompson.

Two large orders have just been received by the Lichtenberger-Ferguson Company. One is for Norwalk tires for State-owned automobiles. This will require several thousand casings. The other order is from the government for leather goods for the army, and amounts to more than $100,000. It is believed a number of contracts of a similar nature will be awarded to the same company, and in order to make prompt delivery a full force will be necessary from now until the first of the year, at least.

H. R. Shillinglaw, Chalmers sales manager, has just returned from a peculiar vacation. During the two weeks at his disposal "Shilly" says the part he enjoyed most was the fact that he didn't have to drive his car. He claims to have solved the problem of enjoying a vacation without an automobile.

Things are humming, these days, around the plant of the H. A. Miller Manufacturing Company — there's something doing every minute. Orders for several thousand carburetors are now being filled. We are told that the demand for this carburetor is growing rapidly, which fact is caused to a great extent by the success of the Miller-equipped racing cars in the East.

Here's something of a record. Charles P. Holcket of Hill City, Kan., has just completed a trip across country, 2125 miles, with a fuel cost of $27.93. The "firewater" used consisted of ninety-eight gallons of kerosene and twenty-six gallons of gasoline. He brought his family along, the entire outfit weighing 2875 pounds. The cost was less than one-fourth of a cent per mile pound carried. The car, a Ford, was Master carburetor equipped.

W. H. Damon of the Damon Specialty Company, manufacturers of Nonolio polishes, decries the use, as a steady "diet," of soap and water in the cleaning of the auto. "No matter how sparingly these are used they are bound to deaden the enamel," says Mr. Damon. "If they are injurious to the polish of furniture how can they reasonably be used on the high polish of the modern automobile?"

The Adams Express Company now has a fleet of 500 Autocars. Twenty-nine machines have just been purchased for use in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

L. V. Starr believes no other car will appeal more to women than the Chevrolet "Four Ninety" 1918 model, because of its simplicity. High School girls are now given the privilege of elementary training in mechanics and machine-shop work, and in the years to come it will be nothing unusual to see girls, wearing overalls and fairly covered with grease, tinkering with auto parts and "yanking the gears around."

A. G. Faulkner believes that the ease with which cars like the Marmon can be controlled, together with the conveniences and easy riding qualities provided, are largely responsible for the increased number of women motorists. This has been kept in mind by the builders of the Marmon, he says, with the result that it only takes a "simple twist of the wrist" to change gears or apply the emergency brake.

One of the quickest ways of tearing a set of tires to pieces, says Roy R. Meads of the Pacific Rubber Company, is to make turns at twenty miles or more an hour. In his opinion, a few turns made at high speed is more destructive to tires than several hundred miles of careful road work.

Careful carburetor adjustment, economical speed, using the hand throttle instead of the foot throttle, stopping and starting slowly, never allowing the engine to run idle, having the brakes carefully adjusted, using the proper kind of oil, keeping the tires well inflated, and a number of other suggestions, are made by C. F. Johnson, careburetor engineer of the Cadillac company, for those who desire to increase their mileage on each gallon of gasoline.

In the last eighteen months George Moffett, well-known local automobile man, has traveled 22,812 miles, including a trip from this city through the Northwest and various parts of Canada. On a part of the trip Moffett went through timber land where, he believes, no other auto ever traveled. In speaking of one experience Mr. Moffett said: "In the heart of a thickly-wooded swamp we started to ford a stream, but due to a misjudgment of the depth of the stream, the machine dropped into three feet of water. The engine was killed, due to a flooding of the carburetor. After enlisting the aid of a pair of oxen the car was drawn from its watery park after having been in the water all night. Next day the magneto was baked, and, replacing same, the engine responded in every way as perfectly as before.' ' The trip was made in a Mitchell car purchased from the J. V. Baldwin Company.

E. G. Welch, principal of the Budlong-avenue school, accompanied by his wife, has just completed a tour through the northern States in a Saxon six. That Northern California, Oregon and Washington are leading in the establishment of public camping grounds for motorists, with Southern California a poor second, is one of the things noted by Mr. Welch. Starting at Stockton and continuing through Oregon and Washington, many cities have provided every camping convenience for the motorists who prefer to "live out or doors." In some places wood is furnished, fireplaces provided, running water piped to the grounds and other camping conveniences added. Repair shops, in some instances, have been put in, so motorists can have ordinary repair work done right in camp. Mr. and Mrs. Welch visited Crater Lake, Lake Tahoe and other interesting places.

"The traffic dispatcher in the Ford factory," says W. D. Dunham, Ford agent, "has considerable of a job. Among other things he has to keep sixty power trucks and many light express cars busy. Regular routes are laid out for the trucks and they must adhere to a schedule. While he is resting the dispatcher keeps his eye on 800 men, who are busy loading and unloading trains of cars and material. It's a regular job, and no mistake."

That it is possible to wear out a cent's worth of tire rubber every mile, or 10 cent's worth, according to how the driver watches the air in the tubes, and whether or not the wheels are alligned properly, is the opinion of C. Fred Thompson. Carelessness on the part of the driver is responsible for as much loss in tire wear as the actual loss from ordinary wear, Thompson says.

The owners who really get acquainted with their cars—the men who lift the hoods, inspect every part of the machinery, have a speaking acquaintance with every grease cup, keep track of the amount of water in the radiator and the amount of oil in the crank case—are the owners who generally have their machines in first-class condition, says A. J. Ruth, of the Empire Motor Sales Company. He advises every owner to study his machine and get thoroughly acquainted with it.

When a man drives up to the Wade Tire and Rubber Company, complains of unusual wear of his tires, and swears by all that is good and holy that he has not been running with too low an air pressure, Mr. Wade may not tell him just what he thinks, but he knows that he is "lying." There are telltale marks on a tire that has been run flat, or nearly so, that cannot be erased. The owners who get high mileage, without an exception, are the ones who give their tires careful and constant attention, Mr. Wade declares.

The Grant Motor Corporation has just taken over the Deneen Motor Company of Cleveland, O. The Grant company will enter the light truck field. The Deneen truck has both a lighting and starting system. This information has just been received by the Speers Motor Company, Grant distributors.

The Eddie Lingenfelder Company is exhibiting a Goodyear cord tire that has been run, it is claimed, 34,599 miles. Eddie has figured it out that the cost per mile on that tire was just fifteen one-hundredths of a cent.

A Real Test.

A.A.A. TO GIVE AUTO A TEST.

Car to be Driven for Ten Days and Nights.

Gasoline, Oil and Water to be Measured.

Results will be Announced Here Daily.

Ten years from now the dealers in auto row will still refer, occasionally, to the economy run to Yosemite in 1917. No other economy run perhaps, in the history of Southern California motordom, brought out so many claims and counterclaims, or resulted in so many accusations being made.

Everybody won. No one won.

That's the way one dealer put it, and he added that after reading the publicity stories in the various newspapers and carefuly looking over a dozen advertisements, he was still in doubt as to which car could make the most miles on a gallon of gasoline.

According to the observers, you may remember, the Dort won the contest in the class for cars costing less than $1000; the Monroe carried off first honors for cars costing more than $1000 and less than $2000, and the Franklin galloped home with the bacon in the class for cars costing more than $2000.

ALIBIS GALORE.

But there were alibis and challenges and claims put forth by dealers whose cars didn't have a look-in, until finally the public became confused and no one knew to whom to give the credit.

All of this, however, has been conducive of some good results. The dealers have made up their minds to have all contests of this kind under A.A.A. supervision hereafter, so the results will be authentic.

The first test is to start Wednesday morning, when a Dort car, with an A.A.A. representative aboard, will start for San Francisco. After the car has been gone eight hours another A.A.A. man and another driver will board the Dort and continue the trip. Arriving at San Francisco another A.A.A. man and another driver will board the car and start for Los Angeles. The Dort will be driven night and day for ten days, between the two cities, and each day the amount of gasoline consumed, the amount of oil used and the amount of water put in the radiator will be announced.

LONG GRIND.

"I don't know myself just what the Dort will do in a test like this," said E. A. Leach, "but I am going to find out, and after the ten-day test is finished whatever record we have established will be certified to by three A.A.A. representatives. Then we will know how many miles a Dort will go on a gallon of gasoline and also how much oil and water is required to run it a given distance. Also the 1100 persons who have bought Dorts in California since January 1, 1916, will have the satisfaction of knowing whether the car will stand up under a speed of from twenty to thirty miles an hour for 240 hours."

According to Mr. Leach, the car will not be run at a slow speed in order to cut down the consumption of gasoline, oil and water, but will be driven at the average speed the owner of a car would drive it in every-day use, so that the figure will be of real value to prospective buyers.

The Province of Quebec Automobile Bureau had issued up to June 1 1112 licenses. The number of licenses issued during the whole season of 1916 was only 1064, and, judging by the above report, the district of Quebec alone will have more than 2000 cars before the season is over. In 1915 the province had 10,112 cars; in 1916, 15,335, and it is expected it will have more than [illegible] by the end of 1917. The four-cylinder car was the most popular in 1916; there were 13,854 of them.

The laboratory at Cornell or Syracuse University is to be utilized for determining what headlights meet the terms of the anti-glare law which recently became operative in New York State. This plan is favored by the automobile associations of the State.

SHORT ROUTE FROM SALT LAKE WILL BRING THOUSANDS HERE.

Tourist throng coming.

Officials of the Lincoln Highway believe that instead of 2000 touring parties coming to Los Angeles by way of Salt Lake City, fully 25,000 will make the trip each year, now that the Lincoln Highway is to be placed in such excellent condition. In the picture above, S. L. Mitchell, secretary of the Autofobile Club of Southern California, is greeting H. C. Osterman (left,) field secretary of the Lincoln Highway; A. G. Bement, secretary, and G. S. Hoag, Nevada State counsel.

BRINGING plans for the improvement of the western section of the Lincoln highway, which will increase touring to Southern California more than 500 per cent., officials of the Lincoln Highway Association arrived at the headquarters of the Automobile Club of Southern California last Wednesday, after an official inspection of the route south from Ely, Nev., to Los Angeles.

In conference with automobile club officers it was pointed out that approximately 25,000 eastern touring parties come as far west annually as Wyoming, where they abandon the trip to California because of short stretches of impossible roadway in Utah and Wyoming. Actual figures are presented to establish this fact.

At the present time approximately 75 per cent. of the travel which persists over the highway to the Pacific Coast comes by way of Ely to Los Angeles rather than take the more arduous route to San Francisco, which is open only five months out of the year, while the Midland Trail (Los Angeles route) is open eleven months.

LARGE SUM SPENT.

It is estimated that 2000 motoring parties annually reach Southern California under the present condition of the roads, each party averaging four persons, and that these visitors spend more than $6,720,000 in this part of the State. With the improvement of the Utah and Wyoming road conditions, the number of visitors would be increased to 25,000 annually, bringing more than $84,000,000 to Southern California, say the Lincoln highway officials.

An official log has been made of the road to Los Angeles through the Owens River Valley, and for the first time this will be included in the data issued through publications by the association to the national touring public. According to the report of the association's field secretary and road expert, H. C. Osterman, this part of the route is 80 per cent. good, 10 per cent. fair and 10 per cent. poor—a very high average. The average condition of the entire Lincoln highway is 75 per cent. good, 15 per cent. fair and 10 per cent. bad, the latter being the sections in Wyoming and Utah.

MAY SIGNPOST IT.

According to Secretary S. L. Mitchell of the Automobile Club, that organization is seriously considering the signposting of the Lincoln Highway westward from Big Springs, Neb., to Salt Lake City, a distance of 700 miles, where it will connect with the club signs just erected between Salt Lake and Los Angeles, making a continuous system of official sign-posting leading for more than 1600 miles across the continent directly into Southern California. This move has been requested by the Lincoln Highway Association through its representatives, A. F. Bement, secretary; Mr. Osterman, field secretary, and G. S. Hoag, Nevada State counsel, who arrived here Wednesday.

As a result of yesterday's conference, the directors of the Automobile Club will bring the full power of that organization to bear upon the improvement of Lincoln Highway road conditions, so that transcontinental travel by that route may come without difficulty to this part of the State. Club officials recommend that the $50,000 now held in bank by the Lincoln Highway Association be applied to the roads of Wyoming, which, if improved, will provide a highway practically perfect to Southern California. The State of Wyoming and its counties will give $100,000 to the cause if the $50,000 fund is applied there.

AID APPRECIATED.

At the present time there is not contemplated any organized move to secure financial help from this section of the State, according to Secretary Bement, but assistance of any kind from public spirited individuals or commercial bodies will always be appreciated by the Lincoln Highway Association, he announced.

He pointed out that of the seventy-five to 100 letters received by the association every day from potential tourists who want to come to California, the terminal of the transcontinental journey is not asked—they merely want the "best" way, and if the Los Angeles (Midland Trail from Ely,) is the best way, they will make Southern California their first stopping place.

Funds are now on hand to the amount of $25,000 for the improvement of a section of the route through Johnson's Pass in Utah, and the highway party left yesterday for a conference with President Joy of the association and with F. A. Seiberling, a director, in Salt Lake City, in regard to this question.

HERE ARE SOME TIPS FOR SAFE MOUNTAIN DRIVING.

WHILE many motorists seem to be thoroughly familiar with the fine points of mountain climbing, there are a few pilots of "Old Maud" who do not know how to turn the trick, and do it safely and gracefully. In the interest of "safety first," as well as for the benefit of the car, the inexperienced driver might, when motoring in the hills, test out the following suggestions:

Don't go into the mountains "loaded"—this, of course, referring to the machine as well as its driver—travel as "light" as possible. Take along an extra casing, two or three extra tubes, a good repair outfit, which the motorist knows how to use: a jack, a pump and a couple of shoes or sleeves—for blow-outs. There is no need, on the average mountain trip, of carrying along more than one "spare" casing, so long as blowout shoes or sleeves are included in the kit.

Give the car a good "shot" of oil before entering the hills. If this is done it will pull better and there will be less chance of burnt-out bearings. It is a good plan to "keep 'er smokin'" while climbing.

See that the brakes are correctly adjusted and that the linings are in good condition. Fill the radiator before starting and keep it full.

Never enter the mountains with the top up. If there is one place that the driver should have an unobstructed view it is in the hills. Then, too, if a mishap should occur the top, if up, will keep the occupants penned within the car.

Don't be afraid to sound the horn. "Ring" it as each turn is being approached. If you are between two passing points and see a car leaving the next double-width stretch toward which you are going sound the horn vigorously so as to let the driver of the other machine know that you are coming, thereby giving him a chance to wait and let you pass. This refers alike to ascending and descending.

Before leaving a passing point glance along the roadway ahead to see that it is clear to the next double-road point. Don't try to "take in" the surrounding scenery and drive the car at the same time.

If, in making the descent, the motorist meets another machine going up, he should do everything in his power to "sidetrack" in time for the driver who is climbing to pass without stopping his car, as very often it is difficult to start a machine upon a steep grade. In other words, the machine that is climbing has the right of way.

Drive slowly. Forget the hurry and bustle of the city and remember there is always "plenty of time" in the hills. The old motor will appreciate any thoughtfulness along this line.

Lend a hand. If you see a motorist in trouble offer him assistance. Remember, your "Lizzie" may come to grief before the next turn in the road is left behind.

NEW RULES GOVERN AUTO SHIPMENTS.

The luxury board of Australia has announced its plans in regard to motor car importation. Under its decree the importation of complete motor vehicles is prohibited, although manufacturers may continue to ship chassis without bodies into Australia.

All complete motor vehicles in transit between the factories of this country before the date of the decree can enter Australia being excepted in the ruling.

New Models are Trim and Graceful.

Few mechanical changes made.

New Packard models are now on exhibition. Grace and simplicity are the marked characteristics of the new lines. Body contours are smooth, with free flowing lines, which give a decided Parisian style, quite in keeping with the many refinements. Few mechanical changes have been made. The control levers have been moved from the left side of the chassis to a central position that affords easier access to the driver's seat. Lighting and ignition controls, as well as carburetor control, have been placed on the dash instead of in their former position on the steering column. Semi-elliptical rear springs have taken the place of the three-quarter platform type previously used. While the radiator is higher and narrower than before and the long low lines give the car a decidedly different appearance than has heretofore been found in a Packard, there are the unmistakable hall marks, such as hub caps, radiator and headlights, that mark it distinctively Packard.

ECONOMY CAN BE CARRIED TOO FAR.

Let us hope that those persons who confuse parsimony with patriotism will not get it into their heads that the emergencies of war demand that the extension of good roads and the upkeep of those already built should be abandoned, says the American Motorist. Among the many other fallacies of these saving times none could be less true than the preachment that the cause of good roads can be temporarily abandoned or even stinted. Now, if ever, the country needs every mile of good roads it has in addition to as many more miles as can possibly be constructed. Even reformers are at last awake to the fact that good roads are not the luxuries they were formerly proclaimed to be. Since the war and the welfare of the world seem to revolve around the farm and the products thereof, then it is self-evident that the more and the better the miles of roadway the more opportunity there is for getting the food from the producer to the consumer via the greatest of all transportation combinations, the automobile and the good road. Each day it will be shown that in the present crisis greater dependence must be placed on the highways for motor transportation, which alone can make up in part for the inadequacy of railroad facilities to meet the present enormous demands.

The Tacoma Speedway Association will hold a Labor Day race meet Monday. It has been decided to hold three short races instead of the long grind as at previous meets. One race will be for a distance of 100 miles, another for fifty, and the third will be a stunt race.

Artist Turns Auto into a Fig Tree.

Camouflage to save American lives.

When the American boys get on the firing line in France they will be able, with the assistance of artists, to show the French and British soldiers that they have been studying the war game from many angles. For instance, they have lately taken up the subject of camouflage, and artists employed by the Edwin H. Flagg Scenic Company have bocome so expert at disguising various kinds of equipment, including automobiles, that at a hundred yards or so it is impossible to distinguish a machine from a fig tree. The Velie, shown in the picture above, was finally "transformed into a fig tree," and the work was done so well that at a short distance, if placed in a fig orchard, it could not be told from the trees. "Camouflage is the simplest sort of work, and stories of its use on the battle fronts show that it has already been the means of saving thousands of human lives," said Arthur Hurtt, a local artist, yesterday. "The experiments conducted in Los Angeles have proved beyond a doubt that almost any object may be so completely hidden behind a coat of paint that it cannot be discerned from a distance of 100 or 200 yards, and an enemy might pass much closer than that without noticing it. It was shown in a most graphic way how an officers' touring car, for instance, could be 'erased' by this process when the Velie was driven to a point on Long Beach boulevard and in less than one hour so completely 'camouflaged' that it could not easily be discerned at a short distance, and was completely invisible at a distance equalling the width of 'no man's land.'"

ARTISTS DECORATE GASOLINE "SHOPS."

STATIONS HAVE LAWNS, TREES AND SHRUBBERY.

Attendants Dressed in White, Tip Their Caps, Fill Radiators, Look After Tires and Give Real Service. Nothing but Competition Could Have Brought this About.

If you owned a machine five or ten years ago you probably recall the experiences you had in finding a gasoline station at times. In those days gasoline was sold at garages, and practically nowhere else. It was a case of find a garage, hunt around for some fellow who had time to wait on you, and after paying for your gas if you wanted a little water in the radiator, or some air in the tires, you had your choice of doing it yourself or hiring someone else to do it.

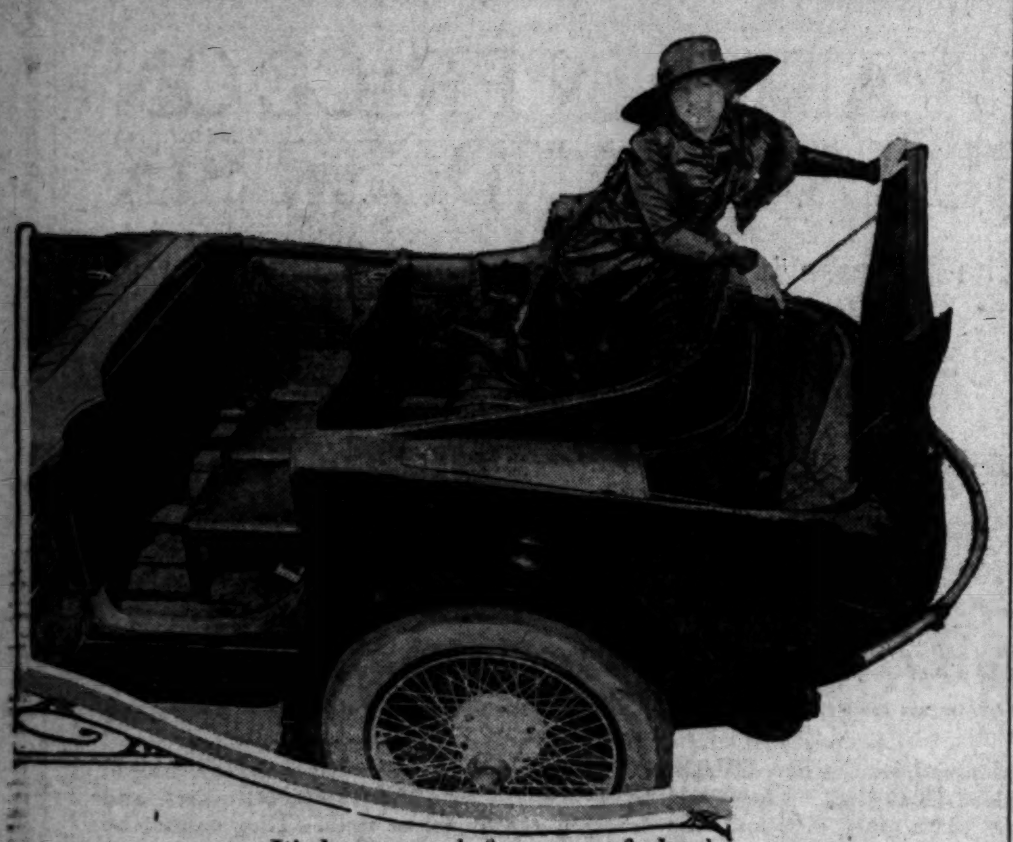
But what a difference today. Pretty little stations, neatly painted, surrounded by a nice lawn, shrubbery and flowers, and an attendant dressed in white who tips his cap, waits on you, sees that the radiator is full and the tires correctly inflated. This is service. It's catering to the public because of increased competition.

Records at hand do not disclose the name of the man who first built an oil station in Los Angeles, but here's hoping he's enjoying the best of health and has a large bank roll. He's deserving of both.

Two hundred gasoline stations dot the corners in the residence district. They line the boulevards in the country. Every beach town has half a dozen or more, and unless you get out on the desert you do not have to travel far without finding one.

Even up in the mountains the stations are doing a good business, and one can generally find his favorite brand of gasoline and cylinder oil.

Ah! Just See that Space. I Have a Hunch.



It's large enough for a case of—lunch.

The new Pathfinder has many new features. In the space that holds the top, entirely concealing it, there's room enough for a lot of things, several cold bottles, a lunch, and blankets, and a tent, too, if the owner cares to take one along. And just look at the roomy seats. Nine persons can ride without being crowded. And, although you can't see it in this picture, the Pathfinder has two windshields, the extra one being arranged something like a roll-topped desk, so that those in the two rear seats can have as much protection from the wind as those in front. When not in use it slips back into a receptacle and is entirely concealed. It's a classy outfit, from radiator to tail light, and no mistake.

AUTOMOBICALLY SPEAKING.

THE big car is all right in its place, but there's a growing demand for a machine that can be turned around in an ordinary street without backing and twisting and can be parked in a space much too small for an auto with a 140-inch wheelbase.

Bumpers pay for themselves several times a year—sometimes several times a week. Protected by a good pair of bumpers, damages resulting from a collision at the curb, which otherwise would cost a hundred dollars or more, frequently amount to only a dollar, or less.

Some men cover their autos with flags, but fail to show their patriotism in any other way unless compelled to.

The next great invention, many argue, will be a combination auto and flying machine. It will be possible to roll along over the smooth boulevards and take to the air when the bumpy stretches are reached. A machine of this kind would be useful on Figueroa street, between First and Washington.

If you strike a car that has no lights you can collect damages from the other fellow, but, regardless of the amount of damage done to his machine, he can't collect a cent.

Every man who goes courting should teach his best girl to drive at the earliest possible moment. This releases two strong arms for other purposes, and puts two to work that otherwise would go to waste. Drive slowly, Maggie, and don't be afraid.

AUTO ROW HAS A NEW NAME.

Now Proper to Speak of it as "Automobiletown."

Two Hundred Dealers South of Seventh Street.

Over Four Thousand Men and Women Employed.

That section of Los Angeles known as "automobile row," in reality has not been a "row" for several years, and if one were to see from an airplane how many blocks are taken up with buildings devoted exclusively to the marketing of motor cars, it would be apparent that "automobiletown" would be a far more appropriate name.

The original "row" has grown to such proportions and has taken on so much activity that it comes close to being a little business city in itself. There are about 200 automobile and accessory salesrooms located in the area bounded by Los Angeles street on the east, Figueroa street on the west, Seventh street on th north, and Sixteenth street on the south. This does not include innumerable independent repair shops and auto wrecking places.

THOUSANDS EMPLOYED.

Nearly 4000 men and women gain their livelihood in the automobile establishments, and thousands upon thousands of dollars change hands daily in this district.

A striking fact in connection with Los Angeles's automobile market is that dealers never "fail." Indeed it is difficult to remember a single instance where a well-established automobile sales agency went to the wall.

At the present time business in "automobiletown" is in a most excellent and prosperous condition. Automobile sales are daily mounting to heights which a few years ago would have been thought impossible, and expansion has become imperative with many of the dealers.

It is known that at least four firms are looking for suitable sites for new buildings. A few of the firms are already planning new buildings, several new structures are nearing completion, and other firms are expanding from time to time in order to take care of their increasing business.

An instance of the demand for salesrooms and the brisk way in which every empty salesroom is snapped up almost before it is vacated, was shown when George R. Bental moved to a handsome new building on Grand avenue. The Lord Motor Car Company leased the old Bentel salesroom at Eleventh and Olive and in less than twenty-four hours after the Mercer and Jordan agency had been moved to its new home, started a corps of sign painters and decorators to work converting the old place into a used car salesroom and free service station.

USED CARS.

The floor where Mercers and Jordans were once displayed is now taken with a collection of used car bargains which were crowded out of the Lord Motor Car Company's main salesroom at Eleventh and Hope.

There are dozens of other instances of growth and expansion in Los Angeles's motor world, all of which have made real estate owners in that section happy, and predictions are heard that the next few years will see a very great advance in prices on properties located in "automobiletown."

TRUCK HAULS BIG LOADS OF MOLASSES.

In Boston there is a motor truck which is kept busy twenty-four hours a day hauling molasses from a South Boston pier to a big distillery in Everett, says the Power Wagon. Four round trips of eleven miles each are made in the regular day's work, and recently this has been increased to eight trips, or a twenty-four-hour service.

The machine, a five-tonner, was placed in service in November, 1915, and has duplicate batteries. The tank has a capacity of 1000 gallons and except in very cold weather, when lost time is a factor, it is filled to capacity.

As the route of the machine takes it through congested districts, forty-four miles per day is regarded as an unusual mileage. When this mileage is doubled it practically establishes a record for a machine of this class.

OVERCONFIDENCE GETS DRIVERS INTO TROUBLE.

Real Danger Point is Reached when New Pilots Believe They Have Mastered Their Cars—You Never Can Tell What the "Other Fool" is Going to do—A Few Timely Suggestions.

USUALLY, after a person performs a task that is new to him for a sufficient length of time it becomes a simple task indeed, even though, at first, it seemed exceedingly difficult. This rule holds good in mastering the steering wheel, the gears, the brake and the various parts of a car which a motorist has to become accustomed to before he becomes a good driver.

The best teacher, therefore, is experience, after receiving a few instructions, and a demonstration or two, at the hands of one who has mastered the game.

It always is best to start the lessons on a wide, smooth boulevard, on a street where there is little traffic. Learning to drive, so far as the first lessons are concerned, really resolves itself into starting the car, steering it straight ahead, stopping, backing up, turning around, learning to run the machine up to the curb and "wedging it" in between two autos, twenty or thirty feet apart. Do this over and over again, until you feel that you have mastered it, and then do it again and again. You can't get too much practice of this kind before starting on "trips."

SOME POINTERS.

Learn from your tire man all you can about the care of tires. Learn how to inflate them, how to use a tire gauge, how to make changes if punctures or blowouts occur.

Study the electrical connections. Go over them with some one who knows the uses of each, and who will show you at least the simple things to do and not to do.

See the battery man, and study well the instructions he gives you. A battery, of all things, must not be neglected.

If possible, have your dealer select one of his experts, who will start in at the radiator and work clear to the tail lights, explaining the various parts of your car. Ask questions, keep your eyes open, read the printed instructions, learn to oil and grease your own car, find every grease cup, see that the radiator is full of water and there is plenty of oil in the crank case, before starting on a long trip—or any other kind.

WATCH YOUR BRAKES.

Be particularly careful to keep your brakes in good working order. In case of emergency, your brakes at times are all that stand between you and death, and you should know they are in tiptop condition.

Every new driver should confine his trips to the open country, for at least a few weeks, leaving the hill-climbing trips and attempts to go through traffic until a later date. Of course you can only learn how to handle your car in heavy traffic, or on steep grades full of sharp curves, by actual experience, but first of all you want to feel certain you "know your car"—that you have mastered it.

And just a word about the overconfident driver. Just a word about the most dangerous period of a driver's existence. This is the time when he thinks he has finally become a good driver. It may be a week, or a month, or several months after he starts to drive, that the attack of "overconfidence" comes along. But mark you well, this attack is dangerous, for about the time the driver believes he has learned all there is to learn he runs up against a situation that puzzles him, and an accident may result.

ONE EXAMPLE.

For instance, if he has never skidded, if he doesn't know what it feels like to hit a wet spot in a street, and have his car start to turn around and go in the opposite direction from the one he wanted to go, he will be in trouble in about a second. If he applies the brakes he is making matters worse, unless he knows how to apply them. If he throws out the clutch and doesn't apply the brakes he will also be in trouble, if the skiddy place is a bad one.

Again, if he hasn't learned that there are thousands of fiends who come around corners, at excessive speed, at the most unexpected times, and that each thoroughfare is lined with new drivers, many of whom may be out for their first lesson, his overconfidence may get him into serious trouble. If the other fellow is driving too fast, and runs into you, or crosses the street in front of you before you can stop your car, there is likely to be a call for the ambulance. Probably it may be his fault, not yours, but you have got to learn to watch out for these things, and become a good dodger, a "quick stopper," a rapid get-away driver, or anything else that is required of you in an emergency.

Therefore, a driver suffering from an attack of overconfidence is always in danger. It's the most dangerous period of his experience as a motorist. In this connection, here's a good rule to follow: "Always try to drive in such a manner that no matter what some other fellow does you can keep out of harm's way."

You may be able to handle your own car, but you never can tell what the "fool" ahead, or behind, or to one side of you is going to do. Keep your eye on him, or sooner or later he'll send your car to the repair shop, and possibly send you to the hospital or the undertaker's.

And even if you really master your car, and learn most of the tricks of the road, you'll never learn them all, for a new boner is being pulled by some driver every day. In short, if you drive a car all your life you'll never be too old to learn, and woe to the driver who forgets this, for he surely will come to grief, some day, somehow, somewhere.

So says Dorothy Dalton, in speaking of the new Peerless Green Dragon speedster. You'll notice the car is shapely (and so is Dorothy for ter) and that it (the car) has a racy look, trim body lines (still speaking of the car,) and taken altogether is a pretty classy outfit. A new proof blanket has just been invented for this style of car, which buttons across the front and up the back, only the heads of the passengers exposed. The insert shows Dorothy in the car all alone, but she doesn't have to be alone unless she wants to. For instance, I would— by the censor.)

COASTING "BUG" IS A REGULAR PEST.

HE ALWAYS HAS A NEW STORY TO SPRING.

One Motorist Says He Coasted Thirty-two Miles on the Ridge Route Grade—Another Tells of Coasting Nine Miles Betwen Los Angeles and Lancaster.

Among other automobile bugs one comes across is the well-known coasting bug. He's a pest, at times, but you can't get away from his arguments.

"Going from here to Santa Monica by one route I can coast two miles," said one of these bugs. "Another route offers a mile of coasting, and still another offers half a mile. I always go over the route that affords the greatest amount of coasting, for I enjoy riding in a car when there is no vibration. Then, too, it saves gasoline, and it's more enjoyable in every way."

Some of the drivers who talk and brag about the long they have made tell stories. One of them says coast for nine miles between Angeles and Lancaster, in the lope Valley. Another says coast from the top of the La grade into Glendale. Still tells of coasting thirty-two from the end of the Ridge road into Bakersfield.

The Cajon Pass offers a mile coast. The Mill Creek good for still more than this it isn't safe to coast for more seven or eight miles at more ten miles an hour. Right Los Angeles, if one knows the ous streets leading from Hill, it is possible to coast most a mile, but traffic unsafe to do so.

The average motorist, it stay, prefers a rolling country level one, other things being for he enjoys both the coasting down hill and the to turn on the juice and give gine something to do while ing the next one.

WORN-OUT CARS FINALLY GO TO AUTO "GRAVEYARD."

Twin sixes and Tin Lizzies find a common grave.

There are dozens of wrecking stations and junk yards in Los Angeles, where a specialty is made of worn-out cars. The pictures shown above were obtained at No. 1131 South Main street, just as a colored gentleman, with a big hammer and a chisel, and the manager of the place, were in the act of tearing down several specimens of automobiles that had outlived their usefulness. Who can write the history of that old boat shown at the top, which at one time was the pride of its owner? It's doomed for the scrap heap, from tires to tail lights, and you may get a piece of the body in a sack of kindling wood this winter.

THE automobile graveyard, like the human graveyard, is filled with silent forms. In life these were in the shape of wheels, gears, pistons, crank shafts, and what not, and were part of the automobile world. They moved, they made a racket, they went through wrecks and hard times, they groaned and complained, but still they kept going, until at last they gave up the ghost.

The automobile graveyard—the automobile junk pile! What a story that junk pile could tell, if the history of each car, and each part of each car, could talk. There lies an old, [illegible], of the vintage of 1903. Beside it a Ford, of the 1902 variety. In that pile are a couple of [illegible], a Winton, a Buick and a [illegible]. Each has a story, until each has traveled, at the least, tens of thousands of miles. They were "good old cars," but finally iron, and steel, and copper, and brass, and leather and wood went to pieces, and then the junk man got them.

FIVE PERIODS.

The life of a car is divided into five periods, as a general thing. First, it's a new car, spic and span, right out of the shop, and happy is the owner who grasps the wheel and goes down the boulevard with it. He drives it thousands of miles, possibly 50,000 or even 100,000 miles. Then, no doubt, if he can afford a new one, he trades in the four or five-year-old car and gets it. That's the close of period No. 1.

The car is then overhauled, given a fresh coat of paint, and sold. The new owner may keep it until it will run no more, or trade it in himself, at a later date, for another car. But in any event he will have tried it out, run it a few thousand miles, and sent it farther on the road towards the graveyard.

Owner No. 3 follows about the same programme. He gets what he can out of the old boat, tries it out under all kinds of conditions, and does not spare it, because, you see, it's a second-hand car at the best.

Finally a trader gets it, and he may swap it for another car before night, especially if it doesn't run to suit him.

The car may still change hands several times, but eventually it goes the way of all old cars—dies a natural death and ends up in the automobile graveyard.

ONE WHEEL SAVED.

Then the junk man gets busy and takes it apart. One wheel is still good, and he puts that aside. The headlights are battered up, but can be repaired, and he saves them, also. Perhaps one fender is still worth something, and that, too, is saved from the junk pile proper. If there is any brass, or copper, you may be sure this will be sorted out from the rest of the metal, for these bring high prices—especially in war times.

Finally, when he has saved everything that is worth saving, he scraps the rest of the car. Even the body—the body which once was shiny and new—is broken up, and it may even find its way into the kindling pile.

That's the end of the story, the last sad words over the grave of the auto, but after the old rubber is melted up and the metal has been recast, the old form is resurrected, so to speak, and again becomes a part of a new car.

Therefore, we know old cars have a resurrection—that they are actually "raised from the dead."

SPECIAL AUTO FEATURES FOR THE PINK SECTION.

READERS of the pink section of The Times are invited to send in short stories, giving descriptions of interesting trips they have made. If you own a garage that has exceptional features, whether it is a small building costing less than a hundred dollars, or one costing a thousand—a building that protects a little flivver or a limousine costing many times that—the automobile editor of The Times would like to have a picture of it.

Perhaps you have invented something of interest to motorists, whether it be a part of your garage equipment, or of your camping outfit. If so a picture and description that would be of interest, too.

Send in any automobile item, in fact, that you think would be acceptable. It will be examined, and, if available, will be published in the pink section of The Times.

Many special features have been arranged for, including answers to questions asked by readers of The Times concerning automobiles and their care; the latest factory news by wire, direct from the large manufacturing points; pictures of Southland scenes never before caught by a camera; stories on the part autos and trucks are playing in the European war; pictures and descriptions of the latest inventions in the automobile world; gossip of auto row, with pictures of the latest models, taken as soon as they reach Los Angeles. These, and many other features, including a description of the latest things in motor togs, will appear from time to time, and taken as a whole will make the pink section the snappiest in the United States.

Wisconsin has authorized, through its Legislature, the use of prison labor in the construction of permanent highways. Such labor has been used before under the State-aid plan.

SALES DURING AUGUST SHOW A BIG INCREASE.

AUTOMOBILE ROW is becoming a busier place every day. In July the sales of new and used autos in Los Angeles county, according to the State Vehicle Department, amounted to about 4500, and in August this was increased to more than 5000. That means an increase in one month of 10 per cent., and, as September generally shows still larger gains, there should be nothing but smiles and optimism among the dealers.

The percentage of sales of used cars has been increasing rapidly, almost three-fourths of the sales recorded in August being used machines—in fact, the used-car market is almost cleaned up. Formerly it was no uncommon sight to see thousands of used cars in tents, garages and vacant lots, each with a price tag attached. Now, however, the demand is almost equal to the supply, and in the case of some cars the demand exceeds the supply.

Industrial.

TRACTOR TO BE MADE AT BURBANK.

WORK ALREADY STARTED ON NEW FACTORY BUILDING.

Two Types to be Manufactured for Farm Work—Small Machine Suitable for Orchards—Local Truck Company Announces Plans for New Department.

Right at this time, when the world is crying for the products of the farm and when the tractor is proving valuable in the production of these necessities, the Moreland Truck Company is announcing the initial experimental work on its new tractor. For the past five years the managers of this concern have been laying the foundation for this new piece of farm machinery, during which time probably twenty-five different types of tractors have been designed. This new tractor will be of thirty horse power at the belt and will have a draw bar pull of fifteen horse power. Its weight will be about 3000 pounds and it will burn distillate.

The intention at the present time is to make two types of tractors, one of the caterpillar design and one of the high-wheel sort.

These, it is believed, will extend their field of usefulness to the farmer. This new tractor will be built primarily for use on the farm of limited size, being sufficiently low for use in the orchard and grove. Its short turning ability, being able to turn in practically its own length, will also prove a valuable feature for the farmer. With this machine the farmer will be able, claim the designers, to work close up to the base of a tree, making it possible to either plow or cultivate every foot of ground around it.

Of course, this tractor will also be adapted to any use to which miscellaneous farm machinery is now being put, such as hauling crops from the field to the packing-houses, cutting ensilage, running hay bailing presses, pumping water, etc. The flexibility and economy of this device will doubtless make it useful in connection with much work now done with horses.

It is the intention of the Moreland company to begin experimental work on this new tractor as soon as the first unit of the company's new million-dollar factory in Burbank is completed.

The production of this small tractor will be but the beginning of this company's operations along the tractor line, the intention being to bring out a seventy-five-horse-power machine, suitable for the heaviest kind of work, just as soon as conditions permit. Work on the first unit of the new factory was started this week.

WOMEN DRIVE BIG TRUCKS IN FRANCE.

The feminine section of the British field army grows larger all the time. Khaki-clad women, at first with the Red Cross only, are entering other departments of the field army, to displace men for work nearer the front line trenches.

They are employed by hundreds as chauffeurs, not only for ambulances and light supply wagons, but also for heavy trucks. They are very successful in the work. Each wears a uniform of regulation khaki short skirt and knickers. A badge on the sleeve further identifies her as one of the British in the field army. Young women lieutenants command, and each unit has its own supervisory, officers and chaperons.

Every boat going to France from England takes new companies of woman workers. At first their work was mostly at the remote bases, but now they may be found within hearing distance of the guns.

WHAT STYLES WILL THE SPECIAL BODY BUILDERS SPRING NEXT?

WHAT will be the shape of the modern car five or ten years from now? Will it be a short, lowdown, heavily built car, or a long, slim, lightly constructed affair? What will the upholstering be like, and what conveniences, not now enjoyed, will the car of 1926 have?

As one inspects, and rides in the beautiful, convenient automobiles of today—the last word in construction, the dealers call it—it seems difficult to imagine anything better, or more comfortable. But as history has a way of repeating itself, and it is a fact that no invention, of any period, has ever reached a stage where advancement stopped, it seems safe to predict many changes will be made in the cars of the future.

Body construction, which now is attracting almost as much attention as the motor itself, will probably go forward rapidly. As a matter of fact it is going forward rapidly now, and today one may order a special body for the chassis of his car, just as he would order a suit of clothes made to his measure.

NO LIMIT.

It's a case of consult the body-building expert, tell him what you want, have him explain how certain things can be accomplished, and what they will cost, and within a week or two you may have the satisfaction of riding in a car designed by yourself.

You can have any color, or shade, you desire. If you want to match the color of your wife's eyes, or her hair, or her stockings, the body builder will oblige—at so much per oblige.

If you are fat, you can have a wide, deep seat built. If you are tall and skinny, you can have your car arranged so your knees won't rub against the "sidsboards or end-gate." If you want a dog house on the running board, fancy curtains, pneumatic cushions, an ice box or a concealed pocket for a case of beer, the body builder will stand at attention and take your order.

If you have a scheme for converting your machine into a camping outfit, you can have a variety of jobs done. The body builder will attach anything you want attached, yank out any part of the body you desire removed, divide and subdivide the space that is left, and fill it with the paraphernalia you desire. You may add a cupboard, a stove, a baby jumper, a hammock or a small drug store, and the body builder will see that it is done, and done right.

NO MONOPOLY.

Special body construction is becoming a business, and a big business at that. The manufacturer of automobiles cannot compete with the special body builder, because you can personally see the latter, and have him build according to your specifications, but the former is in a distant State and he has enough to do to turn out thousands of cars a month, of two or three styles, without catering to your individual taste.

This is where the body builder comes in. His work is like that of the dressmaker or the tailor. He carries out your ideas of construction, and makes suggestions if you want something new and do not know just what you want.

If you want a light blue body, his painter will see to it. If you want gold trimmings, or silver, or purple plush upholstering, or cushions lined, or trimmed, with mink skins, all you have to do is to say the word. The special body builder is on the job, and he's going to stay there, and there's going to be "more of him."

LICENSE MONEY FAIRLY ROLLS IN.

During the first six months of this year licenses were taken out in the State of Michigan for 160,258 passenger cars, and 18,179 commercial cars, licenses being issued to 832 dealers, 14,250 chauffeurs and 7495 owners of motorcycles. The amount of fees collected from these licenses follow:

Passenger cars, $1,968,130.14; trucks, $145,962.92; motorcycles, $16,881.60; dealers, $41,369.10; chauffeurs, $28,499; transfers, $4983; duplicates, $19,575, making a total of $2,225,401.02.

The State highway received $1,140,201.34 of this amount, while the remainder was distributed among the various counties, according to their number of cars.

Reports from Wisconsin are to the effect that the returns from the motor licenses of all classes in that State for the fiscal year ending August 1, amounted to $834,142, compared with a gross return of $575,798 for the previous fiscal year. After the cost of administration, amounting to $39,069 is deducted, 25 per cent. of the remainder is placed in the State highway fund and 75 per cent. is distributed pro rata among the seventy-two counties of the State.

The Yellow Motor Car Company has been incorporated at St. Louis to enter the taxicab field. A garage, 130x150, with capacity for eighty cars, has been opened. The company is a subsidiary to the Yellow Taxicab Company of Chicago, and will be operated on the same plan. The rates are 30 cents for the first one-third mile, 10 cents for each additional third, and time rate of $2.50 an hour, about one-third less than local rates.

Charles J. Wreger of Cleveland, O., a well-known motor car engineer, has invented a new aviation engine and is forming a company for its production.

Carrying whisky in a tire is one way of getting booze into dry territory, but in case of a blowout the expense would be enormous.

THESE FIGURES ARE DAZZLING

Shortly after Joe Dawson smashed the twenty-four-hour record in a Chalmers at Sheepshead Bay, some fellow got busy with a pencil and ream of paper and figured out the following:

Each of the six pistons traveled up and down 509 miles, a total of 3054 miles for all of them.

Each of the six exhaust and inlet valves lifted 1,793,599 times, or a total of 21,523,188 times.

Each of the spark plugs fired 1,793,599 times, or a total of 10,761,594 times.

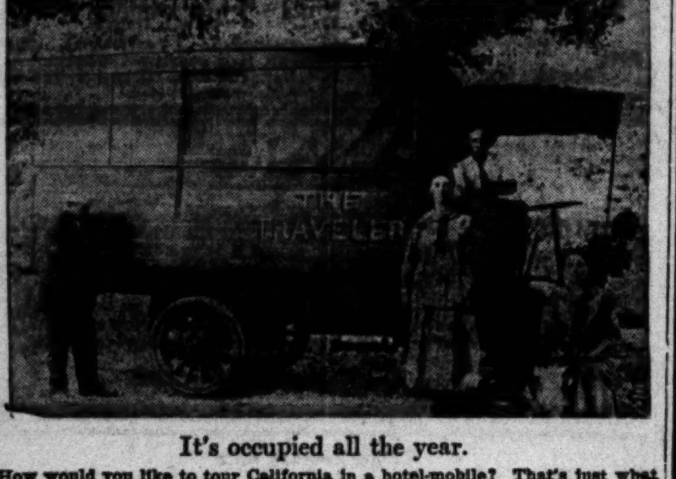
Granting that the piston, rings and pins in each cylinder weight 20 ounces, the energy required to lift them was equal to lifting 13,452 tons.

With an average speed of 79.08 miles an hour for twenty-four hours, the crankshaft turned over 2491 times per minute, a total of 3,587,198 times.

Each of the four wheels, with a three to one gear ratio, made 1,195,732 revolutions, or a grand total of 4,782,930.

After taking a look at these figures the Chalmers people seem justified in saying that it takes "some car" to turn the trick.

Behold the Hotel-mobile!



It's occupied all the year.

How would you like to tour California in a hotel-mobile? That's just what the quartette shown in the accompanying illustration are doing. They say they are having the time of their lives and where is the motorist who knows anything of the joys of camping who could doubt their words? This party has been traveling ever since November 10, 1915, during which time they have covered about 80,000 miles of road, mostly in Southern California. Having seen this section they are now starting northward—their aim being to tour the remainder of the Golden State. The outfit in which they are traveling is a veritable hotel on wheels, being equipped with everything necessary for the comfort of the tourists. As they passed through Los Angeles these tourists called at the Goodrich branch and secured a number of that company's reliable road maps.

TWO STATES BUILD MILITARY HIGHWAYS.

Washington and Pennsylvania have decided to do their "bit" in the way of building military roads, the idea being to have them in readiness for the earliest movement of government troops and equipment. The old military road over the Cascade Mountains in Washington by way of the middle fork of the Williamette River will be improved by the United States Forest Service, work to start immediately. About twenty-six miles will be placed in first-class condition.

The work of the construction of a military road at Mt. Gretna for the Adjutant-General has been undertaken by the Pennsylvania State highway department. Work began about July 1 and advanced at a rate of about two miles of water-bound macadam, sixteen feet wide, each week. There are being used in this work twelve traction engines, ten road rollers, thirteen scrapers, thirty-one dump wagons, twenty-two motor trucks and nine sprinkling carts.

About twenty carloads of materials are being used daily in this work. Upon completion of this road it will be used by heavy supply trains, artillery and cavalry.

A comprehensive motor car census, covering the entire State of Arizona, has been completed for the Arizona Council of Defense. The census gives the make, capacity and name of owner of every motor truck and touring car in Arizona, all cars of five-passenger capacity and up being listed.

Three races, twenty, fifty and 100 miles respectively, will make up the programme at the Chicago Speedway September 22, according to plans now being made.

A Classy Garage in Hollywood.

The architecture is of the Japanese type.

Possibly you've noticed that beautiful home at the top of a hill, in Hollywood, with a road that winds 'round and 'round, until it reaches the top. The hill and home are the property of A. L. Bernheimer, and although you cannot see it until you are only a few yards away, there's a nifty little garage in the rear that is as nicely finished as a bungalow. The architure of both the home and the garage are of the Japanese type, and both are modern throughout.

Save Money Now On Hudson Super-Six

Many former $1200 to $1400 cars now cost about as much as a Hudson Super-Six.

Price has always been a fairly accurate index of quality. But just now, because of the headlong rising of material costs, price is not a true indication of value. Fifty-one cars have been forced to advance prices 20% to 25%.

The present supply of Hudson Super-Sixes is built from materials contracted last year. Since then material costs have almost doubled. When that supply of materials is exhausted, then, Hudsons, too, must cost more. By prompt buying you can save the difference between what a Hudson Super-Six now costs and what it must certainly have to cost when its price is influenced by the present material market.

When former cheaper cars could be bought at $200 to $300 less than the Super-Six, no two of them had sales equal to those of the Hudson. That shows how popular the Super-Six has always been as compared to other cars. It is easy to imagine how much more popular it will be now that there is no such price advantage. The Hudson Super-Six has made itself the wanted car as compared with others.

It is the largest selling fine car. Almost 40,000 are in daily use. It has established itself as the life-time car.

Red Sox Pick up on Chicago by Trimming Athletics While Leaders Lose to the Brow PATRIOTIC ATHLETIC PROGRAMME MAGNET FOR THOUSANDS OF SPORT ENTHUSIASTS.

VARIETY was the spice of life at Exposition Park yesterday, when sport lovers numbering well up into the thousands crowded around the various attractions offered by the committee in charge of athletic arrangements for Los Angeles' patriotic festival.

Shortly after 3 o'clock the vanguard of the parade spectators filed across the clearing, and a half-hour later the big grounds were thronged. Baseball, boxing, wrestling and the city tennis tournament now in progress then acted as magnets for those with a hankering for things athletic.

EASY VICTORY.

Ball fans saw the Los Angeles Athletic Club baseball team completely outclass the Los Angeles Elks' aggregation, the winners blanking the opposition, 9 runs to 1. Ford Tally permitted but a solitary hit, and retired fourteen via the strikeout method. Sensational fielding by Art Shafer, the former Giant, and a home run by the same gentleman, featured. Lorenson also made the grand circuit. Lewis, pitching for the Elks, lasted two innings, when Smith relieved. But he was not feared. Both B.P.O.E. heavers struck out four.

GOOD BOXING.

Leach Cross of New York, but now a native son, as Charlie Murray put it, acknowledged the applause of the crowd at the open-air arena by playing three rounds of hopscotch with Phil Salvator of Sacramento. Cross was feeling good, and was exceedingly successful in imitating a defeated fighter, allowing Salvator to "drive" him around the ring. This was amusing to the fans, but caused a howl from the youngest Cross, whose occasional "papa!" from beyond the ropes made the exhibition more or less a family affair.

Jack Geyer and Charles Barker were less playful, and gave each other several hot ones during their capers on the mat imported from Vernon by Wallace Robb, manager of yesterday's Olympic games.

Salaisan pinned Duguid's shoulders after five and one-half minutes of wrestling. Higami and Higashi, Japanese, as the names imply, politely jiu-jitsued to a draw. Higgins and Higami illustrated judo methods of throwing off opponents and weight, after which Prof. Ito twisted one Nitta, and also Mr. Higgins, in exhibitions. Sate won a snappy jiu bout with Nagano.

ON THE COURTS.

Conservative tennis marked the second day's play in the city tournament on the Exposition Park courts. The defeat of Ken Hawks by Ed Simmons, the Los Angeles High School player, was the surprise of the day.

AILEEN ALLEN WINS.

Aileen Allen of Los Angeles was the best diver at the national championship meet held yesterday at Rye, N. Y., according to a bulletin received at press time last night.

Manitoba has now a total of 15,975 cars, against 11,352 in 1916 and 9250 in 1915. Of these 15,201 are private, the rest dealers', traders', etc. There are now 1323 chauffeurs' licenses in the province. The increase over last year in licenses in Manitoba is almost 50 per cent. The total number of motor car licenses in Saskatchewan for 1917 is 27,352, an increase of 13,503 over last year's list of 13,849, while in 1915 the number totaled 9197. In the province of Alberta the totals are as follows: 1915, 5835; 1916, 9211; 1917, 16,458.

The second annual open week is under consideration of the show committee of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association. "Open week" last year was the occasion of special displays and decorations by all St. Louis dealers. It was organized to take the place of what previously had been a fall show during carnival week. The prominent feature was a "give the other fellow a chance" by having cars waiting at the door to take any inquirer to a rival's showroom.

An organization has been formed to promote the construction of an improved highway from Evansville to New Albany, Ind., a distance of 150 miles.

Receipts of the Pennsylvania State highway department for 1917 motor car licenses have gone over the $3,300,000 mark, breaking all records.

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—Boston made a clean sweep of the final series of the season with Philadelphia by winning 6 to 1. Except for an error by Gardner, Shore would have scored a shutout. Boston has won ten of the eleven games played with Philadelphia in this city. The score:

	R.	H.	E.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 1.—Cleveland defeated Detroit, 3 to 2, and won an even break in the series. Only three of the visitors reached second base in the last eight innings. Tris Speaker, in attempting to steal home in the first inning, was hit in the face by a ball batted by Evans. Through the courtesy of Manager Jennings of Detroit he was allowed to remain out of the game one inning while the cut was sewed up. The score:

CINCINNATI, Sept. 1.—Cincinnati took both games of a double-header from Chicago, coming from behind in each game to win out, 2 to 1 and 3 to 1. In the sixth inning of the first game four successive singles netted the Reds two runs, which proved enough to win. In the second game Hendrix pitched fine ball, but threw the game away himself in the seventh. With two on base Roush had apparently beat out a hit, and Hendrix's vain throw went into right field, two runs scoring. The scores:

First game:	R.	H.	E.
Chicago	1	7	4
Cincinnati	2	9	2

Batteries—Vaughn and Elliott; Toney and Wingo.

Second game:	R.	H.	E.

Batteries—Hendrix and Wilson; Eller and Wingo.

GIANTS TAKE ONE.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 1.—New York defeated Brooklyn in the final game of the series, 3 to 2. Myers's muff of a throw in the seventh was responsible for the winning run. The morning game scheduled with Philadelphia, Labor Day, will be played in the afternoon as a part of a double-header. Brooklyn had games scheduled with Philadelphia tomorrow and New York next Sunday, but canceled them pending a court decision in regard to the legality of a Sunday game played at Ebbets Field. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
New York	3	12	0
Brooklyn	2	8	1

Batteries—Sallee and Rariden; Cadore, Smith and Krueger.

TWO FOR CARDS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 1.—St. Louis won two games from Pittsburgh by 1-to-0 scores. Both contests were brightened with splendid pitching. In the first game Cooper held the visitors safe until the ninth, when Ward's fumble, followed by two well-placed hits, scored the only run of the game. Two hits and a sacrifice bunched on Carlson in the fourth inning of the second game accounted for the only run of that contest. The scores:

First game:	R.	H.	E.
St. Louis	1	5	0
Pittsburgh	0	5	1

Batteries—Horstman and Gonzales; Cooper and W. Wagner.

Second game:	R.	H.	E.

DON'T FORGET TO WATCH THE RIMS.

RUST WILD FORM UNLESS GIVEN SOME ATTENTION.

If Heated Slightly with a Blow Torch and Beeswax is Applied, Further Danger is Eliminated. Galvanized Rims Seldom Give Much Trouble.

It is not the most enjoyable thing in the world for the motorist, as he is gliding merrily down the smooth boulevard—or the chucky road—to hear an explosion which resembles the report of a cannon cracker, followed by a certain whistling sound we are all familiar with, but it is still less of a pleasure to find, upon pulling to the side of the road, jacking up the wheel, etc., that the rim has become rusted to the wheel, or the tire refuses to be separated from the rim. Here's where the fun begins—but listen—in instances of this kind don't blame the maker of the rim or the manufacturer of the tire. Put the blame where it generally belongs—right on your own shoulders.

When the manufacturer of an automobile sends out a car and claims it to be a complete machine, the rims are coated with japan, and if kept in this condition they will never give trouble. Rims that have been galvanized seldom give trouble, but even these have been known to "start things" now and then. However, steel rims by their very nature will rust if they are not properly cared for. If the enamel is not replaced when it wears off it stands to reason that rusting will follow.

For this purpose a special kind of japan should be secured and, if possible, this should be baked on the rims. Another way of protecting the finish of the rims is to heat them slightly with a blow torch and to apply beeswax to them. This seems to form a new combination with the rust, which has the effect of preventing further rust forming.

DUCKS WIN TWICE AND LEAD SECOND DIVISIO

Walter Slagle and Art Fromme Games to Portland.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

WHILE the liberty boys were marching to victory through the downtown streets the Beavers were doing the same thing at the ball park. Vernon kissed good-by to both games with a couple of loud smacks which drowned the sound of the smacks that the soldiers were receiving. Portland copped, 5-1 and 4-3, and took fourth place away from Oakland.

Not only were the fans somewhat thinner, but their ranks had been thinned considerably. The war has been in progress too long. Plainly the game here has passed the zenith of its man power, and also its woman power. One by one the dependent wives have been dropping out through sheer exhaustion, while many of the men have returned to their homes badly maimed in the pocketbook and unable to continue.

Along toward evening at the close of the second combat the survivors of the great ten-game conflict stood up and sang "We're Tenting Tonight on the Old Camp Ground." They are determined to die game, and will continue to hold the fort until Monday night, when there will not be another game until Tuesday. Many were still wearing their straw hats of former days, although this was not recherche. They had been too busy attending games to pay any attention to the closing of one of the most successful strawhat seasons in the history of the city. Straw hats will not be placed in a pile and burned this fall as heretofore. Instead they will be fed to the family cow so as to conserve the hay supply. A cow which has been fed on $5 lids should give rich milk, about 90 per cent. cream with a strong flavor of hair oil which will tend to increase the butter fat. Should any of the ultimate consumers find a hat band in their butter they will understand how it happened to be there.

HORRORS OF WAR.

A gent occupying one of the front boxes had been sitting still watching double-headers so long that his feet swelled up on him. In order to relieve the pressure he removed his shoes. In order to play safe he held the shoes in his lap. Thus he was able to foil any pickpocket who might have had designs on them. If anybody searched his pocket for shoes they were disappointed.

In the early part of the game there wasn't much cheering. Most of the bugs had been downtown piping the liberty boys and had one of those lumps in the region of the windpipe which are the result of deep emotion. Later the lumps subsided and all those present opened their valves. After looking over our freshly-hatched soldiers it is our candid opinion that a certain well-known baby killer is going to get the royal stuffing knocked out of him. If you are looking for a tip get your money down on Uncle Sam, and get it down quick. Let the other fellow write his own ticket.

FREE HITTING.

The first game was more or less of a batting fest, with the Tigers able to hit most of the time except at the right time. Walter Slagle—yes, the same party—opposed Herb Penner in this match. Because of the worn condition of the regular twirlers, Slagle was drafted from the grand stand before the game. Walter began pitching when the fans traveled to the ball park in Concord buggies. The shock of scoring five runs off him was lessened by getting only one at a time.

In the second Williams walked, scoring on swats by Griggs and Rodgers. Vaughn's error, a sacrifice and Wilie's single provoked another in the third. Griggs doubled again in the fourth, and Siglin singled. Farmer and Wilie bunched singles and a stolen base for one in the fifth. Singles by Penner and an error tells the seventh. Meantime the batting here and there, til the ninth, when Vaugh out his second two-bagger and Galloway glommed were they able to bust the SECOND GAME.

When the batteries nounced for the second shock was too great which was reposing in lap. The kid evidently only one game was to be was not prepared to It bawled loudly until the kindly nature stilled yelps in the sweet sleep haustion.

Art Fromme seemed well petered out from the doings of the week, and the visitors had amassed lead. In the final round came to life with a ing from their sepulch out, they drove Lefty James and came so near tieing that the finish found scratching himself in Mac is of a very nervous ment. Don't Do It.

MANY MOTORISTS NEGLECT TUBES.

RUNNING "FLAT" MEANS TROUBLE LATER ON.

Too Much or too Little Soapstone is Sure to Ruin Rubber. Always Remove Particles of Grit from Inside of Casing When Tube is Taken Out.

The motorist, upon purchasing a machine, should realize at the very start that one of the most important parts of the car, so far as his personal comfort is concerned, is the inner tube. If this is taken care of all may be well, but if it is neglected, look out for the inevitable trouble.

Should an inner tube, which demands greater care even than the casing, be run flat for even a short distance, it may be ruined by being ground between the rim and the casing. Very often the tube becomes pinched between the bead of the casing and the rim, this resulting in a puncture. To eliminate this trouble, inflate the tube slightly before placing it within the casing.

Damage is very often done by an improper application of talc or soapstone. If an insufficient amount of one of these materials is used the tube will stick to the casing, or rim, while an over supply of these materials will cause them to form in a cake and grind into the tube. Never place a wet tube in a casing. Moisture will cause the soapstone to cake and eventually to burn the tube, making it porous.

Before inserting a tube the motorists should always remember to remove all bits of sharp sand and gravel from inside the casing, it being almost impossible to keep them from working their way in. If these particles are permitted to remain between the casing and the tube they are bound to grind holes in the tube, causing numerous places where the air may escape. The motorist will see that upon removing a tube these particles fall to the lower side of the casing, from which they may readily be removed, a cloth or even the fingers being used.

If the motorist would have a minimum amount of trouble with his tires he should give especial attention to the tubes.

BUNTS AND BINGLES

BY THE BASEBALL EXPERT.

THE expected has happened. Whatever slim chance the Chicago Cubs had for the National League pennant shrivelled up in an epidemic of staleness.

The trouble with the Cubs is that they tried to win the pennant in Pasadena. Tournament Park is the cemetery of their fond hopes. They spilled so much sap during their fortnight there that they didn't have enough left to tide them over a long, hard season.

Writing to a relative in Los Angeles, a member of the team says: "We are stale, burned out, and most of us have no more life than a dried mackerel. California is a fine place to train if you don't do too much of it. We were crowded too rapidly in the spring."

Fred Mitchell is an ambitious man, or was last spring. He aspired to make a good showing right from the jump. No team in these parts ever was worked as were the Cubs. Their time here was limited. Mitchell made the most of it. From the start he had the athletes going over the hurdles morning and afternoon. He rented a section of the Hotel Green mainly for sleeping purposes. Many of the meals were eaten in the open field. For several days the athletes were sore in body and soul. They managed to work this out, and were right on edge when they left the Coast. Their condition was too good to last.

Commenting on the team at that time the writer said:

"The Cubs are one of the deep, unsolved mysteries of baseball. They are a slightly better club than in 1916, when they finished fifth. To land as good as fourth they must improve their percentage over last year more than 100 points, which is about as high as they can aspire. The main hope of the Cubs is that they will get the jump on all rivals. During their first eleven days on the Coast they had perfect weather, and Mitchell improved each shining moment. They probably will start the season in better shape than most of their rivals. If Mitchell can throw half a dozen perfectly conditioned pitchers into the fight right at the start, the club may be able to show its heels to all rivals for a couple of months."

This is approximately what happened with staleness as the inevitable result. The Cubs are now in their 1916 position, and making a fight for fourth place.

The sudden outcropping of Charley Jackson as a major league performer of more than ordinary ability is one of the late sensations of the season. Jackson was with the Angels last season. Although very fast and a fair fielder, his hitting was about as high as the temperature in Skagway on January 1. For some dark and mysterious reason he turned down an $1800 contract with the Angels, and played in the Northwestern League for much less coin until taken by the Pirates.

A Philadelphia writer says of him:

"Young Charley Jackson looks mighty good alongside Carey. He broke into the big show with a great hurrah, and has been making good ever since. His first appearance with the Pirates was against the Phillies with Grover Alexander pitching. The fame of the great hurler didn't bother Jackson, who hammered him for a triple right off the reel, and followed this up by making a single. He has kept up this good work, not only at the bat, but in the field and on the bases. If the Pirates had another man like him they would be well fixed in the outer garden."

These kind words from a Pittsburgh expert:

"The Pirates have picked up some capable looking youngsters. Charley Jackson should make a regular outfield berth and Boeckel appears to be a third baseman who will improve rapidly."

This is what they think in Smokeville of Chuck Ward, a graduate from Walter McCredie's exclusive school for shortstops:

"The Pittsburgh club is fairly well fixed at short, so long as Chuck Ward is hanging around, but there is no assurance that he will be with the Buccos or any other baseball club next season. He has been summoned in the draft, expects to pass the physical examination, and says he will be glad to serve Uncle Sam in France if he is wanted. He says he does not intend to claim exemption.

If Ward is taken, as seems likely, it will be up to the Pittsburgh club to replace him. Ward has developed this season, and his loss will be keenly felt. He is not a .300 clouter, but he has proved a very timely hitter and ranks second only to Max Carey in the matter of driving in runs. His good hitting has been all the more remarkable since he came to the club with no reputation in that line. It was said fielding was his strong forte, but he has made good on both defense and offense in the big show."

C. Pants Rowland has been hammered so consistently that it is pleasing to hear the rattle of hammer and tongs punctuated with a real boost. The St. Louis Sporting News, official paper of organized baseball, and an extremely conservative and critical publication, winds up an editorial thusly:

"After the 1916 campaign we came to Rowland's defense with a statement that he had done well to keep his team within a game or two of the top to the finish, because it seemed the truth. As he faces the climax of his ill luck in the injury of Weaver, we are going to say a word or two for him again. It is this:

"If he can finish anywhere near as well with his White Sox this October as he did last, in view of all the things that he has had to contend with, then he has reaffirmed our good opinion of him as a manager. And if he should pull through and win a pennant, then he is a master, indeed."

The White Sox are generally conceded to be about the toughest club in the world to manage, due to the presence of so many stars and near-stars. Furthermore, the team was put together primarily with a view to increased hitting, and the result is not as finely an adjusted machine as it may appear on paper.

Writing in the Baseball Magazine, Hank Gowdy, hero of the 1914 world series, answers the question why he severed a $6000-a-year contract with the Braves to enlist as a private at $30 per. Hank writes like he hits—straight from the shoulder:

"I had no excuse, as far as I could see, for not offering my services. The government had shown, by passing the draft law, that it needed several hundred thousand men. I have no criticism for those who wait for the draft, but I didn't like the idea myself. I do not know, and I don't believe anybody else does, how long this war will last. If it proves to be a long-time contract on my part, I want to go to France and do my bit. I wouldn't feel content to stay on this side of the Atlantic, in comparative security, and know that others were bearing the brunt across the ocean. Somebody has got to fight, and I don't see how I could consistently fail to do my share."

Hank rings true.

The Sammies are doing it—showing the Britishers a real game, and teaching them to like it. The conservative and somewhat skeptical Londoners now admit that baseball is the thing, and see the possibility, because of its great element of excitement, of its replacing cricket after the war.

Following is an account of a recent game played between the Sammies and Canadians, published in the London Mail, and mailed to us from "somewhere in France:"

The turf arena of classic lords invaded by a shouting crowd; a wonderful blue bank of hundreds of wounded soldiers; a din of sticks rattled on tins, horns, megaphones and other instruments of encouragement and discouragement; enthusiasts who danced epilepticaly; enthusiasts with four-inch-square U.S.A. flags in their hat-bands; phalanxes of Canadians who chorussed scornfully, "Now, then, you Yankees;" a puzzled, somewhat lonely minority of Londoners on the stands; gray-clad players padded like crusaders; and in the middle of the playing field a mascot white goat in a brilliant red coat!

That was the scene at Lord's on Saturday afternoon when Canada, by 12 to 3, beat the United States in the great baseball game before 10,000 spectators.

Baseball, it may be said forthwith, is a superb evolution of our British game of "rounders." It is partly a game played between two "nines" (corresponding to our cricket "elevens.") It is still more a game played by the two "nines" and crowd against the umpire (who was Mr. Frederic William Wile.) It is a stirring, glorious game, incomparably livelier than cricket, for players, for spectators, and, above all, for the umpire.

GAME-LAW BREAKERS DRAW STIFF FINES.

Violations of the deer laws protecting does and spike bucks kept the field deputies of the Fish and Game Commission busy this last week through the south. Deputy E. H. Ober arrested and convicted F. L. Manley of Los Angeles of bringing a deer into a closed district, Inyo county, without first properly tagging it, and he was fined $25, part of which was remitted on proof the hunter tried to find a ranger to certify. V. D. Reed also of Los Angeles, in like fix, met like fate. Meanwhile Deputy Abels was busy in Santa Barbara county with no less than three cases, aided by the forest rangers, wherein hunters had removed the evidence of sex from deer, or failed to preserve same for proof as required by law, $50, fine being imposed in each case, one suspended because the offender was a boy. The deer laws mean just what the book says, hunters are finding out. Nearly every day last week the Los Angeles office was compelled to seize illegal shipments of venison or other game, among the list prairie chickens from Nebraska. One lad sent in seventeen doves from Bakersfield by express—two over the limit.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BUFFALO (N. Y.) Sept. 1.—In the Red Cross tennis tournament here today Miss Mary Browne, former national champion, won in straight sets from Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the Norwegian girl, who holds the national title, 6-4, 6-2.

R. Lindley Murray of Niagara Falls, but formerly of California, defeated his opponent, John R. Strachan, another Californian, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3. In the men's doubles Murray and Strachan defeated the easterners, Alexander and Throckmorton, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

About $1000 was collected for the Red Cross.

CROSS-EXAMINATION FOR WOMEN DRIVERS.

Anita King, she of movie fame and also she who obtained much of the first of that fame by a well-advertised transcontinental tour in a motor car, would put the following questions to all women who would prove their case in motor car driving:

Can you shift gears in a whisper when climbing a steep hill without slowing up?

Can you locate a foul spark plug, remove, clean and space it?

Can you tell by the sound when the carburetor is too rich and change the adjustment to correct?

Can you locate a squeak or a rattle and kill it?

Can you change a tire in ten minutes and be on your way without calling in a wearer of overalls?

If you cannot do these things, says Miss King, and do them without dread or uncertainty, then go back to the instruction department of the place where you bought your car and make them stick with you until you have learned these things. Then, and not until then, will you have approached the point where transcontinental travel at the wheel of a motor car will become a real joy.

ALL SIZES AND SHAPES OF TRACTORS SOON TO BE SEEN.

MONSTER tractors now being used to reclaim and cultivate the northern portion of France devastated by the German army will be shown in replica at the monster demonstration of the Southern California Tractor and Farm Implement Association which takes place on the Vail ranch September 18-22.

Exact duplicates of these monster machines will be seen at work plowing portions of the field devoted to that purpose. In addition to these huge juggernauts, there will be tractors of all shapes and sizes down to a one-man, one-wheel, one-cylinder creation which can be used in cultivating your back yard.

BY JOHN DOUGHERTY.

September 2, 1917.

AMONG THE FANS.

The editor of the American Chess Bulletin desires to give a write-up in the near future about the chess club and players in Los Angeles and vicinity. If the chess players will kindly send their name and address to the editor of this column, the same will be listed and forwarded to Mr. Helms (editor of the A.C.B.) and they will receive a copy of the magazine containing the write-up of Los Angeles chess players.

Mr. Jordan is on another "tour," which will land him back in Chicago by September 20.

The editor is planning on spending Sunday, September 2, in San Diego, and will drop into the Cabrillo Club in the evening in hopes of finding the checker elites busily engaged over the mystic squares.

White—9, 12, 15, 16, 19, 31.

SOLUTIONS TO PROBLEMS.
PROBLEM NO. 169.

This problem was sure "punk," as black cannot even draw, let alone win. The position came up in a double-corner game, and I won as in note "a," but on looking over the position I find that my opponent committed an inadvertency, as the following shows:

Black—1, 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21.
White—5, 19, 20, 22, 23, 26, 30.
Black to play and white to win.

21-25	6-15	24-27	31-27	23-18
30-21	23-19-a	22-18	23-19	16-11

19-10	26-23	18-9	20-16-b	17-7-c
				White wins.

a—If 20-16, 12-19, 23-16, black wins by stealing the two men on 26 and 23.
b—19-15 allows a draw.
c—19-15 would still a draw by 13-17, etc.

PROBLEM NO. 170.
By the editor.
Black—7, 12, 19, 20, 27, King 1.
White—9, 25, 26, 28, 29, King 17.
Black to play and win.

1-6	12-16	20-24	27-32	23-14
9-2	2-11	11-20	26-27	B. wins.

13-17	14-9	30-25	5-9

The position as left off is rather dangerous for white, but in playing it over with Banks at Pittsburgh [illegible] that white can draw. What are the critics?

[illegible]

And Buchanan against Jackson secured a run-away draw. [illegible]

VARIATION 1.

[illegible]

VARIATION 2.

[illegible]

And the position is very precarious for white. [illegible]

25-22	12-8	31-26	16-12	8-3

o—3-7, 13-9, 7-11, 16-7, 14-18, 23-14, 10-17, 21-14, 3-17, drawn.
p—White gets a very inferior game after this move.
q—1-6, 22-17, 14-18, 23-7, 2-18, 19-15, 3-7, 17-13, white best.

LOS ANGELES TIMES GAME, NO. 372.
10-14, 23-18.

The following game by Mr. Henderson was taken from the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

11-16, 23-19 and 12-16, 23-19 ought to be again debarred, as there seems to be no tenable defense for white. Of the four debarred openings this one approaches near equally than any of the others.

[illegible]

a—This "take" seems to be more confusing than 26-19.
b—11-15, 18-11, 8-15, followed by 22-18, and both sides are fairly equal.
c—Undoubtedly the best reply.
d—11-16 will be treated in a future issue.
e—Playing for the "elbow" via 10-14. Young players should note the efficacy of this style of attack. It proved to be the undoing of the 12-16, 23-19 opening and plays a very important part in checker formation throughout.
f—This and moves leading up to it seem to be white's easiest defense.
g—2-7, 26-22, white O. K.
h—28-24, 2-7, 23-19, 7-10, 29-25, 3-7, black wins.
i—3-7, 25-22, 14-17, 21-14, 6-10, 15-6, 1-17, 23-18, drawn.
j—These two moves are the key to the draw; 26-22 may draw, but is weak.

A Specimen:

20-22	21-14	18-14	28-19	11-2
1-5	10-17	22-25	25-30	6-9

a—White's play is rather original, but Woodward has schemes of his own.
b—A trap. Black should have left the pawn alone.
c—Counting on White capturing bishop, then Black plays QxP (ch) and captures knight; but White, by his refusal to take at once, shows the move bad.
d—Allowing mate on the move, but the game was lost anyway.

BRING IN EARLY LIMITS OF DOVES.

Bill Cornett and Heine Pfirrmann, Jr., brought in two of the earliest dove limits yesterday morning and placed them before the public gaze at Tufts-Lyons. These two sportsmen, Lloyd Bentworth, and Judge Smith, the former Angel third base wizard, hooked limits near Downey. Pfirrmann is out again today, but this time on the Porter ranch, near San Fernando. Louis Mellus was another who landed his limit.

ATHLETIC CARD AT ELSINORE TOMORROW.

Boating and canoe races, track and field events, an 8000-foot parachute drop and an exhibition in a military airplane by Prest, a genuine high flier, will be the features of the athletic programme to be held at the second annual picnic of the Riverside County Chamber of Commerce, at Elsinore tomorrow.

During the afternoon sightseeing launches will tour around the lake. A barbecue and picnic lunch, open air entertainment and evening dancing are also in store. Fishing promises to attract many to the water's edge.

BEAR VALLEY HUNTING BAD.

Sugarloaf Country Draws Many Nimrods.

But They Report Lack of Good Shooting.

Deer Tracks not Plentiful this Season.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BIG BEAR VALLEY, Sept. 1.—The Sugarloaf country, east of Big Bear Valley, and just outside the game reserve, was the Mecca for most of the deer hunters of this section today. For most of the hunters the opening day was a decided disappointment. For the first time in many years, no Nimrod returned to Bear Valley before nightfall with the limit.

Old timers had predicted that the shooting this year would not be up to standard for they said that the deer tracks about the water holes were not as plentiful as usual. And most of the hunters who toiled over the "hog backs" with their heavy 20-30's on their shoulders agreed with them.

About fifty well-known sportsmen started from this valley last night for the Sugarloaf country and most of them went prepared to stay for three or four days. Abut twenty-five started from Seven Oaks for the same place and others from Redlands. Deer hunting in the San Bernardino Mountains since the game reserve was put in force is not a one-day's job and most of the hunters go prepared to stay for four or five days.

There are plenty of deer in the reserve the hunters say, but not many just outside it. Some of the most enthusiastic of the hunters are working through the mountains to the east of Holcomb Valley and expect to work around into the Whitewater country before they finish their hunt.

STEELHEADS THRIVE IN WHITNEY PLANT.

Steelhead trout fry from snow mountain eggs have established a new record for rate of growth, attaining a length of two and a half inches in as many months under the unusually favorably conditons of the new Mt. Whitney hatchery.

Supt. Frank A. Shebley, in charge of the big plant, successfully fertilized 98 per cent. of the egg take on Eel River, and brought the first fish to the Whitney troughs. He attributes the phenomenal growth to the great quantity of food suitable for young trout that comes in with the Oak Creek water, and the very low mortality partly to the vigor of the fish because of their well-nourished conditon, but very largely to the modern and sanitary glass and cement installations which are as nearly germ-proof as science could make them.

The first fish started growing early in June, and all are over two inches long while the more precocious have set the pace of "an inch a month" and bid fair to maintain it.

MEDIUM PRICED CARS SELLING LIKE HOT CAKES.

DETROIT, Sept. 1.—Latest reports show that the manufacturers of cars selling for $1500 or less are now finding themselves unable to take care of all the business offered and that some firms which build cars priced from this figure up to $2500 are experiencing the greatest wave of prosperity in their history. Generally there seems to be considerable optimism with regard to the low-priced-car market.

It is understood that the Ford Motor Company is 80,000 cars behind in orders, while the Willys-Overland, Inc., enjoyed the greatest business prosperity in its history during June and July. The Buick Motor Company, Maxwell Motor Company, Chevrolet Motor Company, Dodge Bros., Reo Motor Car Company, Olds Motor Works, Paige Motor Car Corporation and other organizations producing machines within the figures stated are behind in their orders from thirty to sixty days.

It is natural to suppose that the orders now being placed promise a continuation, with a probable increase, of employment to labor throughout the country. It is understood that, on account of the method in which they are being let, the awarding of war contracts by the government and all Allied nations will not at present interfere with the general production of passenger cars and trucks. Motor manufacturers claim there is only one thing that may hinder the progress of their industry, and that is the price of gasoline; and it is hoped and expected that the government will take steps to eliminate any trouble from that direction.

COAST KELP BEDS CLOSED BY STATE.

Following consultation with the kelp cutters, the Fish and Game Commission has announced the temporary closure of certain of the kelp beds along shore which show signs of needing a rest.

The beds from Point Loma north to Laguna are closed until September 15; from Point Vincente to White's Point, until October 1; White's Point to the breakwater, until November 1; the Goleta, Santa Barbara, Coil Oil and Naples beds, are closed indefinitely, excepting those being used by the United States Bureau of Soils for Dr. Turrentine's fertilizers work about Summerland.

Everything else including the island beds is left open. Within the next few months, Capt. Crandall and the Fish and Game Commission's kelp students will have formed accurate ideas of the rapidity of restoration of the kelp, the Scripps Biological Institute operating with the State in this research work. There are now seven large concerns operating and eleven smaller ones with capacity of twenty to seventy-five tons each daily, making potash for explosives in war use, and fertilizers.

Abolition of the 50-cent permit fee on Sundays at the border is to be sought by the Automobile Club of Canada, Montreal, which is approaching the collector of customs on the point. It is pointed out that no such regulation is enforced by the American authorities and it is felt that there is no need for it on the Canadian side.

INDIAN SMITH IS THE SERAPH JINX.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—San Francisco defeated Los Angeles in the fifth game of the series. Koerner's home run in the second tied the score after the Angels had scored one in the first on Killifer's double, a passed ball and Hunter's error. Smith walked in the fifth and scored the Seals' winning run on two infield hits and Schaller's sacrifice fly.

Fight Programme.

FRED FULTON AND CARL MORRIS MINGLE MOND

Heavyweight Winner will Probabl Chance at Willard.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 1.—Fred Fulton vs. Carl Morris in fifteen rounds to a decision at Canton, O., Labor Day, is the headliner in ring activities on that day. Although battles galore all over the country have been scheduled for Monday, the interest of the fisticuff world will be centered on the Fulton-Morris melee. And the cause of all the excitement is the fact that the winner may battle Jess Willard, the world's heavyweight champion.

THE CHAMP.

Nothing much has been heard about Mr. Willard in connection with ring battles since he became a circus proprietor, but almost every one knows he has a nice little show. However, rumors and reports have it that Jess is going to desert the sawdust arena long enough to put a quietus on the scrappers, managers and other fight impressarios who have been imposing on his tranquility. It is said he is ready to meet the winner of the Fulton-Morris battle Labor Day. And what is more, he doesn't care who wins.

Both Fulton and Morris are willing to step into the ring with Willard. In fact, they are quite eager to do so. It is a well-known fact that there is no love lost between the title-contenders, and with a championship bout as an incentive, their meeting Monday

Packard
Distillate Trucks

Big users like Swift and Co. buy Packard worm-drive trucks because of their proved economy. The sixty Packards operated by the big packing concern are the index of this economy.

"The little fellow"—as well as the big business man—finds the Packard truck the cheapest in the long run to own and operate.

In the simple, even leverage of the Packard truck's worm-drive there is pull continuous—steady traction instead of a succession of sprocket jerks. One rugged steel bar instead of fifty grinding, straining links. One dust proof pool of oil instead of fifty exposed bearings. One oiling after 5000 miles instead of daily bother.

Simplicity—economy—silent—chainless—seven right sizes, one to six tons.

"PACKARDIZE YOUR HAULING"

INTER STATE
An Extra Value Car

Why the Price Has Not Been Advanced

IN THE past few months practically all automobile manufacturers have been forced to increase the price of their product. If you have been at all skeptical as to the reasonableness of such a procedure, when nearly everything else you eat, wear or use has increased in price, we say that it has been vitally necessary for these automobile manufacturers to increase the price of their cars.

Our object is not to argue—our message is of a different nature.

We want you to know why the Inter-State has not been increased in price. We believe that such information is valuable to you if you have been disappointed because the car you had in mind is now out of your reach.

We cannot feel that there has been any element of luck responsible for our ability to keep the Inter-State price where it is today.

In looking back over the past year and a half, we can see where experience and financial resourcefulness have made it possible to keep the Inter-State price constant.

Those men who form the Inter-State Motor Company are experienced manufacturers. Other lines of business in which they are interested are doing millions of dollars worth of business a year. Being manufacturers, they study and know to the best of their ability, manufacturing conditions, and this experience has enabled them to overcome the many obstacles which have confronted manufacturers, especially at this time.

They have seen that the prices of all materials entering into the construction of automobiles would increase. Through the strength of their buying power, they were able, without making it a burden to the Inter-State Motor Company, to ask all concerns making Inter-State units to ship them to Muncie as fast as the production facilities of these concerns would allow. For the past year and a half there have been no shipping schedules on Inter-State material. It has been "Let it come in as fast as possible." The result of this unrestricted buying has given us a big supply of material.

We do not wish to infer that we have not had our share of set-backs, but fortunately these set-backs have all been, in the last analysis, in our favor and have assisted us to keep the Inter-State price where it has been and is today.

We still have sufficient material purchased through this careful planning with which to build Inter-State cars at no increase in price.

Frankly, the length of time we can protect our present price depends entirely upon how long this material will last.

Careful investigation on your part will show that the Inter-State has made an enviable reputation for performance and stability in the past few years. It is essentially a genuine, medium-priced car of proven ability, backed by an institution which knows to a certainty that the reputation of this product depends upon the maintenance of a definite standard of value regardless of the number of years they are in business.

Today there are Inter-State dealers in practically all the important cities of the United States who will be very glad to discuss with you the many advantages of the Inter-State car.

If you are anxious to buy a car which has not been increased in price and which will render you a degree of service, for the price, which is far above the average, we would suggest that you get in touch with an Inter-State dealer today and ask for a demonstration.

The substance of the whole matter is that you can save money now and afterward.

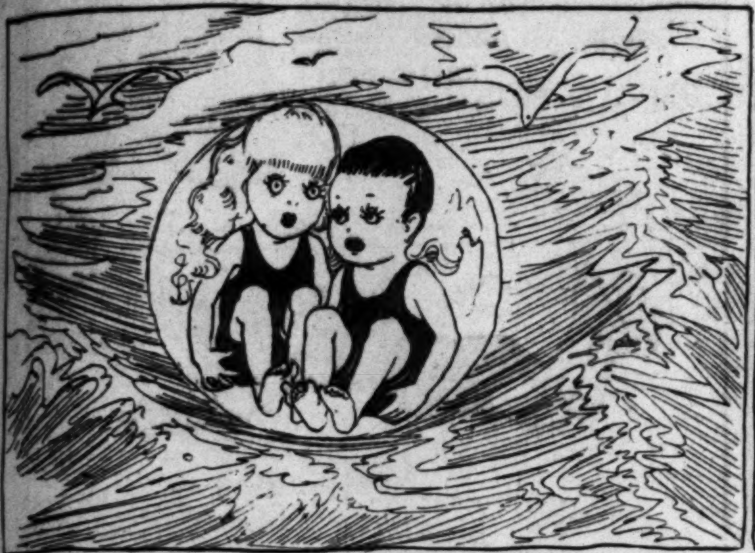
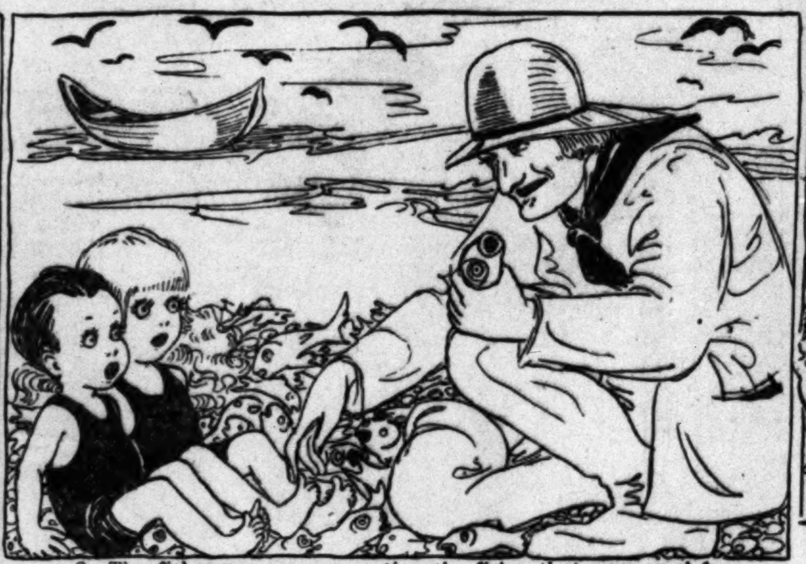
ONCE UPON A TIME

BY CLYDE LUDWICK

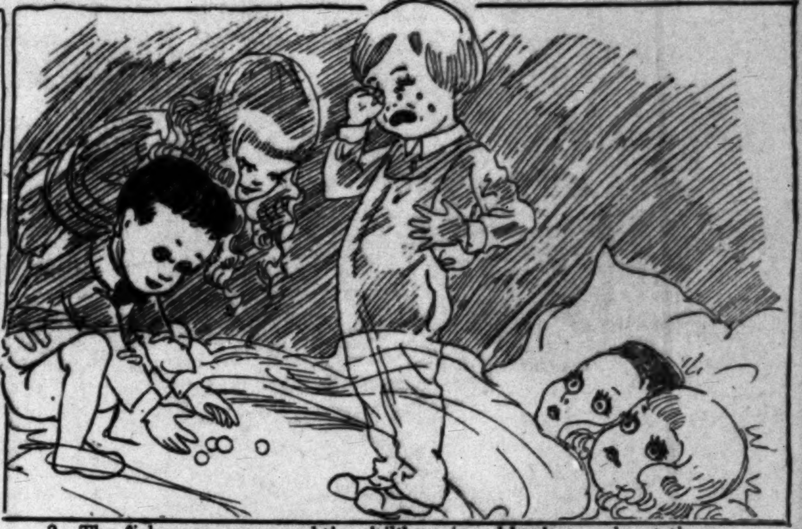
THE CHILDREN FOUND "KEEPS" IS A BAD GAME



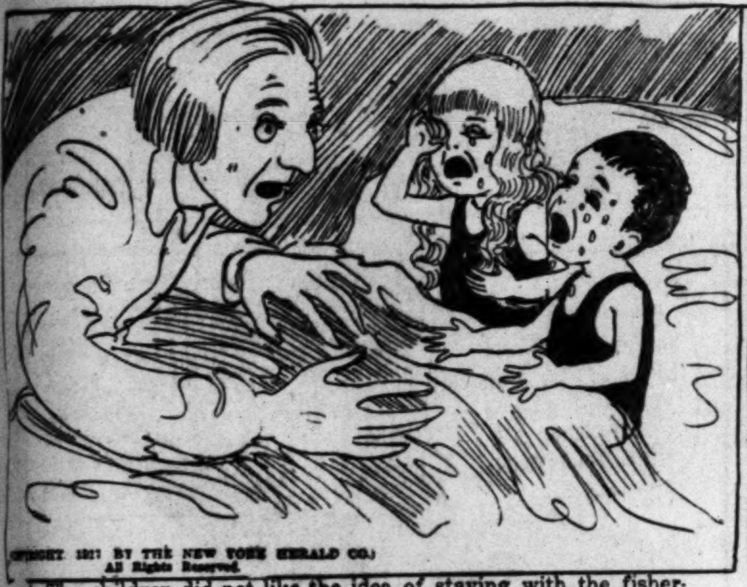
1—The children floated about in the bubble that the mermaid had blown for them until a fisherman had cast his net. When he had drawn it in it was loaded with many fishes.



2—The fisherman was separating the fishes that were good from the fishes that were useless when he found Son Bud and Sis, for he had caught them in his net. "Great!" he cried. "This fishing is a game of 'keeps,' and here are two nice children for my own."

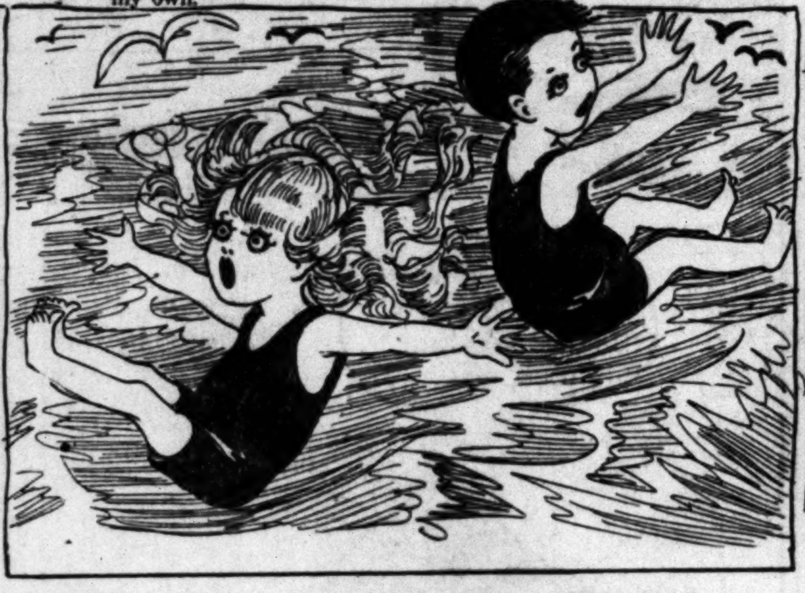


3—The fisherman wrapped the children in a blanket and put them in his own bed, for they were wet and cold. They did not cry at first, but presently they thought about what the man had said about "a game of keeps," and they knew he intended to keep them. Then they remembered how Jackie had cried when they took his marbles just because they won the game.

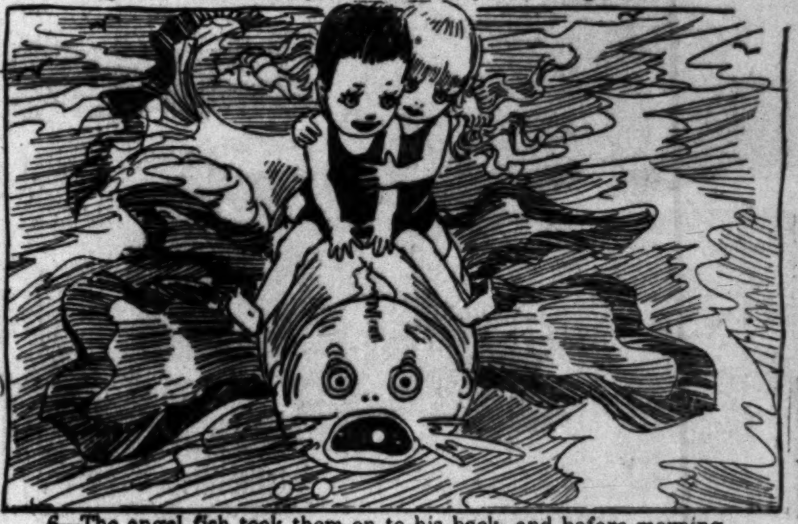


COPYRIGHT 1917 BY THE NEW YORK HERALD CO. All Rights Reserved.

4—The children did not like the idea of staying with the fisherman. They wanted very much to go home, so they began to cry as loudly as they could. The man tried many ways to quiet them, but when he found he could not he was very angry

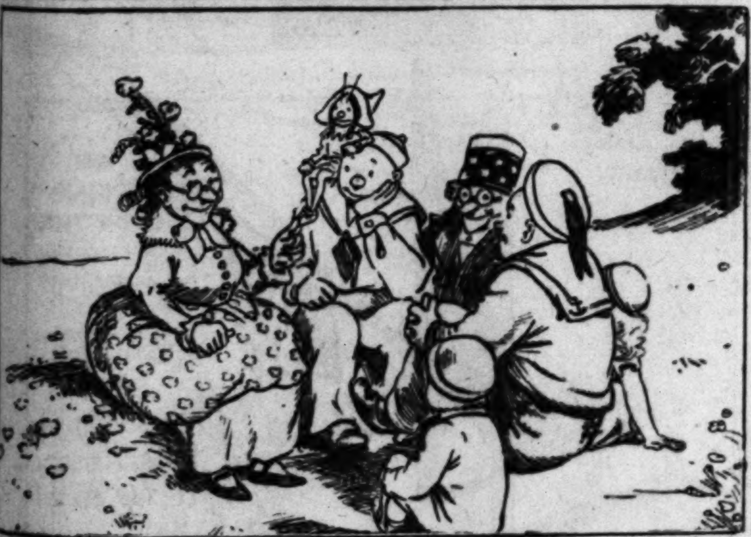


5—He threw them back into the ocean to get rid of them. Something terrible would have happened to the children had not an angel fish come along just then.

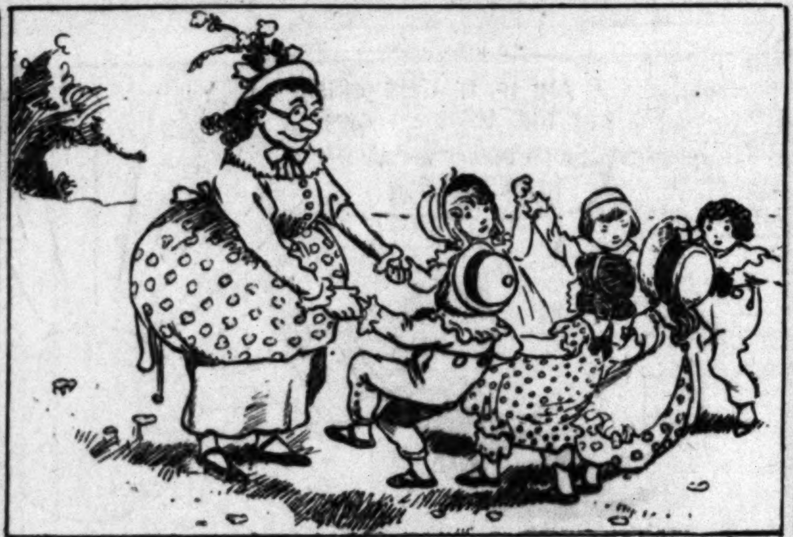


6—The angel fish took them on to his back, and before morning they were safe in their own bed. An angel fish is a very homely creature, but that just goes to show that people who are not at all pretty to look at may be very good at heart. Son Bud and Sis are going to take Jackie's marbles to him just as soon as they can, and never, never play keeps again, for they have learned what a bad game it is.

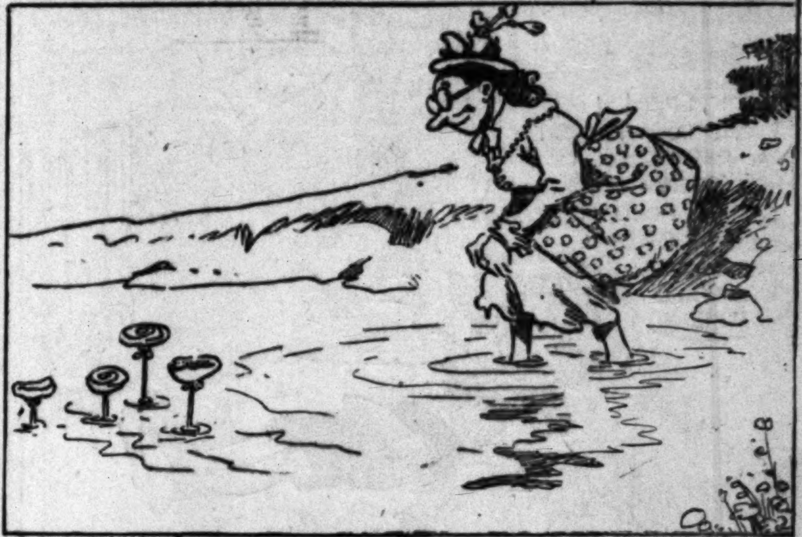
MR. TWEE DEEDLE.



1—When the queer little man rescued the Fat Sailor and Cousin Jim from the pool where they had gone to wash the pie from their clothes a funny little lady came out of the pool hanging to the Fat Sailor's feet. "How long had you been under the water?" the children asked. "Oh, for a long time!" she answered. She told them the following story.—



2—"My name is Katinka and I used to teach school. The school was out in the fields, so that we would have more room to romp and play. I taught a class in kindness. One day on my way home I stopped upon the brink of the pool to pick some flowers, and when I tasted them they were made of the finest candy.



3—"A little way out from the bank I saw some lovely large flowers, so I took off my shoes and stockings and waded out to them, but, like the Fat Sailor and Cousin Jim, I stepped into the quicksand and sank down under the water. I found out afterward that the quicksand was sugar and the water was sweetened water —When I dropped down below the quick sugar I found some other ladies down there sitting about on rock candy crystals. They told me they had lived there all their lives. They were sweet ladies, probably because they had lived under the sugar so long. There were queer animals also that chased the ladies. When they caught the sweet creatures they ate them, which was very rude and unmannerly.

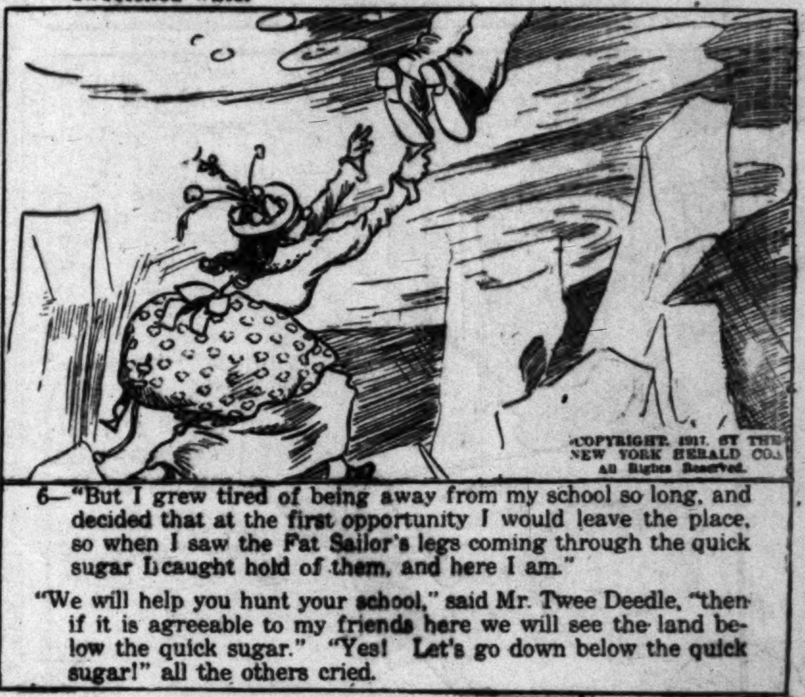
5—"While we were talking one of the animals ran up and all the sugar ladies hid under the candy rocks. The animal was going to eat me, but I crossed my fingers and he knew it wasn't fair. So I gave him a lecture and explained the first lesson in kindness to him. He was so quick in learning that he said he would teach all the others to eat the candy rocks instead of the sugar ladies!



COPYRIGHT, 1917, BY THE NEW YORK HERALD CO. All Rights Reserved.

6—"But I grew tired of being away from my school so long, and decided that at the first opportunity I would leave the place, so when I saw the Fat Sailor's legs coming through the quick sugar I caught hold of them, and here I am."

"We will help you hunt your school," said Mr. Twee Deedle, "then if it is agreeable to my friends here we will see the land below the quick sugar." "Yes! Let's go down below the quick sugar!" all the others cried.

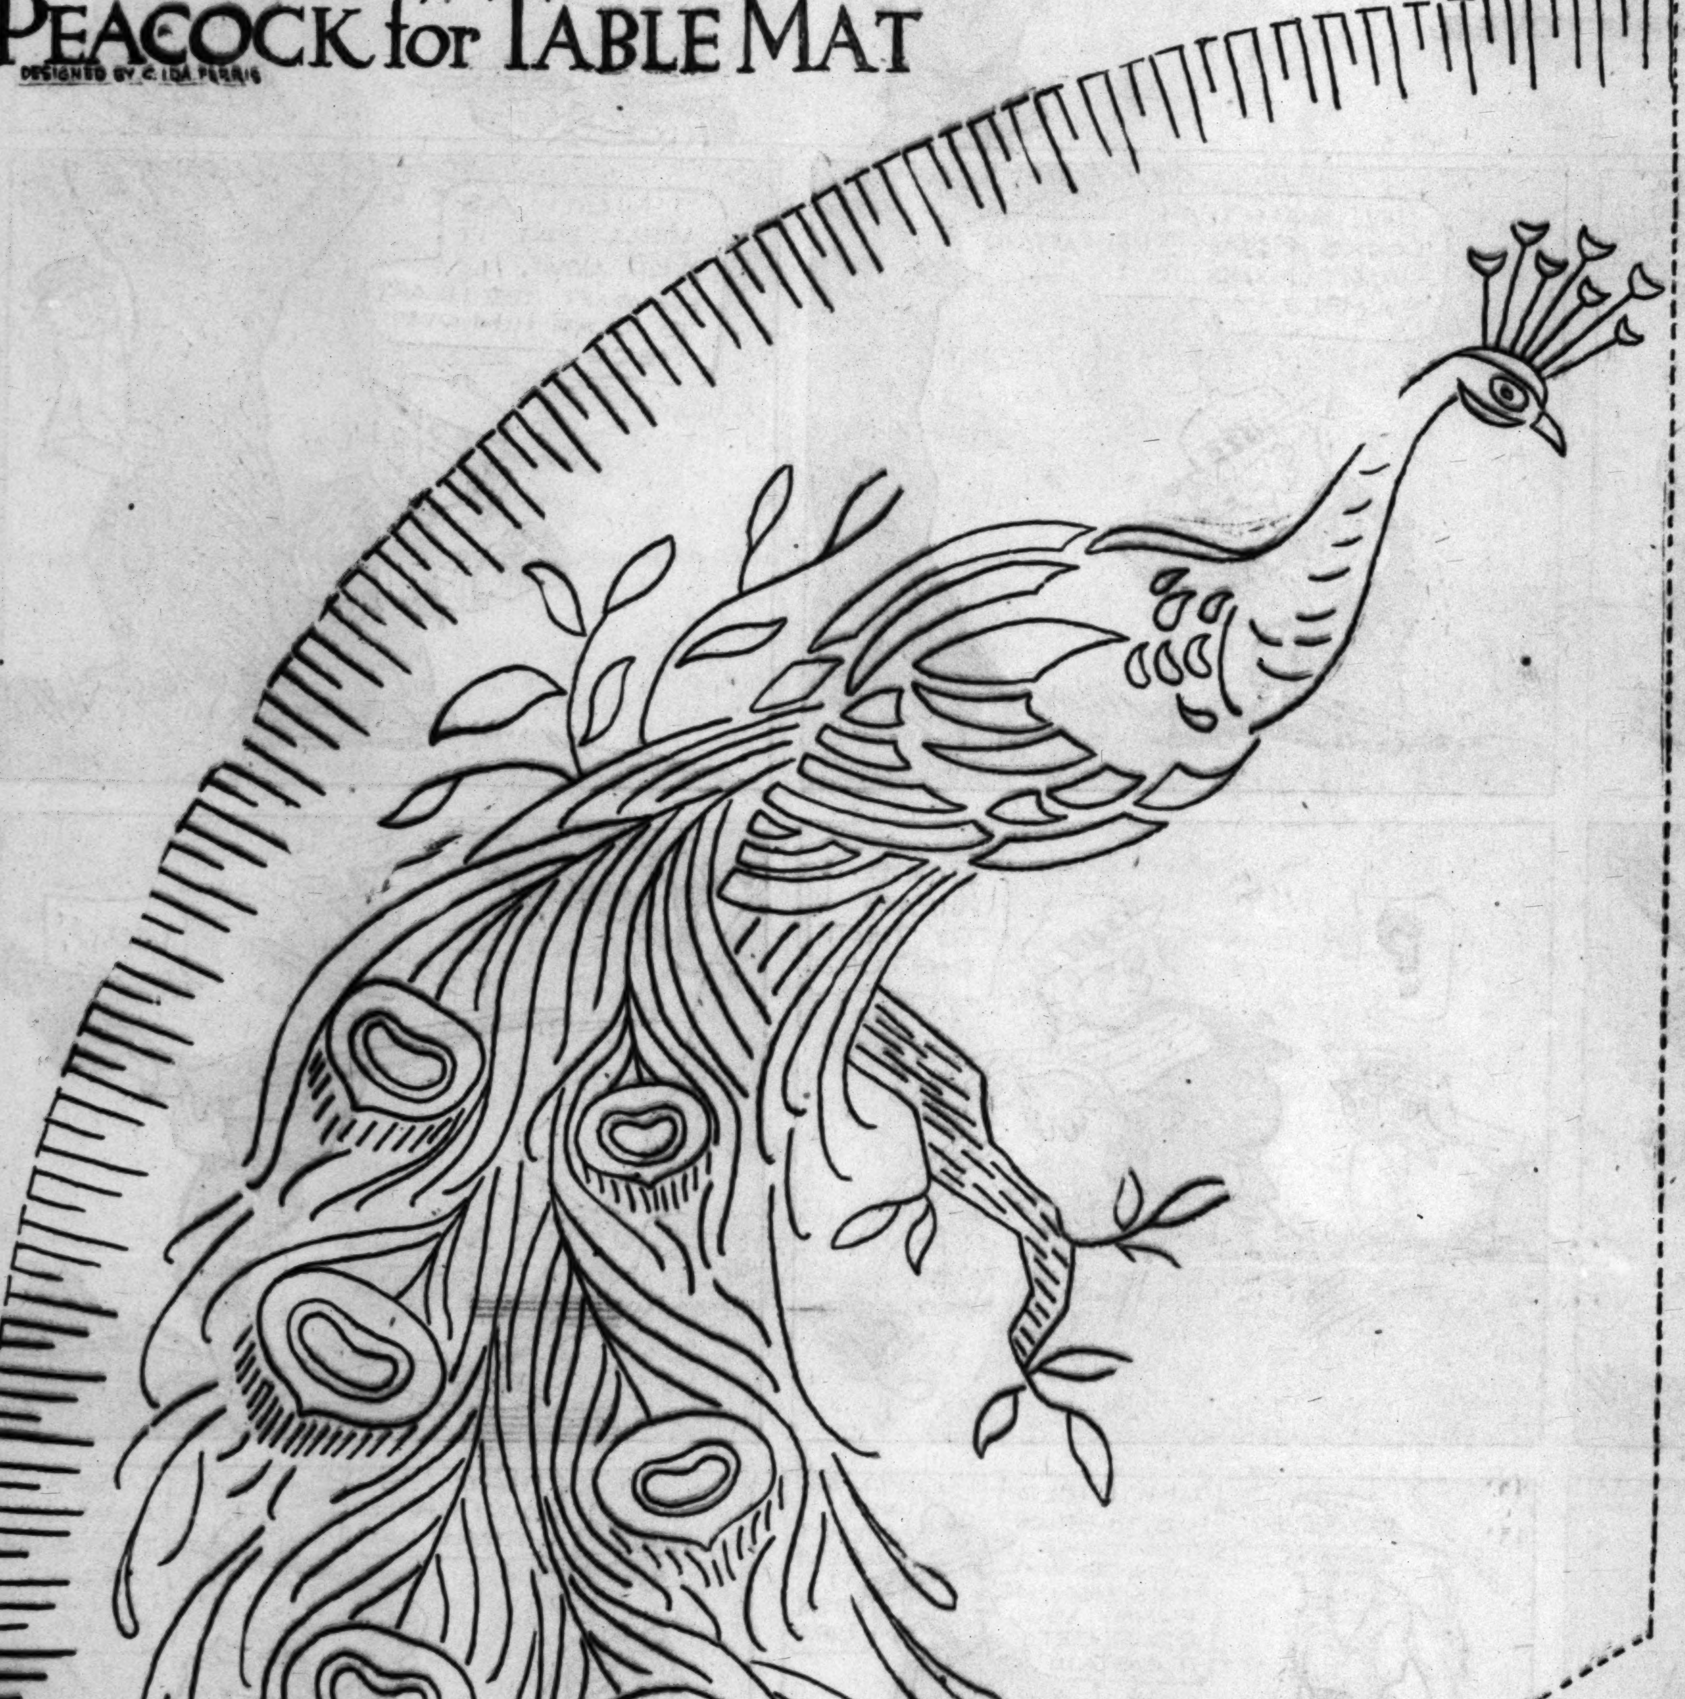
FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

BY ADELAIDE BYRD

PEACOCK for TABLE MAT

DESIGNED BY C. IDA FERRIS



THE day of the elaborate white center piece has gone. Its place has been filled by the new table mat, which is less ornate and far more artistic. The peacock design illustrated here may be adapted not only for a circular center piece, but may be used for a table runner or pillow top as well.

The entire peacock design and one-third of the edge are shown: the rest of the edge may easily be secured by repeating the section given. It will be found that the design may be transferred by the use of carbon paper and a blunt instrument, such as an orange stick. Transferred in this way, the original draft of the design may be used an indefinite number of times without injury.

The edge shown is designed for the use of the single stitch, alternating long and short. If this edge is used, it will be necessary, unless a hem is desired, to button-hole it afterwards in order to render it firm and secure it against fraying. Handmade lace of any decription is a pretty suggestion for the finishing edge.

The peacock design will be particularly effective done in colored silks on a silk poplin material in a soft tan or silver gray shade. Four colors may be used—dark and medium green, peacock blue and bright deep yellow. The long barbs of the feathers are done in blue, the short ones in combinations of both shades of green in the outline stitch. The centers of the eyes are done solid in blue with a solid ring of gold and the outer section in dark green. The outline of the body of the bird itself is green, with touches of blue, lighter green and yellow on the wings and markings. The tips of the crest are yellow, as is the eye. The foliage is done in both shades of green, the leaves solid and the branch in outline and single stitch.

If the library is decorated in dark red or green, it may be desirable to have the mat in the same shade. In the latter case, the design may be followed out in the colors suggested above, care being observed to see that the shades of the embroidery floss are lighter than and harmonious with the foundation color. In the case of a red room, the motif will work out stunningly done in a bright, rich gold. No other combination shade will be necessary in this case.

The circular pattern shown may be admirably adapted to the new round boudoir pillows. If the room is in rose the design may be effectively carried out in the outline stitch with metallic gold thread. If blue is the predominating tone, silver thread is good. In the case of such an adaptation, the single stitch edge may be repeated on the reverse side of the pillow and the two sides fastened together with a narrow shirred piece of the material. A metallic cord finished with tassels would be an effective additional touch to the edge.

As a motif for the end of a dressing table scarf or any piece of bedroom linen, the peacock design may be developed in all white. In the event of such a use, as much solid work as possible should be used to make the design stand out.

As a decoration for porch linens, the design will prove a great success. Stamped on the natural colored linen it may be developed either in the colors suggested or in harmonizing shades of brown and gold. In short, for the clever needlewoman with an imagination, the possibilities of this transfer are almost limitless.

WOMAN'S DUTY

IN THESE DAYS OF WAR AND PREPAREDNESS, LIFE IS A STERN REALITY. BUT IN THE MEANWHILE, LIVING IS GOING ON JUST THE SAME, AND, AS ALWAYS, LIVING SHOULD BE MADE AS COMFORTABLE AND BEAUTIFUL AS POSSIBLE. THE LITTLE, GRACEFUL, BEAUTIFYING TOUCHES ARE MORE IN NEED OF BEING MADE THAN EVER, AND MAKING THE HOME ATTRACTIVE IN THE SIMPLEST, MOST ECONOMICAL AND EFFECTIVE FASHION IS THE DUTY OF EVERY WOMAN.

DON'T FAIL TO GET THE YOUNGSTER'S NIGHTIE DESIGN NEXT WEEK.

KEEP A RECORD

THE attempt to hold in the memory the endless details of numbers of yards and widths and possible methods of piecings, for the garments made at home for one's family needs, is as poor efficiency as the effort to "swallow the cook-book whole." Either burdens the brain is unnecessarily, and so pushes out far more vital things that ought to be given their precedence over such mere mechanical data.

And yet—one has to know which pattern was used for those little petticoats, made in the spring of last year, and how much edging was used for them, and which roll of white cambric contains the odd pieces from them, for letting down and refacing the hems. There are so many small rolls of white cambric and nainsook in one's piece-trunk,—and no two exactly of the same weave. And if the Mother Person could only remember the number of the embroidery cotton used for the little eyelet embroidering on Big Sister's smock, that kept its tint so well,—so that more of the same color and weight could be purchased with certainty, for Lassie's pretty afternoon frocks.

Patterns get mislaid, or the fragile tissue-paper is torn and crumpled. A year may go by without a call for the especial one held so essential,—and then—where is it? And what was its number? And how many yards was it found to need? How many inches saved by just that one piecing down the back? And will the remnant one runs across unexpectedly be enough for the blouse for Boy John?

The answer to all these things lies in keeping, for constant record, a "Sewing-room Book," in which a journal of materials bought can be kept, as well as one of the patterns bought, with number and name of publisher, and particulars of cutting out, that will often save several yards when a second batch of garments is to be cut from the same pattern. This record should be made at the time of cutting out and sewing, while all the details of making, widths, and qualities are fresh in mind. If there is a way by economy in cutting can be it should be put down, without delay. And the roll of pieces labeled to correspond with the in the book where the record of garments made from that fabric is to be found.

One page of this journal given to the measurements grown-up in the family. stocking sizes should be chest and waist measu lengths and shoe numb sizes and hat measurem children's records may allowed more room, as they the months. When these are the date should be noted, lowance for growth may and each new measurement recorded without fail. has an especial and around Christmas time, birthdays loom ahead. To know, for certain, just gloves or silk socks or will fit some one dear mem family, without having to the subject and find out by cident, will often solve quite some problems for young, as older, gift-givers.

Now if the Mother Person will out for herself a memoran her shopping-book, of the of material needed for the garment for each member of ily, and of the hosiery and numbers fitting each one of and make this list an occupant hand-bag,—she will always to take advantage of real sales (and they do exist!)— definitely that this length of bray can be made into a Jean,—that remnant of be entirely adequate for Lassie's rons, and that the pairs of stockings will be the right for Boy John—without having to load her brain with endless ures, in order to shop—as should be done!

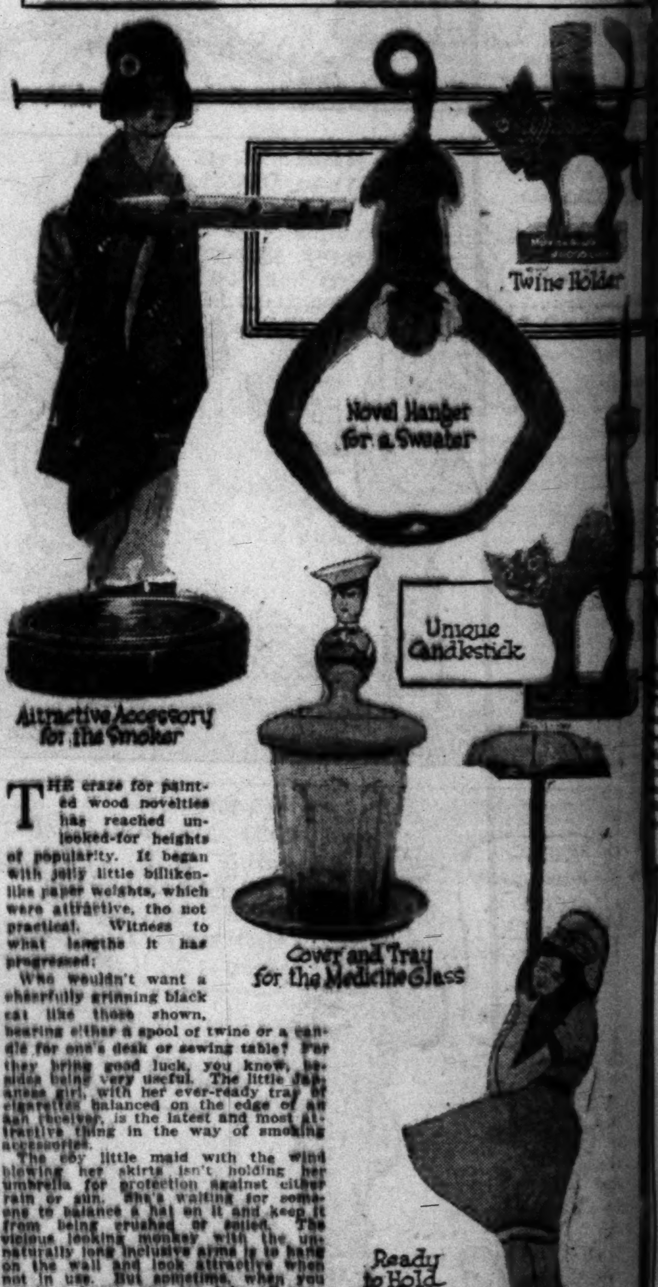
Of Paper Patterns

RATHER fragile are the tissue guides by which one cuts out the dresses and lingerie and pajamas and whatnot, to be made in the home sewing room. Yet a tried and trusted pattern is a thing of high value. Should a piece be lost, the pattern's use is gone. And what is more common than to have some one piece blown out of sight, and its loss not be noticed when time for clearing-up the room comes?

The only way to make sure that the patterns are in efficient shape for the best possible service is to have a definite method of looking after their welfare, from the very beginning. Before any pattern goes into use, it should be taken from the envelope, each part verified by the list given, and each smallest piece marked with the number of the pattern and with its part-name. This can best be done with a soft (BB) pencil, which will write on the tissue-paper without extra pressure, and will not tear as will a hard point. Then, if two patterns happen to be in use at the same time, and the different bits of tissue-paper get mixed, to make sure "which is what" will be a simple affair.

Just as strictly observed should be the rule that each pattern be properly "checked up," piece by piece, and folded back into the envelope, as soon as it is finished with. Never put this off, unless desirous of having to buy duplicate copies, whenever sewing is to be done. At the least, the checking should be done before the sewing room is cleared, at night. Else—expect lost collar-band patterns, and the entire disappearance of the little sleeve-lap bits from shirt and waist patterns. Finally, if the envelopes get torn easily, buy a packet of plain manila ones, slightly larger, at the stationer's, and use one of these to hold pattern and torn envelope, numbering it on the outside, in ink,—unless you choose to paste the back and front of the torn envelope smoothly on the outside of the new envelope.

Knicknacks of Painted Wood



Attractive Accessory for the Smoker
Novel Hanger for a Sweater
Twine Holder
Unique Candlestick
Cover and Tray for the Medicine Glass
Ready to Hold Your Hat

THE craze for painted wood novelties has reached unlooked-for heights of popularity. It began with jolly little billiken-like paper weights, which were attractive, tho not practical. Witness to what lengths it has progressed:

Who wouldn't want a cheerfully grinning black cat like those shown, bearing either a spool of twine or a candle for one's desk or sewing table? For they bring good luck, you know, besides being very useful. The little Japanese girl, with her ever-ready tray of cigarettes balanced on the edge of an ash receiver, is the latest and most attractive thing in the way of smoking accessories.

The coy little maid with the wind blowing her skirts isn't holding her umbrella for protection against either rain or sun. She's waiting for someone to balance a hat on it and keep it from being crushed or soiled. The vicious looking monkey with the unnaturally long inclusive arms is to hang on the wall and look attractive when not in use. But sometime, when you are in a hurry, you can take off your sweater and thrust it thru those same arms, and when you want to wear it again you'll find it in just as good condition as when you took it off, and not all drawn out of proportion as it would have been had you hung it up on a hook by the neckband.

The Red Cross nurse, with her black hair, snowy cap and apron and blue uniform, is in reality just the lid of a glass for the sick room. And a painted wooden saucer to match her goes under the glass.

The possibilities of painted wood ornaments do not end here. They may be developed into all sorts of clever things for the desk, such as pen-trays, inkwells and paper cutters. An ordinary splint basket can be converted into an unusual garden basket for cut-flowers by the clever use of a little black enamel and some bright colors applied in alternate

GOOD FORM, HEALTH AND BEAUTY

THE WOMAN WORKER AND HER HANDS

Occasionally Raise the Hands to Whiten Them

Massage to Shape Fingers

Use Lemon For Fruit Stains

Remove Grime With Cream Before Washing the Hands

Soap Under the Finger Nails Will Absorb Grime

B[illegible]TIFUL hands may be divided [illegible] two classes—first, beautiful-[illegible]aped hands, and secondly, [illegible] whose beauty lies chiefly [illegible] soft and white, with well-[illegible] nails. The first—a beautifully [illegible]ed—is a gift of the gods, and [illegible] it a charm which cannot [illegible]. The second however—[illegible] hands with well-kept nails [illegible] the reach of any woman [illegible] devote from ten to fifteen [illegible] to the care of her hands. [illegible] hands are so continuously [illegible] it is important that they [illegible]ly groomed as the face or [illegible] few women appreciate this [illegible] matter how shapely a wom-[illegible] may be, it is not really beau-[illegible] the nails are perfectly kept. [illegible] of you who are housekeepers [illegible] in any manual trade, have [illegible] before you in the care of [illegible] which a little time, a little [illegible] and a little common sense will [illegible] you are too prone to sigh [illegible] and declare that beautiful [illegible] only for the woman with [illegible]. As a matter of fact, a noted [illegible] has said that two parts [illegible] and one part care is an ex-[illegible]mula for pretty hands.

[illegible] first place, there are a few [illegible] which should be observed concerning the nails. Never cut the cuticle away with a sharp knife; this is bound to leave ragged edges and cause hang-nails. Don't file the corners too deep; this tends to cause ugly growths of skin over the edges. Don't use a sharp instrument of any sort under the nail when cleaning it; it is too liable to bruise it and cause those ugly white scars.

Of course the first positive rule in any matter of personal hygiene is "keep clean." If the nails and finger-tips are stained with dust, grease, ink, or any fruit or vegetable acid, the simplest remedy is warm water and pure soap. If the stain is really severe, the best way to get the soap under the nails is by rubbing them directly over the cake, as illustrated. After the soap is well packed under and around the nails, scrub them gently with a nail brush and warm, never hot water. When all the soap has been removed in this way, it will be found that the majority of the dirt and stain has been removed with it.

After such treatment, the nails may tend to become dry and brittle, particularly if strong soap is used. It is wise, in such a case, to oil the nails with vaseline or olive oil. Remove the grease with a soft cloth, remembering always to push the cuticle back toward the base of the nail. A judicious use of a file on rough or broken edges, the application of some good nail powder or paste, a light polish with a buffer, and the nails will look as well, and in many cases better than they did before.

The woman whose work requires that her hands be in and out of water, either hot or cold, will soon find that without care, her hands will become sadly rough, red and coarsened. This state may be prevented as well as cured, by the timely application of cold cream, or any greasy substance which at the same time is a skin food. The practice of applying the cold cream at night and sleeping in gloves is a favorite one with women who wish to improve the condition of their hands. This is not necessary, however, except in extreme cases. Indeed, one housekeeper has found that a bottle of castor oil kept on her sink and used after every dishwashing before she dried her hands, kept her hands very soft and white.

In the morning, after an application of cold cream the night before, the hands should be washed in soft warm water in which a little oatmeal has been soaked over night.

If the hands are badly stained with grime or grease, an application of cold cream before washing will prove invaluable for removing the dirt from the tiny cracks and pores in the skin.

Any stain on the skin or nails will be removed by rubbing with a slice of lemon sprinkled with salt. This remedy will be especially valuable to the woman whose hands are stained from housework. And if the stain is far under the nail and apparently inaccessible, thrusting the entire end of the finger into half a lemon will remove the discoloration immediately. A tomato will have a similar effect.

Continued use of the same muscles, as in all kinds of factory work, needle work, typewriting, and most kinds of housework, tends to enlarge the knuckles and give the hands that undesirable knotty appearance. Massage is the very best remedy for this difficulty. The massage need not be attended by any special ceremony, but is very successfully done while the hands are being dried. The fingers should be thoroly dried, always with a motion away from the hand toward the finger tips. After all the moisture is removed, the hands should be rubbed together, drawing out the fingers, first of one hand and then of the other, rubbing and limbering up the stiffened and tired joints.

So many women complain of red, swollen, unsightly hands, and these complaints do not by any means come exclusively from those who work with their hands. Moist, reddened hands with enlarged veins are generally a sign of debility and a run-down system. Oftentimes the reddened condition is due to improper circulation, for which too tight gloves is the cause frequently assigned. But the evil is often due to a much more superficial cause, and may be largely removed by occasionally raising the hands over the head. This forces the blood down from the hands and leaves them cold and colorless.

Beauty of form is always an enviable gift, but one enjoyed only by a favored few. The next best thing to being beautifully formed is being beautifully kept, and oftentimes the latter achieves results which approach or surpass the pleasing effect of the former.

One Way to Become Self Confident

"WELL-GROOMED" IS THE MOST FLATTERING ADJECTIVE THAT CAN BE APPLIED TO A WOMAN. IT DOES NOT NECESSARILY INDICATE THAT SHE IS BEAUTIFUL—BEAUTY IS AN ACCIDENT OF BIRTH. BUT IT DOES INDICATE THAT SHE POSSESSES ENOUGH INNATE SELF-RESPECT TO PRESERVE AND MAKE THE MOST OF THE SHARE OF HEALTH AND BEAUTY WITH WHICH NATURE HAS ENDOWED HER, AND THAT THE RESULT SHE HAS ATTAINED HAS WARRANTED HER CONFIDENCE IN HERSELF.

Cultivate Art of Appreciation

MOST of us are sufficiently modest to admit that we cannot write a great book or a great poem, paint a masterpiece, produce [illegible] music, plan a beautiful building or model a great piece of sculpture. [illegible] majority of the aforesaid "most of us" will not even claim that we can [illegible] to appreciate the full beauty and [illegible]ance of these works of art. But, [illegible] of our limitations, we can all [illegible] some measure and degree cultivate [the] gentle art of appreciation of the [every]day events and courtesies of life. [The] first thing to learn in mastering the rudiments of this very elementary art is tolerance—tolerance of the feelings and beliefs and convictions of other people. This is the first step toward appreciating the point of view of the other fellow. And no matter how perverted and absurd it may seem upon first consideration, there is always something valuable to be learned by sighting things from a new angle. It broadens one's horizon, it deepens one's convictions, and it heightens one's appreciation for the things that are genuine.

But toleration must be carried far beyond such matters as opinion and convictions; it doesn't do much good unless it is applied to the little individual oddities and idiosyncrasies of other people. Sometimes these last appear only humorous; more often they prove positively irritating. But it should be constantly kept in mind that everyone is entitled to a few of their own little personal peculiarities and that "everyone is queer but thee and me, and sometimes I think thee's a little queer," and "thee" probably often thinks, and justly, that you are really the "queer" one.

Too often, in a purely business way, we fail to appreciate the conveniences and courtesy shown us, and abuse, rather than use, our privileges. Too often we fail to remember that most people are really doing their work to the very best of their ability, and if the results are not perfection, or exactly to our liking, the difficulties under which the task is being performed are worthy of consideration.

Women particularly are at fault in a failure to appreciate the value of time. Time is not only valuable, but invaluable to many people, and the woman who detains another woman, who she is fully aware to be far busier than she—when she detains such a woman at the telephone talking of trivial or non-essential matters, she is not only proving herself a monumental bore, but a person sadly lacking in appreciation of the value of another's time and work. The woman who keeps a maid and makes a practice of calling on her less fortunate, busier neighbors between five and six in the afternoon, belongs to the same species as the telephone bore.

People who call up public places of business to ask foolish questions in which they have no further interest except in so far as this particular form of amusement entertains them, are not only wasting their own time and the company's, but are abusing the "unlimited" courtesy which the telephone system offers.

So you see, appreciation is an art in which one has only learned the barest rudiments when one has learned to say "thank you" on receipt of a gift or personal service from a friend or member of the family. Appreciation is an art which no amount of money can cultivate or patronize. Fortunately, it is an art which one need not spend long years of apprenticeship in learning, and one than which there is no single greater factor for making the world a pleasanter place.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Regarding the Announcement

My dear Mrs. Adams:

Will you kindly tell me how soon announcements should be sent out, and how they should be worded? Also, are separate announcements used to make known the date of the wedding? It is to be a very quiet wedding sometime in the fall.

K. E.

Usually the announcement is not made until at least the approximate date of the wedding has been fixed. The customary way of announcing an engagement is thru the newspapers. It may read as follows: "Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson announce the engagement of their daughter Helen to Mr. Howard Worthington. No date for the wedding has as yet been fixed, but it will probably take place in September." Regarding the date of the wedding no other announcements are necessary except those sent out after the ceremony has taken place.

To Virginia

If Eleanore does not take you at your word, refuses to accept your peace overtures, she proves herself lacking in two of the fundamental qualities necessary to true friendship—trust and the ability to forget. It would be wiser and more profitable to your own happiness for you to leave matters as they stand. Perhaps you have been a bit too forbearing. Silence on your part may bring her to a realization of the true state of affairs.

Does Not Correspond

My dear Mrs. Adams:

I am a girl of 16. I am friends with a boy two years older than myself. He tells me that he sees no pleasure in corresponding. I can't see why he does not. When he spent his vacation, he was gone about a week or ten days, but he did not send even a card. Now he has been very attentive in many other ways. Would you advise me to discontinue the friendship on account of his negligence in writing? When I go away on a visit should I write to him or send him a card?

BROWN EYES.

Perhaps the young man, like a great many other young people, finds writing irksome. On that account it would be wiser for you to overlook his negligence in this respect. Since he proved himself attentive in other ways, I see no good reason for your discontinuing the friendship. It would be very thoughtful of you to remember the boy with a card when you are away.

Does He Still Care?

My dear Mrs. Adams:

Thru my father's business I became acquainted with a young man who showed me some attention. About eight months after I met him he left the city. Now, he complains of having written to me and receiving no replies to his letters. Since I have not received any of the letters, I hardly know how to meet the man when he comes back to the city, which he will do in a short while. How shall I know if he still thinks of me? What shall I say to him on meeting him again?

ITALIANA.

The only thing for you to do is to give the young man a cordial welcome when he calls and explain to him that you have not received his letters. His attitude toward you will be sufficient indication of whether or not he still cares.

Rather Strange Conduct

My dear Mrs. Adams:

I am a young girl of 18 and I am going with a young man of 26. With the exception of one respect his conduct is above reproach. He is forever fearful of being seen in the company of a girl lest the news come to his family. On that account, it is not unusual for him to walk just in front of me or behind me when we are out walking and he spies a friend of his or of the family. It embarrasses me very much. If I refuse to go out with him or accept the invitation of another young man he becomes very much offended. One of his former girl friends has the same complaint to make. Please give me your best advice. I like the young man very much, but this failing of his makes me dislike being in his company.

A CONSTANT READER.

Perhaps if you have a straightforward little talk with the young man it may effect good results. Tell him that you find his conduct embarrassing, and that if he hasn't any more regard for you than to subject you to such needless embarrassment, the friendship had better end.

Their Conscience Warns Them

My dear Mrs. Adams:

We are two girl chums of 18 years. There are two young men who are brothers who are in love with us. Our conscience tells us they are spending too much money on expensive gifts for us. How can we prevent it? How can we explain?

Some time ago, against our mothers' wishes, we peroxided our hair. It is now very streaked and ugly. Do give us advice, if possible. Thanking you in advance for the advice you may give.

M. L. AND V. E.

No girl, unless she is engaged to a man, should receive expensive gifts from him. I gather from your letter that you are not engaged to the young men you mention. In that case, you should have prevented the difficulty, instead of letting it go so far that a remedy is necessary. The only way you can prevent the young men from making you expensive gifts in future, is to decline them when they are proffered. This may easily be done without hurting the young men's feelings, by explaining tactfully that you prefer not to receive anything of more lasting value than flowers or candy from men friends.

I regret that it is not within the scope of my department to give you advice on the other matter you mention.

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

REPLIES to letters to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

For Falling Hair

My dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please recommend something for falling hair? My hair comes out in long strands. Even when there are no tangles, the comb is just full of hair. Also, my hair is quite oily. Please accept my thanks in advance for any information that you may give me.

I. G. T.

You will do well to look first to your general health before attempting any local treatment. The condition may be due to nervousness or a rundown system. Eat simple, nourishing food, drink plenty of water, sleep nine hours out of the twenty-four and, above all things, take outdoor exercise. A two-hour walk taken rain or shine will work wonders if persevered in. See to it that the hair gets plenty of air and sunlight. Below I am printing a tonic, also a lotion for oily hair, both of which ought to help you somewhat.

Falling of the Hair

Tincture of nux vomica	[illegible] ounce
Spirits of rosemary	[illegible] ounces
Alcohol	[illegible] ounces

Apply several times a week to the roots of the hair.

Formula for Oily Hair

Alcohol	[illegible] ounces
Witch hazel	[illegible] ounces
Resorcin	[illegible] grains

Use daily, rubbing well into the scalp.

To Soften and Whiten the Hands

My dear Mrs. Symes:

I am obliged to do all of my own housework, and my hands look it. They are red, rough and generally coarse in appearance. I would like your advice on the care and treatment of the hands.

Also, what do you recommend for a scrawny neck? I would do anything to acquire a nice rounded neck. Perhaps you may be able to help me. Thanking you in advance for whatever advice you may give me, I am,

Mrs. H. L.

Wearing rubber gloves while doing housework is a wonderful preventive measure against unsightly hands. And wearing cosmetic gloves at night is almost a positive assurance of having presentable hands. Below I am printing the formula for preparing the paste.

I am printing also suggestions for fattening the neck.

To Make Cosmetic Gloves

Use soft, large leather gloves, three or four sizes too large. Rip them open and spread the inside with the following preparation, then sew the ripped seams up:

Cosmetic Glove Paste

Ground barley, the white of an egg, a teaspoonful of glycerin and 1 ounce of honey.

To Fatten the Neck

Bend the head slowly forward until the chin touches the neck, and then slowly raise the head to its normal position. Repeat these movements until you are tired. Then bend the head as far backward as possible. Sitting erect in a chair, bend the head from one side to the other, and then roll the head to the right, left and forward. Another good position is to let the arms hang loosely at the side. Raise the shoulders as high as possible, then forward, down and backward, until a circle is formed. Continue this for a time and then reverse the motion. Do this every day for five or ten minutes.

Again, stand perfectly erect with the arms at the sides, lift them up vertically, inflating the lungs as the arms ascend. At the same time rise up on the tips of your toes and throw your head back, at the same time touching the backs of the hands overhead. As the arms slowly descend exhale from the lungs.

It is also well to massage the neck and shoulders well with cocoa butter.

For a Red Nose

My dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please print something that is good for a red nose?

HARRY.

The condition is probably due to indigestion or poor circulation. Abstain from sweet pastries and hot, highly seasoned foods. Take plenty of outdoor exercise. Below I am printing a formula which will help somewhat.

Lotion for Red Nose

Powdered calamine	1 dram
Zinc oxide	20 grains
Glycerin	½ dram
Cherry laurel water	4 ounces

This lotion should be well shaken before it is mopped on the nose. It may be used both morning and evening.

Shadows Under the Eyes

My dear Mrs. Symes:

I am [illegible] years old and am quite gray. Would you advise me to use any preparation to restore the natural color? If so, what would you suggest?

Is vaseline and olive oil beneficial to the scalp? Does it keep the hair brown?

Also, please tell me what will fill in hollow circles under the eyes?

A. J. B.

Sage tea is sometimes effectual in bringing the hair back to normal. But a stain gives quicker results. I am printing formulas for both.

Since premature graying is usually ascribed to lack of sufficient oil in the roots of the hair, rubbing coarse vaseline or olive oil into the scalp is advised. It does help in some cases.

Below I am printing suggestions for treating shadows under the eyes.

Sage Tea

Alcohol	2 ounces
Green tea	2 ounces
Garden sage	2 ounces

To make the liquid, take 1 ounce of tea to 4 ounces of water; 1 ounce of sage to 4 ounces of water.

Let each stand for several hours, then strain and take 2 ounces of the liquid of each, and mix with 2 ounces of alcohol. Keep the mixture tightly corked, to prevent evaporation.

Brown Hair Stain

Green walnut shells	2 ounces
Alum	¼ ounce
Pure oil	4 ounces

Heat together in a water bath until the water has been completely evaporated. Then compress, filter and perfume.

Sage tea may be used to darken the hair. Make a strong brew of dried leaves, strain the liquid carefully thru muslin, and to each pint add two teaspoonfuls of alcohol. This should be rubbed on the hair every night before retiring.

Shadows Under the Eyes

There is always some internal cause for the black circles under the eyes. The tendency is sometimes hereditary, but dark lines are usually due to some congestion of the veins of the part and are rarely, if ever, found excepting under one or more of the following circumstances: When the subject is anemic and there is an impairment of the chemical constitution of the blood; or when the system is being drained, as it would be in prolonged study, lack of sleep, or dissipation of any description. The external treatment is sometimes effective temporarily, but cannot be permanent while the cause exists.

LOCAL TREATMENT

Boric acid	1 ounce
Boiling water	1 pint

Put boric acid in a basin. Pour water in and allow the boric acid to dissolve before boiling.

A Slight Trouble

My dear Mrs. Symes:

I am a young girl, just 15. I have a wide nose; it is not very noticeable. Kindly tell me some way to make it more regular, as I am a little sensitive about it.

Also, I have four large blackheads on my cheek, they are very annoying. What is the cause of blackheads and pimples? Kindly tell me how I can rid myself of them permanently.

DISCOURAGED.

If the shape of your nose is not noticeable I can see no reason why you want to remedy it. However, you might try massaging the nose from the bridge downward, using a firm, yet gentle pressure; it is sometimes effectual.

Apply hot cloths to the face to open the pores, then cover the balls of the fingers with a bit of clean muslin and press the blackheads out. Then dash cold water on the face, or better still, rub with a bit of ice to contract the pores.

Blackheads and pimples are caused by indigestion or constipation generally. It is advisable that you eat only simple, nourishing foods, drink plenty of water, abstain from sweets, pastries and indigestibles; sleep nine or ten hours out of the twenty-four, and exercise two hours daily in the open.

Below I am printing a lotion for blackheads and a cream for pimples which you might try.

Blackheads of the Skin

Boracic acid	2 drams
Alcohol	2 ounces
Rosewater	4 ounces

Use with friction twice a day on the skin affected.

Cream for Pimples

Salicylic acid	10 grains
Calomel	1 dram
Lard	1 ounce

Treating a Nasty Habit

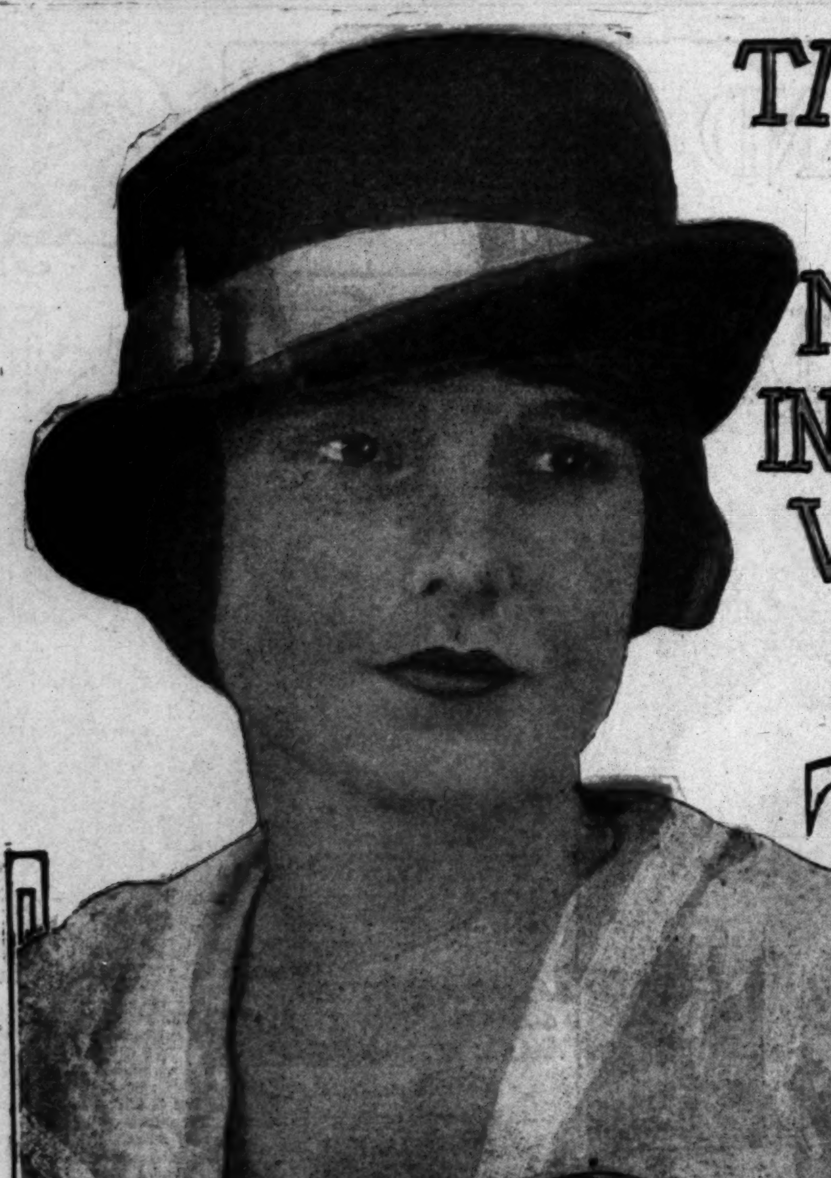
My dear Mrs. Symes:

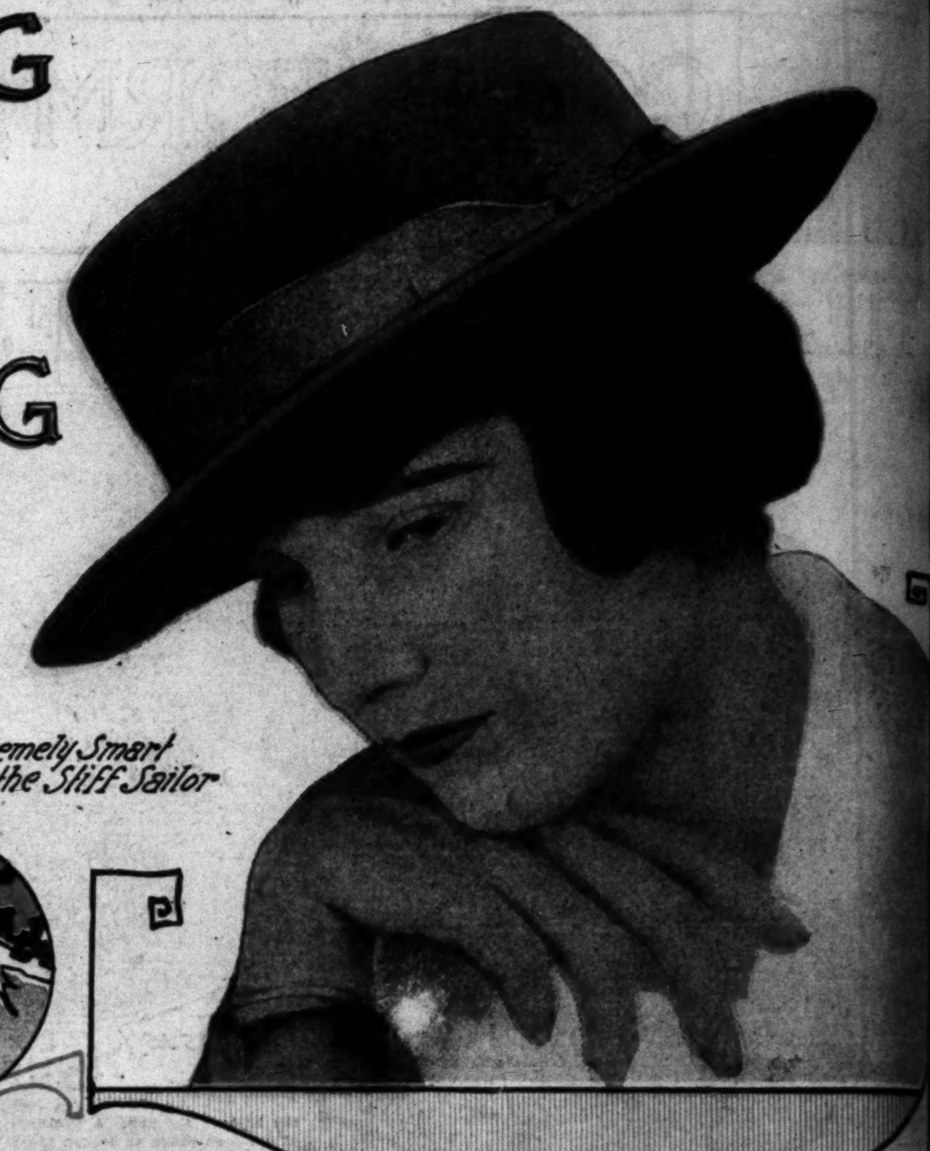
I am a constant reader of your columns. Do you know of anything that will cure me of nailbiting? I am a good piano player, but my nails are spoiling my fingers. I have tried everything, but without success. I shall be grateful for your advice.

POLLY.

If will power alone won't effect a cure, or at least an improvement, then rubbing the finger nails with bitter aloes ought to help. Wearing glove tips on the tempting fingers is another great help. Keep your mind off your fingers.

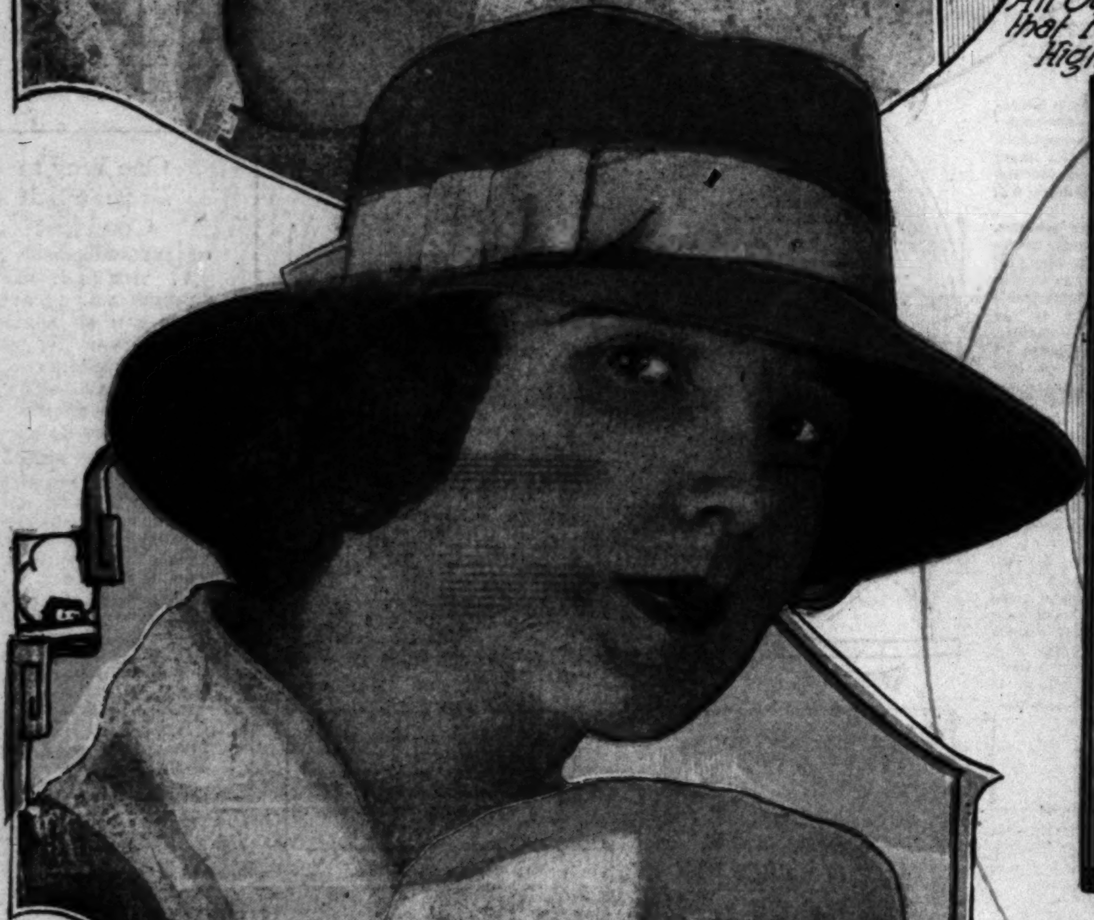
THE OUTING HAT MANIFESTS INTERESTING VARIETY



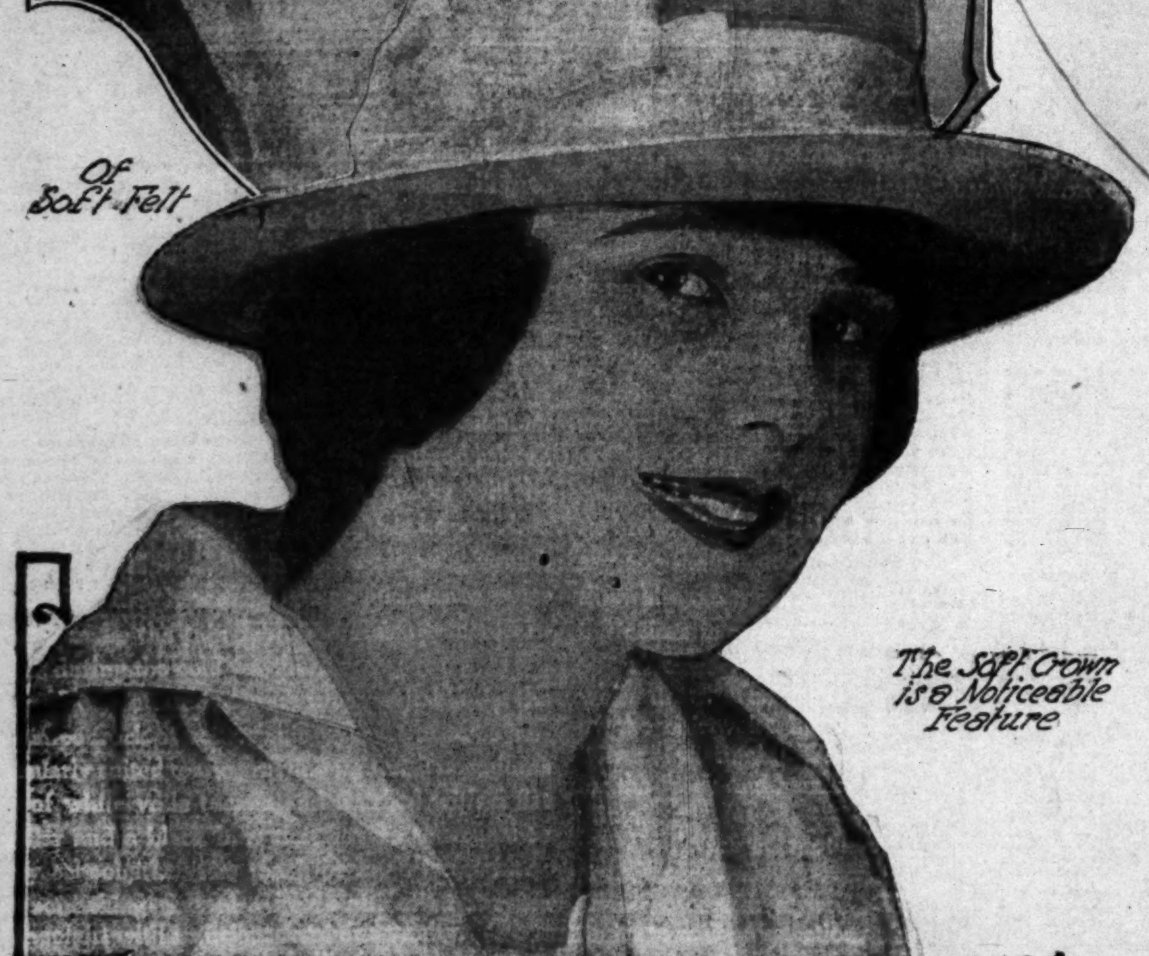


Extremely Smart is the Stiff Sailor

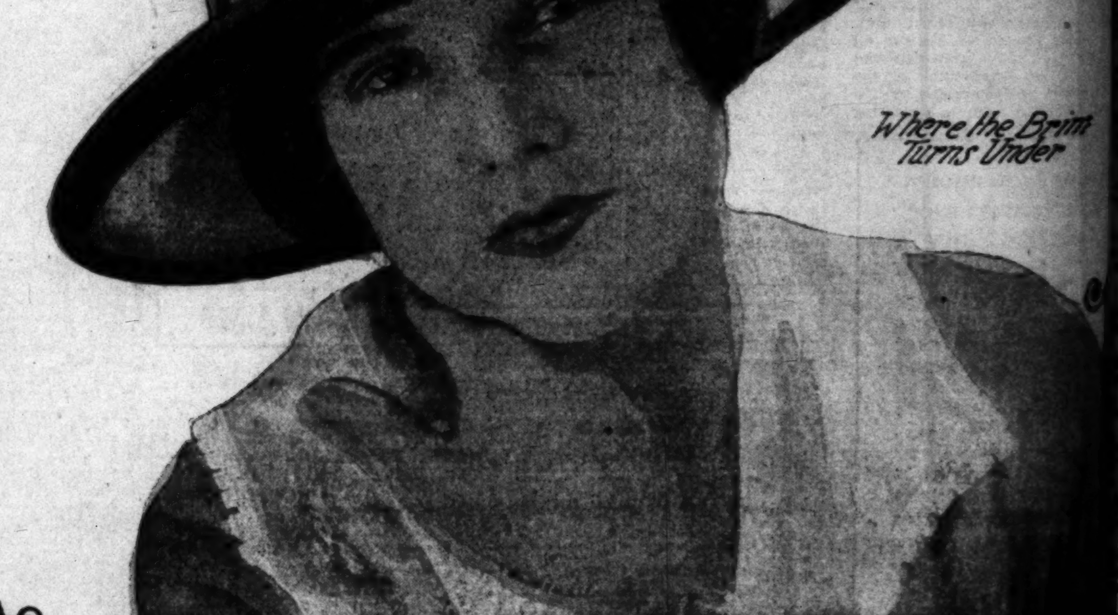
An Outing Hat that Favors the High Crown



Of Soft Felt



The Soft Crown is a Noticeable Feature



Where the Brim Turns Under

RELIEF from the humidity of August days brings with it a stronger conviction that one is no longer smartly dressed for sports and outing in the light straw or fiber hat which has done service through the hot months. For in the fall every one's fancy turns rather seriously to thought of hats, the subject under consideration being weightier than that of the foregoing season. A safe choice for the carefully dressed woman to make at this time is a hat in some variation of the sailor shape developed in soft felt or velour.

Very smart is the dark blue velour sailor with a fairly broad brim turning down abruptly at the edge. It has a plain white tailored band and a white silk lining. The turned-down brim, which gives the hat a very piquant lamp shade effect, is particularly becoming when worn perfectly straight on the head well down over the eyebrows.

The soft crown combined with the stiff rolling brim is a noticeable feature of the new fall outing hats. This one, in old gold velour with a white ribbon band tied thru a covered ring, is very fetching.

The stiff, strictly tailored shape in bottle green velour is very good style. With a small open mesh veil it is excellent style worn with a dark green walking costume finished with a white collar. A tailored band of grosgrain champagne-colored ribbon adds a distinctive touch of color. The severe lines of this hat will appeal particularly to the woman who prides herself on having a strictly "tailor made" personality.

As long as the outing hat bears some relation in shape to the sailor, it matters not whether the lines be stright or rolling. This feature has admitted of a remarkable degree of leniency in the matter of crown heights and brim widths. This particular outing hat in dahlia purple with a white band is an exponent of the high crown, closely rolling brim type. It fits well to the contour of the head, and the slight flare away from the front makes it equally becoming viewed from either side.

The popularity which the scoop shape has enjoyed during the last season, particularly among the younger set, seems destined to be revived in the fall and winter models. The model illustrated is developed in soft leaf brown felt with a yellow band. Shape and tones are found becoming to youthful contours and coloring when worn with a dark street dress relieved by a broad white collar.
